Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, July 8.—Conspicuous among the communications which poured in today for Governor James M. Cox, the Democratic nominee, was a telegram from Richmond P. Hobson, urging that he make clear at once his attitude on the prohibition enforcement law. The Hobson message read:

"Dry forces are restive. Republicans amongst them are applying to Harding for strong statement. Do not let these forces have cause to crystallize the highest Republican candidates. Democratic convention declared nearly two to one against plank favoring even home manufacture of mildest alcoholic beverages. Ninety-five per cent. of population of America live in States that have ratified Eighteenth Amendment without reservation. They are jealous of its integrity. Supreme Court in unanimous decision warned Congress against authorizing increase in alcoholic content. National officers of Anti-Saloon League here have asked me to get statement from you. They cite that Harding voted for Volstead act. Could you give me clear statement of your being opposed to Federal authorization of increasing alcoholic content? This would save to Democracy millions of voters who hold this question above party success."

Governor Cox said that he would reply to Hobson "in due course of time."

The Governor also received the message from Senator Reed congratulating him on his nomination, and seemed greatly pleased with it.

The Governor was behind his usual schedule when he got down town to The Dayton News office this morning. He found that his staff had gathered together a great heap of letters and telegrams, and he immediately went to work answering them.

Reading aloud a message now and then, maybe from some constituent in a remote corner of Ohio or a "good luck" from some better-known Democrat, the Democratic standard bearer had cut down his heap of correspondence considerably when noon came around. Among the messages which he read was one from Fred J. Brumi, Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of Ohio, wishing, in "the name of 130,000 members of the order in Ohio, every success"; also, good wishes came from Senator Owen, Senator Gore, Secretary Meredith and cables from Ambassador Wallace at Paris and Perry Belmont in London.

Governor Slips Away.

At noon the Governor rose from his desk, and after a glance out at the sunshine said that perhaps the correspondent had better come around later in the day for a conference, because he thought we would skip along and get a bite to eat.

Unconscious that anything was in the wind, the newspaper men filed out and Governor Cox started out for a bite to eat—started out, it developed later, for a pasture back of his birthplace in Jacksonburg, thirty miles south of here, to—but here is the way it happened.

Promptly at the time suggested the thirty or more newspapermen appeared at the Governor's headquarters and asked to see him. They were told that he had not returned and there seemed to be an idea that he might not return that afternoon. Then along came a reporter and he happened to let drop that he had seen the Governor's car entering along the road leading to Jacksonburg.

Into cars piled the correspondents and down the road toward Jacksonburg they went. At Middletown a grocer, sleeping in the sun, "calculated" that maybe he had seen the Governor's car going through, but was not quite sure. Fifteen miles over the rocky roads and into the string of far-spaced farms called Jacksonburg, past the small school house where Cox, at 10 years of age, persuaded the Supervisor of Schools to give him a chance, and past the small Brick United Brethren Church, where a little older "Jimmy" Cox rang the bells and did the other duties of a sexton.

Then on a bit of an incline the correspondents came to the Cox homestead. Made of brick kilned and laid by the Governor's grandfather, a wee sort of a building now, but restored and made over by additions into a two-story Colonial type of a gentleman farmer's home. It was flanked by a tremendous barn, a high, long building, and back of it—but nobody looked back of it just then.

Instead the newspapermen dashed into the house—through the old-fashioned rooms, one of them with a sofa once owned by Thomas Jefferson and another with a table once the property of General Sherman—through a maze of four-posted bedrooms, and landed on the pillared porch with the mystery of a

$25,000 Is Bet in Wall Street On Harding to $10,000 on Cox

Wall Street's first large bet on the Presidential election was received yesterday, $25,000 to $10,000 being placed that Harding would win, a prominent Stock Exchange house taking the short end. This is on the basis of 2½ to 1, whereas, the odds quoted by some of the betting commissioners are not better than 2 to 1.

James W. Ball & Co., while quoting 2 to 1 against Cox, reported there was little Cox money in sight, those who wish to wager on the Democratic nominee preferring to wait for longer odds.

Fred Schumm placed $1,000 against $1,200 that Cox would carry Ohio and $900 to $1,000 that he would carry New York State. There was one bet of $500 at even money that Cox would carry New Jersey and a wager of $500 to $700 was placed that Harding would carry New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

Burglar and Companion Escape in Swift Car—Merchant and Daughter Follow for 5 Miles.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 8.—When she was leaving the dining room in the Summer home of her father, Manuel Lopez, in Rumson, about seven miles from here, after luncheon this afternoon, Mrs. Randall Keator was startled to see a strange man running down the stairs from the second floor.

Instead of obeying her request to tell who he was and what he was doing there, the man accelerated his pace, dashing past her, out of the door and down the walk to the curb, where a small roadster with motor running and containing another man was waiting.

Heedless of possible danger, and not knowing at that moment that the first man had in his pockets uninsured jewelry of hers valued at more than $10,000, Mrs. Keator ran after him. Her father, who is head of the firm of M. Lopez & Co., 106 Water Street, Manhattan, tobacco merchants, admitted tonight that his daughter had done a plucky thing, although he asserted that she had no clear intention of grabbing the thief.

"She just wanted to stop him and find out who he was and what he had been doing," Mr. Lopez explained.

Meanwhile the cries of Mrs. Keator and the rush of feet in the hallway had alarmed Mr. Lopez and others of the family. Some ran upstairs and reported immediately the loss of Mrs. Keator's jewelry. Others hurried outside in time to see the thief jump into the roadster, which sped away.

Mr. Lopez ran to his garage and brought out his eight cylinder touring car. Mrs. Keator and other members of the family climbed in, just as they lost sight of the swiftly moving quarry about half a mile distant on the Ridge Road. Mr. Lopez fed his eight cylinders all the gas they could take and began a dashing pursuit that lasted for five or six miles and ended in the Rumson Road, when all were convinced that the trail was hopelessly lost.

Speeding back, Mr. Lopez notified the police, and an alarm was sent broadcast. Mr. Lopez said that the most highly prized articles taken were a diamond engagement ring valued at $3,000, a diamond bracelet, a sapphire ring and two pearl necklaces. He said he did not care to place a value on these articles last night. Other trinkets also were taken.

Local opinion is that the robbery was the work of professional thieves, who may be "working" Summer resorts, depending upon a swift automobile as a means of getting away.

WILSON TO CALL LEAGUE.

Accepts Invitation to Summon Assembly to Meet in November.

LONDON, July 8.—President Wilson has accepted the invitation of the League of Nations to call a meeting of the Assembly of the League early in November, it was announced in the House of Commons today by Cecil B. Harmsworth, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—It is expected that President Wilson will within a few days issue the formal call for the meeting of the League Assembly for November, in accordance with the terms of the League Covenant which requires that a meeting must be called by the President of the United States. The United States, however, will not be able to participate in this meeting any more than it can in the sessions of the League Council, because the United States is not a member of the League. In the absence of ratification of the treaty by the American Senate, the United States must continue to remain outside the League.

The League Council, which is the smaller of the two operating bodies of the League created by the Treaty Covenant, will begin formal sessions tomorrow and will devote its attention first to the controversy between Sweden and Finland over the Aland Islands. It was learned today that the United States Government has conveyed to Sweden and Finland the sincere hope that they would settle their differences amicably. Should the controversy over the Alands continue, however, it is probable that the League Council will refer it to the League Assembly for consideration.

The Assembly will start its official work at the very time that the American Presidential election is being held, in which the voters will register their approval or disapproval of the League project.

OHIO STATE ISSUES UP

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, July 8.—Today is the twenty-ninth wedding anniversary of Senator and Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

In honor of the day a large flag has been flying over the Hardings' front porch and another flag was displayed over the door of the Senator's campaign headquarters in the house of his secretary, George Christian, Jr., next door.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, and T. Coleman du Pont are expected here tomorrow to be with Senator Harding over the week end.

"I invited Mr. Hays to remain over Sunday so that he could hear my preacher," said Mr. Harding. The Hardings attend the Marion First Baptist Church, while Mr. Hays is an Elder in the Sullivan, Ind., Presbyterian Church, where he is the leader of a large Bible class.

With Mr. Hays, Senator Harding said, he expected will be a number of the committee on arrangements for the notification ceremonies July 22. Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, wired Senator Harding today that he would arrive in Marion Saturday night for a few days.

Walter F. Brown, of Toledo, who was one of the active leaders in the Progressive campaign of 1912, came to Marion today to tell Senator Harding that all the old Roosevelt leaders would support him. Mr. Brown told the Senator of the dinner held in the Harvard Club in New York City on Thursday of last week, at which the old followers of Roosevelt pledged their support for the Republican platform and nominee.

Newton M. Miller of Columbus, campaign manager for former Governor Frank B. Willis, who is now candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, held a short conference with Senator Harding this morning.

"The nomination of Governor Cox was a disappointment to Governor Willis, who expected him as an opponent this Fall as a candidate for United States Senator," Mr. Miller said. "Notwithstanding the results of the 1916-18 contests, Willis was anxious for another test of strength.

"Now, with Cox heading the Democratic ticket, there is already evidence that the rural vote especially will be arrayed against him. In 1914 Cox was defeated by the rural vote, and in 1916 and 1918 the farmer vote was registered against him equally strong."

Urges Harding to Tour Country.

Emmet Reilly of Kansas City, Mo., who was Senator Harding's Western pre-convention campaign manager, urged the Republican nominee to abandon his front porch campaign and show himself to the voters of the country.

"Republicans who have seen and heard Senator Harding," he said, "knew his campaigning ability. They want to have him deliver campaign speeches all over the country and give people an opportunity to hear him. We want him to make a speaking tour and reach more people than the delegations expected in Marion this Summer.

Asked whether the Democratic Party would be united in Missouri this Fall, Mr. Reilly said that the nomination of Cox had strengthened the Democrats in that State by providing a candidate that both Administration adherents and followers of Senator Reed, who was denied his seat as a delegate at San Francisco, could support. Senator Reed, he predicted, would conduct a strong campaign in Missouri for Cox.

Senator Harding received word today that for the first time in the history of Crawford County, Ohio, a picture of a Republican candidate for President hangs in the windows of the county court house. Crawford is one of the most overwhelmingly Democratic counties in the State, but in the last election a Republican, Judge J. Walter Wright, was elected and Harding pictures appear in the windows of the Judge and of his court reporter.

Although Senator Harding held conferences today with two Ohio political leaders, it was said that no reference was made to the coming campaign in this State.

Interest in Ohio State Campaign.

The Harding headquarters apparently have not neglected to keep in touch with the Ohio situation. One of the assistants to Senator Harding's secretary, George Christian, Jr., is Charles Hard, until recently Secretary of the Ohio State Republican Committee, who has been active in the affairs of the Republican Party in the State for more than thirty years.

"While Governor Cox has been elected Governor three times over Republican candidates," said Mr. Hard, "and therefore has been thought by some capable of carrying Ohio this year, a story of these three campaigns shows that WESTERVILLE, Ohio, July 8.—The attitude of the Anti-Saloon League of America in the coming campaign will be decided in Columbus on July 22 at a meeting of the organization's Executive Committee, according to announcement made here today.

The league has not yet issued any statement with reference to its attitude toward the candidacies of Governor Cox and Senator Harding, according to Dr. Howard H. Russell, founder and associate general superintendent of the league.

SEEK MISSING BANKER LAST SEEN IN A DORY

DISAPPEARANCE UNNOTICED

Family, on Fisher's Island, Thought Business Detained Him—Report Affairs in Order.

Relatives of James R. Blake, a member of the banking firm of Abbott, Hoppin & Co. of 120 Broadway, notified the police yesterday that Mr. Blake had been missing since Friday, a week ago, when he set out in a small dory along the mouth of Westchester Creek in the Bronx in search of a mechanic to install a motor in the boat.

Mr. Blake's disappearance was not discovered until Tuesday, when Mrs. Blake, who, with her son, Judson, a Princeton student, was at Fisher's Island, tried to get into communication with Mr. Blake to learn why he had not joined them over the Fourth of July, as he had planned. Believing that he had been detained by business, Mrs. Blake had not been alarmed when her husband did not arrive.

When Mrs. Blake communicated with Mr. Blake's office on Tuesday, she learned that he had left the office Friday afternoon in the expectation of going to Fisher's Island that night or the next day. Gordon Abbott, senior member of the firm with which Mr. Blake was associated, is Mrs. Blake's brother. He was out of town on Tuesday and it was not until his return on Wednesday that it was learned that the missing banker had gone to Clason Point, The Bronx, to see about fitting up the boat, which he had just bought.

A visit to the Clason Point section showed that Mr. Blake, as he had told his brother-in-law, had gone to the Dawn Boat and Shipping Corporation and there sought a workman to install the motor. When he was told that they could not do the work, he announced his intention of going along the waterfront to visit other ship carpentry firms. He was last seen rowing the dory out of the creek in the direction of Long Island Sound.

Search was started along the waterfront, but no information could be obtained concerning Mr. Blake. Private detectives were immediately employed and rewards were offered for any news of Mr. Blake or the boat. Yesterday Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey of 2 Rector Street, attorney for Mr. Blake, notified the police. The Morgue has been searched in vain.

Mr. Blake is 49 years old. He is 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighs about 175 pounds. He has a smooth face, brown eyes and gray hair, and is bald on the top of his head. When he left his office he wore a gray suit, a Panama hat and tan shoes, but employes of the Dawn Boat and Shipping Corporation said that they believed he was wearing corduroy trousers when he called at their plant.

Mr. Blake's associates said that his business affairs were in good order and that he was in excellent health. They said that there was no reason to believe that he had been the victim of robbers. As nearly as they could learn he was carrying only a small amount of money with him. Lieut. Col. Whittlesey said that Mr. Blake could swim and that he was experienced in handling boats.

The boat in which Mr. Blake set out, and for news of which his family has offered a reward, was a fourteen-foot dory skiff. It was painted white and red on the outside and grayish green in the inside. The motor, it is believed, was in the bottom of the boat. It was a three-horse power Koban motor.

Mr. Blake is a graduate of Princeton of the class of 1894. His home in this city is at the Madison Square Hotel.

Mrs. Effie Jacobs Says Woman Won't Give Up Her Husband.

Mrs. Effie Elizabeth Jacobs of 141 West Ninety-fourth Street has sued Miss May M. Croke of 127 Ashford Street, Brooklyn, in the Supreme Court for $100,000 for alienating the affections of Monte F. Jacobs, whom the plaintiff married in 1906. On the ground that Miss Croke said if she was sued she would dispose of all she owned, Mrs. Jacobs got an attachment against her property from Justice Donnelly.

Mrs. Jacobs alleges that Miss Croke is engaged to marry a wealthy man who gave her a house in West Eighty-eighth Street, $10,000 in jewelry and other property and that the defendant has been accepting attentions from Jacobs all the time. Mrs. Jacobs said she called on the defendant on May 23 and begged her to have nothing more to do with Jacobs.

"Tears were of no avail," declared Mrs. Jacobs. "She said she could no more give up my husband than one of her limbs or eyes."

Socialist Party Appeals to Soldiers to Resist the Russian Bolshevist Onslaught.

REDS CROSS THE BERESINA

WARSAW, July 8, (Associated Press).—Volunteers for immediate service against the advancing Russian Bolshevist forces are called for by the Polish National Council of Defence in a manifesto just issued. Besides calling able-bodied men to arms, the manifesto urges men unfit for active service to register in order to release office men for duty at the front. The document, which bears the signature of President Pilsudski, declares the struggle is a fight against Bolshevism rather than against Russia.

Another proclamation, addressed to the soldiers, says the decisive moment has arrived in which Poland's fate is to be decided. It assures the soldiers that in case they are wounded their income will be continued by the government, and that provision will be made by the Government for the families of those killed in battle.

Citizens having in their possession swords, rifles, pistols or ammunition are urged to turn them over to the government for use in the army.

Stirred by these appeals and realization of the critical position of the country volunteers for active service in the army are offering themselves from every side. They include school and university teachers, students, boy scouts, civil servants and ministerial employes whose occupations excuse them from military service. The students are enlisting in such numbers that the Warsaw universities have been closed.

Women Recruits Parade the Streets.

Hundreds of girls and women have taken initial steps to join the army. Yesterday uniformed women soldiers, with women officers, paraded the streets singing, and for the first time Warsaw saw detachments of female recruits under the guidance of women officers marching to the barracks.

Many of the recruits were strong girls in short skirts and shirtwaists, with braided hair hanging down their backs. The sight of female recruits aroused enthusiasm everywhere along the principal streets. Mixed with the recruits were women of from 25 to 30 years, who swung parasols, purses and market packages in arms which will soon carry rifles.

The women's battalions will be used chiefly for guard duty in garrisons and food depots and as train escorts, thus relieving men for the front lines.

Besides recruits in large numbers from all walks of life, including members of State organizations such as Departments of Education, Railways and Finances and the police forces, who have declared their intention to enlist, money for defensive purposes is pouring in from individuals, banks and various societies and organizations. One bank presented General Pilsudski, the head of the State, with 1,000,000 marks. Throughout Poland the numerous organizations of citizens are appealing to their members to aid the nation in every way possible against the present danger.

General Joseph Haller, who commanded the Polish-American forces in France, has been charged with the formation of the volunteer army.

The Socialist Party Central Committee today issued the following proclamation:

"When the Polish troops were advancing we demanded peace, but now we ought to defend ourselves firmly. We appeal to the soldiers to fulfill their duty in defense of the country against the invasion. The Government, however, ought to give guarantees that it desires peace, declare to the world that Poland desires a just peace and address to the Soviet Government proposals for peace negotiations."

Foe Crosses Beresina in Two Places.

Bolshevist troops, after several fruitless attempts, have succeeded in effecting a crossing of the Beresina in strong force near Navosielki, southeast of Borisov, about fifty miles northeast of Minsk, it was announced in today's Polish official communique. A smaller detachment forced the Beresina south of Beresina village, further to the southeast.

In their advance in Volhynia the Bolsheviki have reached the Klewan railroad junction northwest of Rovno. The Poles are withdrawing before the northwesterly drive of General Budenny's cavalry, in some places reaching the old Russo-German fighting line. The banks of the Styr and other rivers along this line are cobwebbed with barbed wire and the hillsides are zigzagged with trenches, while the various elevations are dotted with German-built steel and concrete pillboxes, and it is expected that the Poles will elect to make a stand along this defensive line.

Northwest of Rovno a train, to which was attached the private car of General Wiart, Chief of the British Military Mission, was shelled by Budenny's artillery.

ALLIES GIVE GERMANY SIX MONTHS MORE TO FULFILL THE TERMS OF DISARMAMENT; FINAL ANSWER MUST BE GIVEN TODAY

Allied Demand for Surrender of Arms As Given to German Delegates at Spa Conference

SPA, July 8 (Associated Press).—The final decision of the Allies on the disarmament of Germany sets forth:

First—Germany must immediately disarm certain of its forces, including the security police.

Second—Publish a proclamation asking for the immediate surrender of all weapons and firearms in the hands of the civilian population.

Third—Abolish immediately compulsory service.

NEW TERMS ARE IMPOSED

Must Disarm Certain Forces, Including Security Police, at Once.

ALSO ABOLISH CONSCRIPTION

SURPRISE AT ALLIED STEP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SPA, July 8 (By telephone to Paris and thence by cable).—The Allies today called on Germany to agree to fulfill the disarmament terms of the Versailles Treaty on condition that the Allies grant a further delay of six months. This official step formally condones the German violations of the treaty during the last six months.

Therefore the Spa conference now presents to the world the spectacle of the victorious Allies waiting to see whether the Germans will accept very considerably less onerous terms than the treaty imposed. If that does not represent a German diplomatic victory it is hard to imagine what to call it.

If the Germans do not yield they will have to face the anger of their late adversaries, but that has been the case during the last half year. However, the Allies insist that if the Germans do not deliver the goods this time they—the Allies—will occupy more German territory. This threat has already been hanging over German heads since the armistice.

The events of today represent such a backdown from the strong tone of Lloyd George's former speeches to the Germans that the spectators are forced to the conclusion that either there is something behind the scenes or that the whole business is mere child's play.

Unexpected by Germans.

I am informed on good authority that when the Germans received the allied note embodying the Boulogne decisions they came to the conclusion that it was idle to hope for much at Spa in the way of concessions regarding disarmament. I have already told how they tried to evade discussion of the subject, because they felt they were up against a brick wall. They failed, so they asked a delay of fifteen months. They were told that that was absurd and that they must submit a better proposal or take the consequences.

So they came at noon today to hear sentence. They were told to return at 3 o'clock. They came again and received six months' grace. Two days hence, on July 10th, Germany would have stood convicted of bald and flagrant violation of the Versailles treaty. Now they get an extra six months. No one in Spa doubts they will accept the offer—they accepted far worse terms a year ago.

At the present moment they are in communication with the party leaders on whose support their Government is based. Their worst stumbling block is a demand for the dissolution of the Sicherheitswehr. Acceptance of this condition may involve the overthrow of the Government whose position is not particularly strong.

On the other hand the Germans are understood to be very anxious to get to the discussion of the economic question, from which they hope to obtain definite advantage to remedy unemployment and concomitant evils. They are almost bound to agree, as it will be a distinct diplomatic victory for them.

The document, which was made public today, enjoins:

First, that the Germans dissolve the Sicherheitswehr and Einwohnerwehr.

Second, that concealed arms be given up, with severe penalties in case of further concealment.

Third, that a law be passed converting the Reichswehr into a small regular army, as provided by treaty.

Fourth, that all other military and aviation clauses be faithfully executed.

The Allies agreed to extend until January 1 the time for the reduction of effectives, but demand that the army shall not exceed 150,000 men on October 1. The Allies further agree to allow Germany to keep forces in the neutral zone and to do their utmost to prevent arms being smuggled in from the occupied area.

Consequences of Non-Compliance.

The document concludes with this "new" threat: "If at any time the Allied Commission of Control finds that Germany is evading the fulfillment of the bargain the Allies will proceed to further occupation of German territory, whether in the Ruhr or elsewhere, and will continue to occupy it until the terms are wholly complied with."

Taking into consideration the note sent to Germany after the Boulogne conference and the tone of Lloyd George's speeches here this is a startling backdown. At the beginning today Lloyd

FRIENDS CONFIRM PENDLETON STORY.

AUTO NOT IN MANHATTAN

District Attorney Swann, who issued a typewritten statement on Wednesday calling attention to the manner in which the account of W. H. Pendleton in connection with the Elwell case had been contradicted by other witnesses, issued another statement yesterday indicating that the contradictions were due to the mistakes of other witnesses.

Mr. Swann, who had been convinced on Wednesday that Mr. Pendleton's automobile was in Manhattan on the morning of June 11, was quite as positive yesterday that the car was where Mr. Pendleton said it was—in his garage at Cedarhurst.

Mr. Swann also said the new information refuted his assumption that Mr. Pendleton had been in Elwell's home at 1:45 o'clock on the morning of June 11, about seven hours before the tragedy occurred.

The District Attorney defended his discrepancy statement on the ground that the contradictions he revealed had impeded his investigation and that it was necessary to call attention to them in order to have them explained, so that the investigation of the crime could go ahead. He complained that the facts "seemed to shift" continually.

The evidence which convinced Mr. Swann that he was mistaken in assuming that Mr. Pendleton's car was in this city on the morning of the murder came from George P. Post, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Bird, Jr., who agreed with Mr. Pendleton in fixing the date of June 8 as the morning in which Mr. Pendleton's car was in this city. John Doyle, a garage employe, had said that the Pendleton car was at the Atlas Garage on the morning of June 11, and that he was able to fix the date because he had driven Mr. Post, Jr., and Mr. Bird, Jr., on that morning. These two men, however, gave positive testimony that the occurrence recollected by Doyle was on the morning of June 8.

Statements Issued by Swann.

"Nellson Olcott, the lawyer for Mr. Pendleton, says he expects you to issue a statement completely exonerating Mr. Pendleton," Mr. Swann was told.

"Well," he repned, "I am giving out this statement. I think it covers the matter."

He then handed out a typewritten sheet, which said:

"Mr. George B. Post, Jr., 39 East Sixty-third Street (house closed in the Summer), country residence, Bernardsville, N. J.

"'I remember distinctly the night, or early morning, that I was taken into Mr. Pendleton's car.

"'I recall that I played bridge at the Knickerbocker Club, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-second Street (Telephone Schuyler 7500) earlier in the evening.

"'I have referred to my account with the Knickerbocker Club, and I find that I was at the Knickerbocker Club on Monday and Tuesday, June 7 and 8. My account at the club shows that I was not at the club on the night of June 10 or the morning of June 11. For this reason I feel positive that the date of my riding to the club in Mr. Pendleton's car was the early morning of June 8, 1920. I was never in the car except that one time.'

"The above statement of Mr. Post, verified by the records of the Knickerbocker Club, corresponds to Mr. Pendleton's statement regarding the occasion when Mr. Post was taken in his car, and shows that John Doyle, Atlas Garage, was mistaken as to the date upon which he drove Mr. Post in Mr. Pendleton's car."

Other Assumptions Refuted.

"The assumption that Mr. Pendleton was in the Elwell residence at 1:45 on the morning of June 11, and that he tried to call his own home, then falls to the ground?" Mr. Swann was asked.

"Yes, certainly," he replied.

The statements of Mr. and Mrs. Bird corroborated that of Mr. Pendleton, who

TROOPS BARRICADE ROADS TO DUBLIN

RAILWAY STOPPAGE ACUTE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, July 8.—Barricades were erected during the night and again today on various roads around Dublin, and all traffic held up by fully armed soldiers and subjected to close search.

An almost similar incident occurred near Omagh. Troops were stationed at various points in the town and also on all roads leading to the town. Every motor car was held up and rigorously searched.

The object of this sudden move by the authorities has not been disclosed.

Irish railway disorganization, due to the refusal of employes to handle armed forces and war munitions, has entered upon an acute stage. Many centres served by branch systems are now isolated. No trains are running out of Limerick to Waterford, Cork and Sligo. On this service alone fifty drivers, firemen and guards have been suspended, and porters and checkers on passenger platforms have received one week's notice, which terminates tomorrow.

At Tipperary, where there have been practically no outbound trains for more than a fortnight, a curious situation has arisen. A party of police who desired to travel to Cashel have remained in town during the whole period, persistently entering train after train on arrival, and as persistently the drivers, firemen and guards have refused to continue at work, and the engines have been uncoupled and taken to Waterford.

No train is running to Castlerea, and migratory labor, male and female, must journey by motor to the nearest station unaffected by the dispute.

In several districts where railway communication has ceased motor services have been organized, local supplies of labor being commandeered for the purpose. Fairs and markets are suffering and the food position is assuming grave dimensions. Local committees, where necessary, are rationing supplies.

Apparently only two systems are running to schedule, the Great Northern and Dublin and Southeastern.

WARN OF IRISH 'MASSACRE.'

Women Ask State Department to Prevent Slaughter on July 12.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Sweeping charges were made today by the American Woman Pickets, a society of women in sympathy with Irish ambitions, that silence on the part of American officials concerning the "massacre" which the women predict Great Britain will conduct in Ireland on July 12 is equal to "actual participation in the 'massacre'." The pickets made this assertion in a message which they sent today to the State Department, asking that branch of the Government to try to stop Great Britain from going ahead with the "massacre."

Norman Davis, Under Secretary of State, was unable to receive the pickets in person, as this was "diplomatic day," upon which the foreign ambassadors and ministers call. The message was left by the pickets at the State Department and was later handed to Mr. Davis by a member of his staff, to whom it had been delivered. The communication read:

"In the name of humanity the American Woman Pickets for the enforcement of America's war aims request the State Department to use its good offices in an effort to dissuade British authorities from their present policy of provocation in maintaining tremendous armed forces in Ireland. All the hideous machinery of war, constantly paraded before the eyes of the people, and the daily landing of reinforcements in Ireland of young, hot-headed boys, without the cool judgment necessary in handling such a delicate situation, must inevitably lead toward the massacre for which England has sagaciously chosen July 12 as another Amritsar, and for

George made the bold remark that it was time to get something done. He then read the allied proposals.

Foreign Minister von Simons replied that he regretted more time was not given to Germany to argue her case further, as if he thought that alone prevented further concessions. While he must admit that Germany had been unable to fulfill certain conditions of the treaty he was sorry to find that the Spa conference was not a round table, but that the Germans were treated as if in a court of justice.

Regarding the proposed law to make the Reichswehr into a regular army he asked whether Lloyd George was not aware that such a law had already been passed by Germany. He requested his hearers to believe that Germany wanted an honest peace and while he considered that the German proposals represented the most Germany could do, he assured the Allies that the Germans would do their utmost to meet the exactions of Allies. He added:

"If Germany fails the consequences will no doubt be serious for Germany. They will also be serious for the Allies."

Lloyd George said that the words of the conference must show formal acceptance of the allied proposal by the Germans. The latter then asked until noon tomorrow so as to confer with Berlin.

The English Lord Chancellor and French Minister of Justice are now here and propose to take up the question of war criminals as soon as the disarmament business is settled. The conference is expected to end Monday, and between now and then the whole question of reparations has to be discussed. That part of revision of the Versailles Treaty is considerably more complicated than the matter of disarmament. Another meeting devoted solely to that subject is expected to be held shortly afterward.

Meanwhile the Allies have not yet agreed on the division among themselves of such sums as may ultimately be extracted from Germany in reparation.

Official Report of Proceeding.

SPA, July 8 (Associated Press).—The following communication concerning the day's proceedings at the Allied-German conference was issued this evening:

"The conference reassembled at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

"Mr. Lloyd George discussed the determination of the Allies to secure the execution of the treaty, which hitherto had been so inadequate in regard to the surrender and destruction of war materials and the reduction of effectives. He indicated the extent to which the Allies had taken into account the difficulties set forth by the German Government, on the sincerity of whose intentions he did not desire to cast doubt.

"Mr. Lloyd George at the same time pointed out that the fresh postponement was granted only on a definite condition, the realization of which would be checked and guaranteed by precise sanctions.

"The Allies' reply to the German proposals was then read, as follows:

"'On condition that Germany (a) proceeds immediately to disarm the Einwohnerwehren and Sichereitspolizei.

"'(b) Publishes a proclamation demanding the immediate delivery of all arms in the hands of the civil population and decreeing effective penalties in case of contravention. In event of the powers possessed by Government under the law being insufficient for this purpose, legislative measures are to be taken without delay which will strengthen the attributes of the executive power in this domain;

"'(c) That Germany takes and puts into execution immediately the whole series of measures necessary for the abolition of compulsory military service and for the organization of the German Army on the basis of long-term military service as provided in the Treaty;

"'(d) Delivers to the Allies for destruction and helps the Allies to destroy all arms and military material in excess of those permitted by the Treaty;

"'(e) Assures application of the naval clauses of the Treaty, as well as the clauses concerning aircraft which have not yet been carried out.

"The Allies agree:

"'First: To extend to Oct. 1 the period provided for the reduction of the effectives of the Reichswehr to 100,000 including a maximum of ten brigades. The Allies also agree to another postponement expiring on Jan. 1, 1921, on which date the reduction of effectives to 100,000, with the exact composition and organization provided for by the Treaty must be completed.

"'Second: To authorize the German Government to keep in the neutral zone until Oct. 1 for the purpose of assisting in the collection of arms, effectives whose number will be communicated to it by the Inter-Allied Military Mission of Control.

"'Third: To take all necessary measures for the prevention of contraband traffic in arms coming from occupied territories and intended for other parts of Germany.

"'If at any date before Jan. 1, 1921, the allied control commissioners in Germany find that the terms of the present arrangement are not being loyally executed; for example, if by Sept. 1 the Government and legislative measures provided for have not been taken and have not received the widest publicity, and if the destruction and delivery of materials is not proceeding normally; if on Oct. 1 the German army has not been reduced to 150,000, including the maximum seven brigades, the Allies will proceed to the occupation of a further part of German territory, either the Ruhr or some other region, and will only evacuate it on the day when all the conditions of the present arrangement have been wholly fulfilled.'

"Dr. Simons remarked that the solutions and conditions enumerated in the allied note were being imposed without the German delegation having been called upon to discuss them. He proceeded to comment on the Allies' reply paragraph by paragraph and finally declared that the German Government would do its utmost to carry out the conditions prescribed and if it failed to succeed it would have to submit to the consequences.

Mr. Lloyd George replied that if the conference was to continue its labors, formal acceptance of the German Government must be officially confirmed.

Dr. Simon then announced that he would communicate the German Government's reply tomorrow morning, at the same time as its reply to the naval and aircraft questions."

SPA BAD FOR NEWSPAPERS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SPA, July 8 (By telephone to Paris and thence by cable).—The difficulties of holding the conference in Spa are being accentuated each day. The delegates, of whom there are about 2,400, are scattered in scores of hotels and private houses and have the utmost difficulty in getting together for meetings. The French delegation is in four different places and the German in five. But the worst lot of all is that of the newspaper men. The telegraphic arrangements did not last out one day. They have completely collapsed, and all that is left is the telephone, which is restricted to two wires to Paris for the use of fifty-two French correspondents and one to London for thirty English and fifteen American correspondents. To add to their difficulties the news of the conference's proceedings is not given out till after dinner, when a fight for telephone wires begins. An example of how it works is shown by this, that the editor of The London Times, who is here with a large staff, did not succeed in getting a single line through to his paper for two successive days.

To improve matters the Belgian Foreign Office sent down thirty telephone booths on a special train. While these were being set up in a local bathing establishment the district postmaster happened to inquire what they were for. When told, he said they were very nice booths, but as the number of lines to Paris and London remained the same he didn't see what on earth was the use of them. Their installation was therefore stopped and the local operators are doing their best to struggle with two or three persons on the same wire.

The editors of all the British and French newspapers are making violent protests, and while they have not succeeded in getting the conference transferred back to Brussels, they have made it highly unlikely that another will be held here.

The purpose of the Belgians in having the conference at Spa was presumably to advertise the place, but the advertisement it has had is not likely to be very beneficial among newspaper men, who are agreed that the best that can be said for the accommodation afforded is that it is an interesting survival of the domestic art of our ancestors 200 years ago.

GERMANS SEE PERIL IN TOO SMALL AN ARMY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 8.—German correspondents and leader writers do not regard the situation at Spa as any too hopeful. The Tageblatt's correspondent, Paul Scheffer, talks of the atmosphere of mistrust created by the ignorance with which the Entente delegates view the problem of the German disarmament. The Tageblatt's leading article deals with the same subject, emphasizing that the cardinal point is that if Germany is not permitted sufficient forces to keep down the rebellious elements at home she cannot fulfill any peace conditions whatever.

All papers with the exception of the Freiheit and Rote Fahne agree on that point. The latter two, of course, would like to see the Entente insisting on a heavy reduction of the German Army, which then would be quite unable to prevent a proletarian upheaval ending with a dictatorship in the Russian style. The Freiheit and Rote Fahne make no secret of these hopes, but what they do not say is that such heavy reduction of the army would also make impossible a successful search for the great quantities of arms and munitions which the extreme elements, both Red and reactionary, hold ready for use in secret arsenals.

The Tageblatt vainly seeks to find some solution for the problem, proposing an army of 100,000 men and an equally large force of gendarmerie, adding, however, that the latter must have rifles, as it would not be expected that these men should be armed only with revolvers and rubber clubs to face rebellious Red or reactionary hordes having plenty of rifles and machine guns.

It has been said by a French newspaper that Germany had as large an army as the British Empire, which the latter finds sufficient to keep order in half the world, but it must be remembered that in Britain comparatively normal conditions prevail, while in Germany everything is topsy turvy in consequence of the war and revolution and the enforced idleness of great masses, and that so much explosive matter is accumulated everywhere that only the untiring vigilance of a sufficiently large army can prevent Germany's total destruction.

There is much truth in this argument. As any intelligent foreigner who has lived here sufficiently long will testify. Of course the average tourist who flits through the country in a few days or weeks cannot realize that these German cities, towns and villages which present a very peaceful and orderly aspect may tomorrow be the scene of bloody orgies, as they have been before.

However, there is one point on which the Entente justly complains, namely the seeming indolence with which the Government regards the hiding of arms. Nevertheless on close investigation the Entente will find that even an army of 200,000 will stand small chance of preventing millions of persons who distruct one another, and may be called upon any time individually or en masse to defend their own lives or property, from hiding the only means to preserve life.

Still the Government's forces have repeatedly raided secret arsenals of Red rebels and in many cases the offener it is because the Government fears to precipitate rebellious outbreaks which would often be the inevitable consequences of such attempts at raiding secret arsenals. The army, however, does not display the same zealousness regarding the secret arsenals of the reactionaries, and some officers still in the service have been accused again and again of having aided the unlawful secretion of large quantities of arms and munitions.

Here again the Government's weakness is responsible, but in circumstances not inexcusable. Officers who have aided in secreting arms belonging to the junker class are perhaps mainly actuated by the idea of giving their relatives and friends who live on isolated estates a chance to defend themselves against infuriated mobs. It must be remembered that the German masses are still full of hate against the classes which once ruled them, and who in their opinion have not yet been made to suffer for their past crimes, but continue much as usual, and even threaten the existence of the republic. If the Government proceeds harshly against these officers they may fall in the time of need to do their duty, or may even join the enemies, the most formidable of which at the present is the Left.

The German correspondents at Spa point out that it is mainly France's fear of a new war that prevents a speedy settlement of the military question, and the newspapers are doubtless right in urging the utter impossibility of Germany undertaking any war of revenge on account of her complete exhaustion, though none will deny the fact that there still are elements who cherish such wild dreams.

If, however, the Entente curtails the Germany army it will rob the Government of the only means to suppress those elements dreaming of revenge as well as the adherents of the Freiheit and Rote Fahne, who would deliver Germany to Bolshevism, in both of which cases the Entente would lose, if not suffer.

AMERICANS TO ATTEND FINANCIAL CONGRESS

Three to Represent the Government Unofficially at Brussels Meeting.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The United States will be represented unofficially at the Brussels financial congress under the League of Nations on July 23, Secretary Houston announced today.

The representatives of this country, whom Mr. Houston said would not be Government officials, will be chosen within a few days. It is planned, the Secretary said, to send three representatives to observe the proceedings and consider the discussion and official report.

The conference will discuss economic conditions of the various nations, the Secretary said, and many helpful suggestions for working out the reconstruction problems of the different countries are expected to result.

The program of the conference as received here calls for the presentation of written statements on external debts, taxation, currency, internal loans, import restrictions and exchange control and similar topics. Reparation and cancellation of war debts will not come up for consideration, it has been stated.

The United States, said Secretary Houston, will not offer suggestions on matters such as the external debt, which is held by officials here not to be an American problem, but probably will offer such recommendations as may be helpful in regard to taxation and coal supplies for various countries.

The United States cannot be bound by any of the conference deliberations, Mr. Houston declared, adding that it was assumed that none of the various foreign representatives would have authority to make any agreements in behalf of their Governments.

England is sending three unofficial representatives, all economic experts, and it is likely that the majority of nations will send experts on economic and reconstruction problems.

REVOLT PLAN IN BRUNSWICK.

Extreme Radicals Said to be Plotting Uprising to Begin Soon.

LONDON, July 8.—A Central News dispatch from Berlin dated Wednesday reports that preparations are proceeding for a revolution in Brunswick.

The extreme radicals, it is declared, are working feverishly on plans for a general strike at the week-end, and a new revolutionary committee is said to have arranged for a big mass meeting within a day or two to consider the question of drastic action.

PARIS PRESS RESTIVE ON SPA CONFERENCE

GERMAN TRADE NOT WANTED

So French Policy Is Opposed to British in Respect to Late Foes.

BY WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 8.—The conference of San Remo marked the dawn of a new era in Europe, according to the opinion here of events at Spa. At San Remo Lloyd George obtained Millerand's consent to conversation with the Germans. More than armistice and more than the signing of the Peace Treaty, apparently this event denoted the end of the war.

Paris is only just realizing it, and the knowledge seems bitter in her mouth. That bitterness comes from French press comment, running from the semi-official Echo de Paris and the Temps, to the anti-government newspapers like Oeuvre.

"What are we doing here?" they seem to say, "We have nothing to gain by this business, and perhaps everything to lose." They now think they see an inevitable sequence—conversation means discussion and discussion, it is argued, means revision.

According to one view, the Treaty of Versailles is unworkable because it presupposed that the Allies would remain a solid block, one in interests, purposes and execution for thirty-five years. But the modern world is guided by three principal considerations, military, political which includes foreign diplomacy and internal politics, and economic which includes trade and finance. Sometimes each of these considerations clash with others in one and the same country.

At present, as it happens in the three principal countries of Europe, England, France and Germany, this internal conflict is in abeyance, chiefly as a result of the war.

France and England, militarily, are for the time being in harmony, although the events in Eastern Europe, which are rapidly rushing to a crisis, may bring them into opposition sooner than the delegates at Spa appear to realize.

Politically there is considerable variance between the two nations. England has an influential labor element. France is in the firm hands of a conservative Government, solidly based on the prosperous agricultural majority and buttressed by a powerful bureaucracy and successful military and monied elements.

It is on economic grounds that the gulf between France and England is really the widest.

England's attitude in international politics is profoundly affected by the relations of economic considerations to her internal political situation. In a highly industrial country, to whom trade is the breath of life, the economic factor naturally takes first place, except, possibly, during the progress of a great war. England's geographical position and her navy, perhaps, increase the effect of this by freeing her from the fear of aggression by her neighbors.

England's prime interest is trade. Germany or to a less extent Russia, Austria and Southeastern Europe were important markets for both buying and selling. Now they are neither and England wants them back again. This is the basis of England's European policy today. This amplification of the economic thesis, advanced by Maynard Keynes, that there can be no peace and security in Europe unless Germany is allowed some measure of prosperity.

To France economic consideration present themselves in different light. In a few months France will be almost self-supporting as regards food. In fact the only national necessity of which she is short will be coal. Oil, cotton, etc., are obviously of great importance, but these she can buy or very nearly do without at an acute pinch.

But as regards trade, France chiefly an agricultural nation—about 65 per cent. of her population draw their livlihood directly or indirectly from the soil—France is less interested in her production by manufacture either absorbed at home or consists of luxuries which are readily absorbed abroad and which has a demand that is steady and almost free from competition. So her economic consideration are greatly simplified. They might be summed up in two phrases—take coal from Germany and sit tight behind a high protective treaty wall.

Political consideration reinforce this viewpoint. Germany is the hereditary enemy. The French feel in their bones that she wants revenge and will get it if she is strong enough. If Germany remains weak the French army need not be so strong and the terms of national service can be shortened. If France takes coal from Germany it may mean Germany's ruin. As long as she gets this coal France does not care.

The only thing she ever got from Germany was a flood of cheap products and she understands that it does not matter if her cutlery and woolens, etc., cost her more if she has the money to pay for them. It is said that if the French had had the courage of their convictions they would have occupied Ruhr instead of Frankfort and kept it and taken all due measures to ensure an ample coal supply. But the military party here was apparently impressed with the idea of Frankfort as a base for a new advance which they thought might be necessary.

All the French attempts to withdraw the concession of conversation with the Germans, all their grumbles about the uselessness of the Spa conference, seem to be based on the idea that to France, provided she gets German coal, it really does not matter whether Germany is prostrate or not. Perhaps she would rather prefer to have her that way.

But with England it is just the opposite if she has her way. Owing to financial considerations and other matters France is at present forced to follow England's lead. That is one reason why the French take so much to hear America's withdrawal from the affairs of Europe.

Each obstacle at Spa will be magnified by the French and bring balm to French hearts. But on the whole it seems likely, as judged here, that Spa will prove to be what Lloyd George expected, not a conference with Germany in which revision of the treaty will be undertaken, but a preliminary to another conference later where the road to something of the kind may be clear.

DEAD MAN FINED $100.

Evasion of Jury Duty Is Charge Against Deceased Merchant.

Mrs. Frederick Henry Lane of 247 West 103d Street yesterday sent a letter to Edward R. Carroll, Chief Clerk of General Sessions, calling attention to the fact that, although her husband died on Nov. 11 last, Judge Charles C. Nott of General Sessions on Wednesday imposed a fine of $100 on him for failing to appear for service on the July Grand Jury.

Mrs. Lane explained that her husband, who was President of the Allen Lane Company, commission merchants, at 18 Fourth Avenue, had for several years been on the additional Grand Jury list. He had always appeared for duty when notified, she said, and the imposition of the fine and the subsequent publicity of the fact were distressing to herself and other members of her family.

"I knew nothing about the matter until yesterday morning, when several friends called me up and informed me that my husband's name appeared among the names of sixteen Grand Jurors who had been fined on Wednesday by Judge Nott for failing to respond to the summons to Grand Jury duty," Mrs. Lane said. "Soon after a letter was delivered by the postman from the Chief Clerk of General Sessions stating that my husband must explain to the court why he had not appeared for Grand Jury duty."

VAIL HOME TO VERMONT.

Widow of Telephone Magnate Deeds Residence to State.

LYNDONVILLE, Vt., July 8.—Mrs. Theodore N. Vail, widow of the President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company deeded her residence here today to the State of Vermont. Mr. Vail gave the grounds on which the house is located to the State, which is using them for agricultural purposes.

Mrs. Vail stipulated in the deed that she be allowed to use the residence until Oct. 15.

Rumored Mission of Cravath Denied

The presence of Paul D. Cravath, the New York lawyer, at the conference at Spa between the Commissioners of allied countries and Germany, is not connected in any way with American business affairs, according to persons familiar with the purposes of Mr. Cravath's trip abroad. It was said yesterday in authoritative quarters that Mr. Cravath did not represent Kuhn, Loeb & Co., as was rumored in a cabled dispatch on Wednesday, and it was stated further that he was traveling in order to study conditions in various countries for his own account.

ALL POLISH NATION RUSHES TO ARMS

Five Polish refugees on the train were killed and the British General's car was damaged, but none of his party was injured.

Squadrons of the Polish Second Army, including the Kosciuszko Aerial Squadron commanded by Americans, are taking a prominent part in fighting Budenny's cavalry from the air on the Ukraine front, where the Poles withdrew in the face of repeated raids by cavalry reinforced by Budenny's First Army. The American fliers repeatedly attacked the horsemen, dropping bombs and using machine guns in the effort to stem the westward sweep of the Bolsheviki.

The official statement issued yesterday by Army Headquarters on the fighting says:

"Enemy cavalry forced a passage through our front between Lakes Driswiati and Ubleja. Our infantry, after a fierce struggle, withdrew in a southwesterly direction.

"Budenny's cavalry occupied Rovno, forcing our detachments to retire. Enemy cavalry outposts are advancing in the direction of Klewan. Bolshevist attacks were repelled throughout Polesia."

LONDON, July 8.—Russian Bolshevist forces have smashed their way forward on the southern flank of the Polish front and Soviet military authorities claim success in a series of battles near Staro-Konstantinov, toward which town they are driving the Poles, according to a Bolshevist official statement received here by wireless.

Soviet forces have reached Lititshev, twenty-four miles east of Proskinov, and have occupied Mohilev-Podolsk in their drive along the Dniester River.

Wrangel's Army in Big Battle.

Heavy fighting is going on between the Bolsheviki and forces commanded by General Wrangel, on the southern front, the struggle being particularly intense in the region of Orlekhov, the statement says.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 7 (Associated Press.)—Dispatches from Sebastopol say that General Makmo, with more than 20,000 anti-Bolshevist troops, has established contact with the forces of General Wrangel, on the southern front. General Makmo, whose headquarters is Ekaterinoslav, declared he would co-operate with Wrangel against the Bolsheviki, the dispatches state.

The Green army, which is anti-Bolshevist, although one of far sighted friendship for Russia and certain to draw close the cordial relations between this country and the future Russian nation.

Will Show Trade Impossible.

In matters directly concerned with trade it is felt by authorities here that the action of the American Government in removing trade restrictions will itself not operate in any manner to the interest of the Bolsheviki. It is felt that it will definitely prove that trade with Soviet Russia is impossible, that Soviet Russia has no goods for export, for such materials as might be sent out of the country will either not be given up by the peasants who produce them or, if taken by force, cannot be transported over the Russian railroads to the points of shipment.

In this regard, as well as concerning the title of Russian purchasers to the commodities, or other values with which they offer payment, prospective traders with Soviet Russia are warned clearly by the State Department.

In British circles the Russian trade policy of the United States is now being regarded as similar in fundamentals to that of Great Britain, consisting mainly in removing obstacles to trade with Russia, in order to prove that trade cannot be carried on under the Soviet system. Whether or not Great Britain will undertake action similar to that of the United States is not known. The so-called trade negotiations with Krassin, Soviet Minister of Industry, by the British Government, it is pointed out, actually ceased before they began, for the Soviet Government failed to carry out the stipulations made by Great Britain as a preliminary even to contemplation of trade resumption.

It was stated here today by an authority of marked reliability that yesterday's announcement of policy by the American Government would have slight direct reaction in Europe at present, but would have a future influence far greater than would be immediately noticeable. The announcement, it was stated, would have little effect on the Governments of the European nations, as a result of an interchange of communications preliminary to the State Department's action, official circles abroad have been aware for some weeks that yesterday's action was to be taken by the United States.

Whatever may be the immediate effect in Europe and in Russia itself of the action, which will, much more than offset any momentary satisfaction that Bolshevist elements may derive from the prospect of trade.

The State Department, it is pointed out, has emphatically prevented Soviet sympathizers from holding to the illusion that the removal of American trade restrictions is a first step toward eventual political recognition, and further than that, it leaves little doubt that the American Government does not contemplate the possibility, even without restriction of the development of any considerable trade.

A. J. Sack of the Russian Information Service said:

"Russian patriots and democrats opposed to and still struggling against Bolshevist tyranny, will greet with satisfaction the State Department's decision. The only practical results of this decision will be that American business men after an endeavor to trade with Bolshevist Russia will come to the inevitable conclusion that neither commercial nor financial relations with Bolshevist authorities are possible. The statement of the State Department emphasizes the well known fact that under present conditions Russia is unable to export any considerable amount of raw materials in exchange for the merchandise she needs. This the only thing left for American business men who want to trade with Russia is to demand payment in cash. While the Bolsheviki are willing to pay with the gold they seized in the Russian Treasury and in private safes, business men dealing with the Bolsheviki will know that this is stolen gold and that the Russian Government which will come into existence after the inevitable downfall of Bolshevism will demand this gold back. The business men of this country will therefore most probably refuse to enter into business relations with the Bolsheviki.

"While the practical commercial results of the State Department's removal of the restrictions against trade with Bolshevist Russia will thus be negligible, the Bolshevist leaders will be deprived of one of the means of their propaganda, that is, the accusation that the crisis in Russia's economic life is due to the allied blockade of Bolshevist Russia. The decision of the State Department removes the so-called blockade, and the failure of the economic system of Bolshevism will soon become evident even to those who believe that Bolshevist mismanagement is due to pressure from the outside."

Can Now Depart Reds.

WASHINGTON, July 8 (Associated Press).—Lifting of the trade embargo against Russia by the United States, with the consequent resumption of commercial sailings to Russian ports, is expected by officials of the Department of Labor to facilitate the deportation of undesirable aliens.

Approximately 600 Russian Communists and anarchists in addition to 300 aliens from States contiguous to Russia now are awaiting deportation, the department estimates.

Since the departure of the Soviet ark Buford plans for further deportations to Russia have been retarded on account of the impossibility of arranging for the transportation of aliens on commercial liners to Russian ports. Plans to ship deportees to Odessa recently were frustrated by the taking over of Odessa by the Bolsheviki.

Transshipment by way of Hango, Finland, as was accomplished in the case of the Soviet ark, has been made impossible by open hostilities between Finland and Soviet Russia. Negotiations have been conducted recently with the Esthonian Government with a view to permitting aliens destined for Russia to land at Reval and to proceed overland into Russia, but so far Esthonia has not agreed to this plan.

WOULD SHOW SOVIET CANNOT TRADE HERE

MAY CLEAR UP CONFUSION

Labor Department Now Expects to be Able to Deport 500 Russian Reds Long Awaiting Transport.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The American Government's announcement of its Russian policy and the removal of restrictions against trading with Soviet Russia is regarded in official and diplomatic quarters in Washington as one of the most important developments in the Russian situation since the Bolshevist question became an urgent world problem.

It is not expected that this removal of trade restrictions will be followed by any rush for trade with Russia. On the contrary very little immediate trade is expected to result. The announcement is more important and far-reaching from the standpoint of international policy than in direct bearing on Russian trade. Its influence may not be fully felt for the moment, but in the long run the announcement of yesterday is expected to have a vital bearing on Russian developments. No real change of policy by the United States is involved. The State Department has no intention of recognizing the Soviet Government in Russia.

In well informed quarters here it is expected that the American Government's public announcement of its Russian policy as included in the publication of removal of trade restrictions is certain to react strongly against the Bolsheviki and to influence, eventually, the European nations toward the adoption of a similar firm and uncompromising attitude. It is also considered that it will very positively take the wind out of the sails of Bolshevist propaganda being spread not only in the United States but in other American countries as well.

Washington Acting Independently.

None of the great nations of the world, it was emphasized today, has been able to adopt and carry out a clear-cut policy with regard to Russia. There has been hesitancy on all sides among the European nations, moves in one direction and moves in another without arriving at any definite conclusion. While the United States has not held aloof from the European efforts to find a satisfactory policy toward Soviet Russia, it has, since the fruitless endeavor to meet with the Bolsheviki on Prinkipo Island during the Peace Conference at Paris, maintained a more or less independent attitude on the questions involved in the Russian situation.

During the last Winter, when the question of the resumption of trade relations with Soviet Russia became a question of moment to the Allied Supreme Council, the State Department proposed to the European Governments a trade policy such as has now been adopted independently by this country. No definite decision was reached for joint action along the lines suggested by the United States, the allied Governments apparently preferring an attempt to deal with Russia through some such channel as was felt at the time to be offered by the Russian Co-operative Societies.

In circles directly concerned with the Russian problem the policy of the United States toward Russia has been definitely known and appreciated for many months. The public announcement of that policy, however, has not been made until the present time. The nearest approach to a general definition of the attitude of the United States toward the Bolsheviki was contained in a telegram sent by Secretary Colby three weeks ago to Samuel Gompers, who was attending the conference in Canada of the American Federation of Labor.

The policy of the American Government in matters concerning Russia has been characterized by a firm stand against any move to give political recognition to the Bolsheviki, not only on the grounds of their inability, as the national Government of Russia, to carry out that nation's international obligations, but as well because of their unwillingness to carry out any obligations not to their immediate advantage.

In line with this view it has been the policy of the American Government to oppose all efforts to dismember the territory of the Russian nation and to give no recognition to any States which have arisen on soil which was formerly included under Russian rule until there should be a national Government in Russia which could consent to the independent existence of such States without danger of repudiation of its consent by succeeding authorities. In this attitude it is felt that the policy of the United States runs counter to far sighted friendship for Russia and certain to draw close the cordial relations between this country and the future Russian nation.

In matters directly concerned with trade it is felt by authorities here that the action of the American Government in removing trade restrictions will itself not operate in any manner to the interest of the Bolsheviki. It is felt that it will definitely prove that trade with Soviet Russia is impossible, that Soviet Russia has no goods for export, for such materials as might be sent out of the country will either not be given up by the peasants who produce them or, if taken by force, cannot be transported over the Russian railroads to the points of shipment.

In this regard, as well as concerning the title of Russian purchasers to the commodities, or other values with which they offer payment, prospective traders with Soviet Russia are warned clearly by the State Department.

In British circles the Russian trade policy of the United States is now being regarded as similar in fundamentals to that of Great Britain, consisting mainly in removing obstacles to trade with Russia, in order to prove that trade cannot be carried on under the Soviet system. Whether or not Great Britain will undertake action similar to that of the United States is not known. The so-called trade negotiations with Krassin, Soviet Minister of Industry, by the British Government, it is pointed out, actually ceased before they began, for the Soviet Government failed to carry out the stipulations made by Great Britain as a preliminary even to contemplation of trade resumption.

It was stated here today by an authority of marked reliability that yesterday's announcement of policy by the American Government would have slight direct reaction in Europe at present, but would have a future influence far greater than would be immediately noticeable. The announcement, it was stated, would have little effect on the Governments of the European nations, as a result of an interchange of communications preliminary to the State Department's action, official circles abroad have been aware for some weeks that yesterday's action was to be taken by the United States.

Whatever may be the immediate effect in Europe and in Russia itself of the action, which will, much more than offset any momentary satisfaction that Bolshevist elements may derive from the prospect of trade.

The State Department, it is pointed out, has emphatically prevented Soviet sympathizers from holding to the illusion that the removal of American trade restrictions is a first step toward eventual political recognition, and further than that, it leaves little doubt that the American Government does not contemplate the possibility, even without restriction of the development of any considerable trade.

A. J. Sack of the Russian Information Service said:

"Russian patriots and democrats opposed to and still struggling against Bolshevist tyranny, will greet with satisfaction the State Department's decision. The only practical results of this decision will be that American business men after an endeavor to trade with Bolshevist Russia will come to the inevitable conclusion that neither commercial nor financial relations with Bolshevist authorities are possible. The statement of the State Department emphasizes the well known fact that under present conditions Russia is unable to export any considerable amount of raw materials in exchange for the merchandise she needs. This the only thing left for American business men who want to trade with Russia is to demand payment in cash. While the Bolsheviki are willing to pay with the gold they seized in the Russian Treasury and in private safes, business men dealing with the Bolsheviki will know that this is stolen gold and that the Russian Government which will come into existence after the inevitable downfall of Bolshevism will demand this gold back. The business men of this country will therefore most probably refuse to enter into business relations with the Bolsheviki.

"While the practical commercial results of the State Department's removal of the restrictions against trade with Bolshevist Russia will thus be negligible, the Bolshevist leaders will be deprived of one of the means of their propaganda, that is, the accusation that the crisis in Russia's economic life is due to the allied blockade of Bolshevist Russia. The decision of the State Department removes the so-called blockade, and the failure of the economic system of Bolshevism will soon become evident even to those who believe that Bolshevist mismanagement is due to pressure from the outside."

Can Now Depart Reds.

WASHINGTON, July 8 (Associated Press).—Lifting of the trade embargo against Russia by the United States, with the consequent resumption of commercial sailings to Russian ports, is expected by officials of the Department of Labor to facilitate the deportation of undesirable aliens.

Approximately 600 Russian Communists and anarchists in addition to 300 aliens from States contiguous to Russia now are awaiting deportation, the department estimates.

Since the departure of the Soviet ark Buford plans for further deportations to Russia have been retarded on account of the impossibility of arranging for the transportation of aliens on commercial liners to Russian ports. Plans to ship deportees to Odessa recently were frustrated by the taking over of Odessa by the Bolsheviki.

Transshipment by way of Hango, Finland, as was accomplished in the case of the Soviet ark, has been made impossible by open hostilities between Finland and Soviet Russia. Negotiations have been conducted recently with the Esthonian Government with a view to permitting aliens destined for Russia to land at Reval and to proceed overland into Russia, but so far Esthonia has not agreed to this plan.

LITTLE TRADE EXPECTED.

Soviet Russia Not Able to Buy or Sell, Those Interested Agree.

The lifting of the Russian trade ban by the United States was described yesterday by William C. Redfield, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor and President of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, as a diplomatic stroke which would unmask Soviet failure and incompetence. To Mr. Redfield the lifting of the trade embargo had little if any commercial significance.

Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, Soviet "Ambassador" to the United States, declared in a statement that the ruling did not at all dispose of the problem of establishing trade between the United States and Russia.

Mr. Redfield said it was his belief and the belief of all students of the Russian situation whom he had consulted that the lifting or material modification of the American blockade would have no real commercial results.

"I am sure it was not designed to," he added. "The blockade has furnished the Soviet with a ready-made alibi for its failure to rescue the country from chaos and ruin, and by removing this alibi the American Government has opened the way for a revelation of the economic, commercial and industrial weakness of Russia and of the utter failure of that country's dictators to establish a responsible system of government. The relation of the blockade has little, if any, commercial significance, because Russia has neither cash, credit nor goods. Potentially the country is a vitally important factor in meeting the needs of the world. Actually she is unable to provide for herself.

"Beyond question there is much raw material in Russia which the world needs, but there is nothing like the vast stores which have been advertised by shrewd propaganda. Moreover, materials have a world value only when they are accessible to world markets, and Russia's materials are scattered throughout the length and breath of a land twice the size of the United States and with virtually no means of transportation.

"The best index to the demoralized condition of Russia's transportation systems is found in the fact that, while the provinces appear to have plenty, the cities are starving because they are all but isolated. If the country cannot distribute its goods internally, how is it going to deliver them to foreign markets?

"The one substantial effect of the suspended blockade—the effect I am sure it was designed to have—will be to reveal the demoralization of the country's economic, industrial and commercial systems under a regime which has failed signally and which I do not believe can last another Winter."

The blockade has furnished a useful talking point for Bolshevist sympathizers who were wont to make it the excuse for the economic failure of the Soviet Government, said a statement from the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The chamber indorsed the lifting of the ban, except as to munitions of war.

"This is the policy which the chamber has consistently urged for many months," it was added, "in the belief that it would expose the real blockade of Russia, which is internal, and also conduce to mutually satisfactory relations with Russia in the future.

"It is wise that the State Department issues the warning that persons undertaking to trade with Soviet Russia must do so at their own risk. Manifestly, the Government cannot assume any responsibility to protect them in their dealings with a regime which, on the one hand, assumes a monopoly of all trade, and, on the other, repudiates all the bases of common commercial morality. Furthermore, the State Department rightly warns American traders against the risks incident to the acceptance of commodities or other values, the title to which may later be brought into question. This is particularly timely in view of the court actions brought in Scandinavian countries by firms whose property had been requisitioned or expropriated by the Soviet Government and then offered for sale or barter abroad.

"The Soviet Government, which arrogates to itself a monopoly of all foreign and domestic commerce, has not at its disposal any large stocks of goods for export, the propagandic statements of Krassin to the contrary notwithstanding. This is abundantly proved both by the official statistics of their Commissar of Public Economy, Mr. Rykov, and by their failure to ship out any amount through Esthonia.

Martens, in his statement in the State Department announcement, said:

"There is no indication in the statement as to how or whether Russia is to be permitted to pay American business men for goods purchased in this country. We have long been prepared and willing to establish credits in favor of American manufacturers in Esthonia. The Federal Reserve Board, however, some time ago issued a warning to all American banks advising them against honoring any drafts drawn upon Esthonian banks. In this manner all plans for the payment for American goods by drafts on Esthonian banks were effectively checked. We cannot establish credits by the deposit of Russian gold in American banks so long as there is danger that these deposits may be molested. The statement published this morning gives no assurance that any practical credit arrangements may be effected. It is further stated that postal communication and travelling facilities are not to be restored. It is plain enough that trade cannot be resumed if there is to be no opportunity for the establishment of the essential means and facilities for international commerce."

Herman Bernstein, who has made investigations of Russian conditions, said the decision would remove one of the main points of Bolshevist propaganda in this country and in Russia against America.

REPORT ON CO-OPERATIVES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The Department of Commerce tonight made public a seventy-page monograph on the "Russian Co-operative Movement," showing that 20,000,000 persons, representing a population of 100,000,000, are members of the Russian Co-operative Societies.

This report on the Russian co-operative movement was written by Frederic E. Lee when he was serving as economist in charge of the Economic Intelligence Section of the War Trade Board of the United States Russian Bureau, Inc., and has been revised up to date with recent data. It describes in detail the co-operatives, tells what they are, how they are organized and supported, what commodities they handle, what have been their relations with the different Governments in Russia and how they attained success which won them recognition from the supreme Council.

The report states that the Russian co-operative movement celebrated its fiftieth anniversary in 1915, and shows that the recent growth of the movement has been phenomenal. In 1912 there were in Russia 18,083 co-operative societies, with a membership of 5,760,000 householders. By the beginning of 1918 the number of societies had increased to 80,000, with a membership of 20,000,000 householders. The total capital of these societies is given as 230,000,000 rubles in 1918.

Hand in hand with this growth, says Mr. Lee's report, there took place important internal consolidations. Powerful central organizations were set up, dealing not only with the consumption, production and distribution of commodities, but with finance and transportation as well. An All-Russian Council of Co-operative Congresses was recently created to co-ordinate the work of all branches of the movement.

Martens's Case Postponed.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Hearings in deportation proceedings against Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, Soviet agent in the United States, were postponed again today to July 14. The Labor Department's action was at the request of former Senator Hardwick, counsel for Martens, who was detained in San Francisco by the convention.

Soviet Seeks to Stop Profiteering.

MOSCOW, June 17.—All private enterprises now operating upon a purely co-operative basis have been closed as the first step by the Moscow authorities in a vigorous fight against speculation. Traffic in cosmetics and toilet articles will be nationalized. Shopkeepers, including proprietors of restaurants, have received notice their shops are subject to closure.

SENATORS FOR CURB ON PRIMARY FUNDS

Committee Will Propose Law Barring Big Expenditures by Candidates.

TO SIFT PALMER CHARGES

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—After the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, which is investigating Presidential campaign expenses, had concluded here today its hearing of the testimony of Henry Lincoln Johnson, ex-Republican National Committeeman from Georgia, on expenditures in behalf of General Leonard Wood and Governor Frank O. Lowden in that State it became practically certain that the committee would recommend the enactment of a nation-wide primary law as a means to put an end to large campaign expenditures.

Senator Kenyon, Chairman of the committee, when asked about the move, said that he personally favored such a law. He believed that the findings of the investigators warranted the committee in recommending it. It was learned that the other members of the committee shared Senator Kenyon's views.

Another development of the day was a report that the committee was considering recommending the impeachment of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, if charges made by Attorney William Armstrong of Chicago, regarding the Attorney General's use of his position to further his political fortunes are substantiated.

Promises Justice to Palmer.

The committee will give him every opportunity to substantiate the charges if they admit of substantiation," Senator Kenyon said. "If they do not, in plain justice, the committee would be obliged to state that fact."

"If they were substantiated would an impeachment be asked?"

"If a man were convicted of murder would there be any question as to whether or not he would be arrested," answered the Senator. "If a Senate investigating committee finds evidence that Mr. Palmer unlawfully, for his office, is misusing his position, is in fact a menace to the institutions of the country, could it do otherwise than ask his impeachment? That is purely hypothetical."

Mr. Armstrong's charges are merely charges. They will receive judicial consideration. Then either Mr. Palmer will be exonerated or whatever action the case warrants will be taken. We cannot say what that will be until we know the facts. It is easy to make charges—difficult to substantiate them."

Influenced by Carlin Testimony.

Senator Kenyon admitted that the sensational charges were being investigated because of evidence already in the records of the investigation. On page 141, Part I., of the testimony appears the name of A. C. Carlin, the investigating attorney who was Palmer's political campaign manager. Carlin, the record shows, admitted that he was counsel for Du Pont, former President of the Crucible Steel Company, which, after conviction on violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws, paid $1,000,000 in profits tax laws, paid to the Government $3,000,000. There was no criminal prosecution. Du Pont's and Carlin's testimony at the time aroused wide interest. Under the Wilson administration's full income taxes, Senator Reed, questioning Carlin, sought to bring out an admission that some relation existed between his connection with Palmer's campaign and the failure of the Attorney General to bring criminal prosecutions in the Crucible Steel case.

Another witness in the same hearing was J. Harry Covington, Treasurer of the Federal Sanitation Board, who had been counsel for the Du Pont interests, which eventually were taken over by Palmer as Alien Property Custodian, and had acted for the corporation at the request of Palmer.

Aside from the formal charges, the investigation is practically concluded, except a few odds and ends, said Senator Kenyon. General Wood, he added, has practically been exonerated from any charge of funds. His campaign manager, Colonel Harris, also will be declared the victim of circumstances over which he had no control.

The committee left Chicago tonight and will wind up its work with hearings in St. Louis, starting tomorrow. At St. Louis hearings are expected to center on the Lowden and Palmer ends—with possibly one witness from New York to tell who contributed the Wood money not accounted for.

The St. Louis hearing will centre on the charges made by Johnson, who is expected to be one of the star witnesses. Johnson has many Federal officeholders who were delegates to the Democratic National Convention and what pressure of jobs, if any, were made by Palmer lieutenants, Edward F. Goltra, Democratic National Committeeman, and Joseph T. Davis of St. Louis have been suspended.

Tells of Money Spent in Georgia.

Today's hearing centred on Georgia. Henry Lincoln Johnson testifying, Johnson said that the Wood forces had spent between $60,000 and $65,000 in Georgia, and that the Lowden forces had expended about $30,000. He said he received $9,000 from "one Lowden man," $2,000 from another, and contributed $7,000 of his own money. Most of it, he asserted, went for publicity and office expenses.

Johnson testified that he spent about $20,000 in lining up delegates, while the Wood forces led by Frank H. Hitchcock and Clark L. Grier of Augusta, spent their money in an endeavor to secure an instructed delegation. He said they, Grier complained to the Georgia delegates who were seated that they had accepted good money and should give it back if they were going to vote for Lowden.

"They came to me about it," Johnson testified, "and I told them to keep the money and vote for Lowden."

"Had they been paid before voting?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Yes, they were paid before voting," the witness replied.

"Did Grier consider himself a shrewd political leader?" asked the Iowa Senator.

"He did until that hour," said Johnson.

"Were you endeavoring to secure Lowden instructed delegates?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"I was running for National Committeeman, and I preferred to have an uninstructed delegation to bring to Chicago and take my chances here," said Johnson. "I had known Lowden since he was a Congressman, and was friendly to him."

Johnson said that his election as Republican National Committeeman was being used by Democratic leaders in Georgia in an endeavor to head off a threatened party split among Georgia Democrats.

Democrats paid from $5 to $5,000 for votes in Georgia this year, and "generally spent more money than the Republicans," Johnson told the committee.

Not one cent given to me was given to any delegate to the Republican National Convention," he declared. He said he received $9,000 from Illinois, "but not from Governor Lowden himself."

Talk of Lynchings in Politics.

Senator Kenyon asked about the disfranchisement of the Southern negro. Johnson said that 85 per cent. of the Georgia negroes were not permitted to vote.

"Georgia is honeycombed with blood lust," Johnson said. "Negroes are lynched for no greater offense than disputing the word of a white man. If a colored man wants to vote, the whites have to be certain he votes right."

"They wouldn't lynch a man for voting a Republican ticket, would they?" asked Senator Reed, indicating by a grin at Senator Kenyon that he considered lynching a fitting end for a Republican, but doubted that one would get it.

Johnson said: "Why, way back in Harrison's time a negro was foolish enough to tell some one that he voted for Harrison. Nobody has ever heard of him nor seen him since."

Senator Reed asked: "But you don't hold the Democrats responsible for that, do you?"

Johnson replied: "Yes, sir. The Democrats are as responsible for the disfranchisement of colored voters in the South as they are for the disfranchisement of a certain Missouri district."

Johnson then said that the Democrats spent much more money in Georgia than did the Republicans and intimated that they always did.

"Why then is the colored vote so solidly Republican?" asked Mr. Kenyon.

It was Senator Reed's chance. Johnson had aroused his disapproval in several verbal tilts in which the Missouri Senator, according to some views, came out second best.

"I'll tell you," Reed broke in as Johnson started to answer. "A colored fellow knows if he dies to vote for one fellow and fail to vote for another. He voted for the Democrats when I asked him why, he said he'd vote for the least corrupt party." Laughter drowned Johnson's attempts to reply and the hearing adjourned.

Says Smith Declared Negroes Barred.

CHICAGO, July 8 (Associated Press).—In his testimony today before the Senate Investigating Committee, Henry Lincoln Johnson, colored, said that the situation in Georgia was summed up in the following words, which he attributed to a speech by Senator Hoke Smith:

"In Georgia no negro is fortunate enough to vote, while no white man is too unfortunate to vote."

Asked about lynchings in the South, Johnson asserted that the great trouble was that white men were allowed to attack negro girls without punishment. Such a state of affairs greatly aggravated race feeling, he said. He cited alleged instances of white soldiers attacking negro girls during the war, and said that the soldiers, though discovered, went unpunished.

Johnson asserted the negroes were lynched for voting the Republican ticket, and that many negroes who had done so had disappeared mysteriously.

He charged that offers of Postmasterships were made openly by Wood backers to men of influence to get Wood votes. "Many of the men backing Wood were former Postmasters," he said.

"Were any of your men offered jobs as Postmasters?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"Not directly, but they would not let the crown be offered them too many times," Johnson answered. "I might have said I would use my influence."

Asked if Wood supporters "bought delegates," Johnson said he didn't know, but "they passed out plenty of jack to the boys."

Testifying yesterday, D. W. Huckaside of Warrenton, Ga., said he received $1,000 from a Mr. Moore of Statesboro, Ga., and about $600 in behalf of Governor Lowden. The other $500, he asserted, was returned, and the money expended was principally for traveling expenses.

Palmer Scoffs at Charges.

PORTLAND, ORE., July 8.—"They're welcome to investigate me until the cows come home," declared Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer here today on his way home from the Democratic National Convention, when informed that the Senate Committee investigating pre-convention campaign expenditures proposed taking up his campaign next.

"None of my money was spent," the Attorney General said. "What is the use of investigating now?"

Mr. Palmer said that he could not take the proposed investigation seriously.

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—Nine Democratic City Committeemen will be among the witnesses summoned to testify before the Senate Committee investigating Presidential campaign expenditures when the committee opens its inquiry here tomorrow. The committeemen were delegates to the National Convention and are said to have received money from National Committeeman Goltra to defray some of their expenses at San Francisco.

Edward F. Goltra and Joseph T. Davis denied knowledge of or participation in any campaign irregularities. Goltra characterized the charges as irregularities "ridiculous." "I took no interest in Palmer's campaign, but was in no way a part of the campaign management," Davis said.

EXPECTED JOHNSON STAND.

R. B. Strassburger, Who Backed Senator, Counts Him Loyal to Party.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—Ralph Beaver Strassburger of Gwynedd Valley, Penn., who was one of Senator Johnson's chief backers and helped largely to finance the Senator's primary campaign, upon being interviewed at his home tonight relative to Mr. Johnson's statement that he would support the Republican ticket, said:

"There never was any question in my mind as to the stand which Senator Johnson intended to take. I regarded it as particularly unfortunate that any question should ever have arisen as to his loyalty to the Republican Party and the ticket which, however, was mostly an outcry by Democratic newspapers hoping for a rift in our party.

"In his statement Senator Johnson struck the keynote of the campaign. The Republican Party and its nominee, Senator Harding, will stand back of its platform against the Wilson League, which is the very stand which developed Johnson's tremendous popular primary vote throughout the country.

"The question of our national future transcends any other issue, and Americans, both conservatives and progressives, should vote for and assist the Republican Party, which alone remains in this critical time as the bulwark of Americanism."

LEAGUER DEFEATS GRONNA.

Dr. Ladd Has Margin of 3,500 for Senate Nomination.

FARGO, N. D., July 8.—Two Independent Republican candidates for Congress and one Non-Partisan League candidate were nominated in the State primaries, while the Non-Partisan League candidate for United States Senator was nominated, on the face of almost complete returns.

In the First District, John M. Baer, Non-Partisan League incumbent, was defeated by O. B. Burtness, Independent Republican, by approximately 2,800 votes; in the Second District, George Young, Independent incumbent, was nominated by a margin of about 3,000 over Thomas Sheridan, Non-Partisan, and in the Third District, James Sinclair, Non-Partisan incumbent, was nominated by a margin of approximately 3,000 over P. D. Norton, Independent Republican.

Dr. E. E. Ladd of Fargo, Non-Partisan Leaguer, has a margin of about 3,500 over A. J. Gronna, incumbent, for the United States Senatorial nomination.

John Hagen, Independent Republican candidate for State Treasurer, retains a lead of 1,180 in the race for the Republican nomination against R. H. Walker, of Oliver County, indorsed by the Non-Partisan League.

TO ELECT STATE DELEGATES

County Republican Committee Fixes July 19 for Unofficial Primaries.

Unofficial primaries, to elect delegates to the unofficial State convention of the Republican Party in Saratoga on July 29, were decided upon yesterday by the New York County Republican Executive Committee at a meeting at 103 West Fortieth Street. The primaries will be held in the thirty-four Republican club houses throughout the city on July 19, and all enrolled Republicans will be notified of the date and voting places. The polls will be open between 6 and 10 P. M.

The committee also passed resolutions indorsing the Republican nominations at Chicago and the Republican platform. The thirty-four members of the committee voted unanimously to go by special train to Marion, Ohio, on July 22, when Senator Warren G. Harding will be officially notified of his nomination. Many other prominent New York City Republicans will make the trip.

SINGLE TAXERS BAR LA FOLLETTE TICKET

Announce They Will Bolt if Senator Is Made Third Party Nominee.

GROUPS AWAIT HIS REPLY

Prohibitionists Will Also Nominate and Hope Bryan Will Lead Them.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—As the radical groups out of which it is proposed to build a new "third party" at next Saturday's convention began arriving in the city today, "fourth" and "fifth" parties loomed as possibilities.

The Single Taxers precipitated the conflict. The party had called a convention at the Auditorium Hotel for the same days selected by the Committee of Forty-eight in calling the convention at the Hotel Morrison. It was the plan of the leaders of both the committee and the Single Taxers that the two conventions should get together. This plan was made difficult of accomplishment by the announced intention of the Committee of Forty-eight leaders to offer their Presidential nomination to Senator Robert M. La Follette.

Amos Pinchot and George L. Record of the Committee of Forty-eight were guests all of today at the La Follette farm at Madison, Wis., and are expected to return tomorrow with the Senator's answer to the proposal that he become the "Third Party" candidate. There was no intimation tonight as to what the answer would be.

If Senator La Follette is to be the Committee of Forty-eight's choice, the Single Taxers will play a lone hand, they announced. Jerome C. Reis, National Committeeman of the Single Taxers, issued a statement denouncing La Follette.

"The Committee of Forty-eight has a most wonderful opportunity to create the long-looked-for new political party in America, but La Folletteism will certainly be the wrong cue to follow," he said. "I do not believe there is one delegate to the Single Tax Party convention who could stomach La Follette, thoroughly agree with the Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements of the single tax convention, Herman G. Leow of New Jersey, that we need a statesman in the White House, not a demagogue. La Follette's entire political history is replete with the paternalistic and even socialistic legislation which the Single Tax Party unalterably opposes."

If a single tax fourth party springs up, the prohibitionists will become the fifth party to nominate. The Prohibition National Convention has been called for Lincoln, Neb., July 21, and Virgil G. Hinshaw, Chairman of the party's national committee, announced today that there would be a prohibition ticket in the field again.

"Both the Democratic and Republican conventions, by omitting a plank indorsing the Eighteenth Amendment, have dismally failed in living up to the standards demanded by the American people," said Mr. Hinshaw. "We of the Prohibition Party feel it incumbent upon us to maintain a party organization to give expression to the millions of dry voters in the country."

The prohibitionists have hopes that William J. Bryan might accept the Presidential candidacy of their party. But they have nothing on which to base these hopes.

Meantime the "Third Party" convention, which will open Saturday, will face a fight similar to the ones waged in the Republican and Democratic parties over the Irish plank. Frank P. Walsh, who is one of those mentioned as a possibility for the "Third Party" Presidential nomination, is bringing to the convention at the Hotel Morrison the Irish plank that was rejected by the other parties. It was announced that early in June the Committee of Forty-eight sent out 30,000 questionnaires on the Irish plank and that the replies to them indicated sentiment against the plank.

Representatives of twenty-two States are now in Chicago for the "Third Party" convention and more are on their way. Charles H. Ingersoll, of Orange, N. J., wealthy watch manufacturer, was added today to the list of possible candidates for President.

William Randolph Hearst, Arthur Brisbane and others of Mr. Hearst's political lieutenants are in Chicago and are taking a keen interest in the development of the new party. It was suggested tonight that Mr. Hearst might be considering the advisability of launching a "sixth party" with himself as standard bearer.

Believe La Follette Will Decline.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., July 8.—Amos Pinchot and George L. Record visited Senator La Follette today at his farm near this city. They returned here, and later Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was in conference with the Senator at the farm.

La Follette, who is recuperating satisfactorily, but who has been advised by physicians to rest for six weeks, has made no statement on politics, but will do so in an editorial in his magazine next week on the two national conventions. The judgment of qualified observers is that there is no likelihood that he would consent to head a third party as nominee.

Mr. Pinchot, interviewed this evening, gave out the following as all he had to say:

"Mr. Record and I spent a couple of hours with Senator La Follette this afternoon and went over the whole political situation. We asked that a campaign should be waged upon a fearless platform calling for Government ownership of the railroads and of the principal natural resources and that no land should be held out of use for speculation or to aid monopoly. The conference will be resumed tonight or tomorrow. No definite conclusions were reached."

Gilbert E. Roe of New York, former law partner of Senator La Follette, has been his guest for several days.

THIRD PARTY SHUNS LEAGUE.

New York Delegates, Off for Convention, Oppose Mention in Platform

Delegates to the convention of the Committee of Forty-eight, which will be held in Chicago tomorrow, left this city yesterday on two special trains. The New York delegation, it was learned, will ask the adoption by the convention of a short platform favoring public ownership of transportation and natural resources, taxation of land values, restoration of constitutional rights" and the recognition of collective bargaining as well as labor's effort to share in the management of industry. A majority of the New York delegates, it was said, were opposed to mention of the League of Nations in the platform.

"Four years' experience in expounding out the sentiment of all sorts of people in all parts of the country has convinced us that there is no popular interest in the League," said McAlister Coleman, a member of the Executive Committee of the Committee of Forty-eight and Chairman of the delegation from the Fourteenth Assembly District. "If the League becomes an issue it will be thrown into the campaign by the few men who control both old parties. At our convention the New York delegates intends to discuss the real economic problems that confront us all; for example, democratic ownership and operation of our railroads, the responsibilities of labor in the management of industries and the solution of the housing problem. These are subjects which concern the average American today."

Among the delegates were Swinburne Hale, William B. Brightman, John J. Duffy, Samuel Levin, Mrs. Marie Gaylord, Miss Lillian Conrad, Frank D. Halsey, Walter Frank and Eva Frank.

Fifty-four advocates of the single tax also left yesterday as delegates to the convention of the National Single Tax Party, which will be held in Chicago tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. Among them was Robert C. Macauley of Philadelphia, National President; ex-Mayor Fagan of Jersey City; William J. Wallace of Newark; Mark M. Dinkerman, E. Yancey Cohen, Treasurer of the organization; Joseph Dana Miller, editor of The Single Tax Review; Frank Chaderov and M. O'Neill, delegate from Boston.

Bayer Out for Secretary of State.

Herman W. Beyer, Deputy County Clerk, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Secretary of State. Mr. Beyer is a trustee of the Commonwealth Savings Bank and President of the Beyer Dyeing and Printing Company. He served on the Board of Aldermen from 1908 to 1909 and has been leader of the Fifth Assembly District since 1915. He is a member of the New York Athletic Club and fifteen other clubs and societies.

WANTS U. S. TO PAY ALL ELECTION BILLS

TALKS TO MASONS' LEAGUE

Declares Nominations Should be Made by Plurality Vote of Unbossed Delegates.

In his first public utterance since the Democratic National Convention, William G. McAdoo, at the fifteenth annual dinner of the National League of Masonic Clubs at the Waldorf-Astoria last night advocated a change in the national election law by means of which the expenses of national campaigns should be borne by the United States Treasury and that it should be made a criminal offense for a man to contribute a single dollar to influence an election.

"One thing America will never stand for, and that is the purchase of the Presidency of the United States," he declared. The 1,500 men and women in the room cheered and applauded this sentiment.

Mr. McAdoo said there was no greater menace in the United States today than the corrupt and improper use of money at elections. He said that contributors to campaign funds did not give unselfishly and illustrated a possible source of corruption in this respect by drawing on his experience as Secretary of the Treasury.

He denounced the financing of national campaigns by the profiteering interests and declared that even contributions by private citizens should be made utterly wrong and improper.

The Presidential primaries of the various States as at present managed were also attacked by Mr. McAdoo and he passed from this to pointing out the necessity for sending to national conventions unbossed delegates whose plurality vote would elect a candidate.

Says America Saved the Allies.

Mr. McAdoo made a spirited defense of the United States in the war and took issue with Dr. Warren W. Giles, a minister, who said that for 41 months the British Fleet was the only thing that saved this country from invasion. It was the United States that saved Great Britain, France and the other Allied nations, Mr. McAdoo maintained.

In a strong appeal for the League of Nations, not in partisan terms, Mr. McAdoo pointed out the urgent necessity for restoring not only Great Britain, France and other allied nations to economic security but the necessity for restoring to economic stability those powers against which the might of the allied nations was spread in the war.

Mr. McAdoo frequently was interrupted by applause. In opening his address he said he spoke purely as a private citizen who was happy to be a private citizen.

"We are approaching a political contest on which, more than on any other contest except perhaps that of 1861, hinges the destiny of the nation," he asserted. "The result of this contest is fraught with consequences that are so serious to the world that no man can foretell them.

"The American people owe it to themselves, at this time more than at any other time, to uphold the hands of the Senate committee recently appointed to look into the matter of campaign expenses. The appointment of the committee was one of the most intelligent and one of the few intelligent things the Senate did."

Great Menace Faces Country.

"There is one thing Americans will never stand, and that is the purchase of the Presidency of the United States, for the time will never come that the dollar sign will be the whole thing to the people of the United States.

"There is no menace that is greater today than the corrupt and improper use of money in elections. Every citizen should thwart the efforts of those who would contribute great funds to nominate a man to be President they do not do it unselfishly. These men who put up vast sums of money, Republicans and Democrats alike, all seek the return of their candidate and many of them seek to have favors returned from their candidates after they have been elected.

"I can tell you from my experience in the Treasury Department that if there were a change of the imposition of a cent on the duty imposed on certain articles the men who contributed the money to the campaign funds of a candidate who was successful might take back ten, or fifty, or one thousand times the amount they contributed.

"We should consider the advisability of a drastic change in the national election laws. This thing of financing a national campaign by the profiteering interests must cease and even contributions by private citizens should be utterly wrong and improper.

Treasury Should Pay Expenses.

"The expenses of the national elections should be paid for out of the United States Treasury and it should be made a crime for a man to contribute a dollar to influence an election. Not only would we thus spare the humiliation of begging for funds, but the cost of the campaigns would be reduced to one-fifth of what they are now.

"I was chairman of the National Democratic Committee in 1912, and I know something of the difficulty of getting money and the waste involved and of the prodigal expenditures necessary.

"If the National Government paid the expenses of the national campaigns and specified the legitimate objects for which expenditures might be made politics would be purified enormously.

"It would be a practical matter to the people and they would save ten, fifty, and a thousand times what they spent out of the Treasury, for then they would not have to pass laws to reimburse crooked politicians for what they put into the campaign expenses.

"We have got also to deal with the question of the Presidential primaries.

"Mr. McAdoo said that the primaries should be reformed so that delegates should go unbossed to the national convention and in a position to make a fight for the people. The man who obtains the plurality vote at the national convention, he suggested should be the candidate of the party.

Reviews America's Five Wars.

Reviewing the five wars fought in the history of the United States Mr. McAdoo said that at no time did the United States wait on any other nation for help.

Referring to the time when he was Secretary of the Treasury the speaker said it was then his duty to receive distinguished representatives of foreign nations who asked the United States to furnish their nations with credit and munitions to carry on the war. It was at the time when the U-boat warfare was at its height, when the skies and the seas were black and the commerce of Great Britain was threatened with annihilation while the armies of France and Britain were threatened with extinction. To all of the representatives Mr. McAdoo said he put the same question, How long would the war last? and none were more optimistic than to suppose that the war would end before the Summer or Fall of 1919. However, the entrance of the United States caused the war to be brought to a successful conclusion one year before the most optimistic experts of Europe predicted that it would end.

"I want you to have just pride in what America did," he continued. "It never was in danger from any foreign power. America saved freedom and civilization for the world.

Mr. McAdoo said no one could be more sensible than he to the suffering of humanity in England, France and Belgium, but he favored the ceasing of the suffering and saving children of America first, and charity as well as justice of the other nations.

He then spoke of the League of Nations, which he called "a necessary organization," and the only thing that would picture disarmament. He urged that the League be not spoken of in partisan terms.

Wants Life Economic Keynote.

The speaker was emphatic in advocating the necessity for lifting economic boycotts that still exist in the world.

"If we are still adhere to the teaching of the fiends Nazareno," he continued, "how can we sit idly by now that the hostilities are over and shut our eyes to the suffering of 110,000,000 of people in Europe and fail to assist them in their recovery and do our best to throw off the economic boycott that is killing people every day.

"If we are dead to every call of humanity, if we do not care for the dead and the suffering in the lands of our late Allies, we should remember that it is for our interest to promote tranquility and security in those lands and to join them in an association of a league of nations.

"With the high cost of living and with taxes as they are I feel that the can reduce these things more quickly by a restoration of the countries of the world than in any other way, for these nations would then not make demands on our resources. We have got to lend them $200,000,000 to pay the interest on their debts, because they are not able to pay. If we are willing to do this we ought to be willing to lend them enough to restore them to economic prosperity and thus reduce our own tax bills."

TURNS AGAINST SUFFRAGE.

California Woman Says It Brings Corruption and Crime.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 7.—Miss Annie Bock of Los Angeles, formerly an Equal Suffrage leader, in a letter to W. K. Anderson, Representative in the lower house of the Tennessee Legislature, received today, urged him not to support ratification of the suffrage amendment by this State.

"I was one of the prominent workers who helped to bring suffrage to California and I regret it," Miss Bock said in the letter.

"A year in politics has taught me that women are intolerant, radical, revolutionary and more corrupt in politics than men; also all this so-called reform leads to the Socialist co-operative commonwealth.

"Since suffrage," the Western writer continued, "there has been an alarming increase in immorality, divorce and murder in California.

"Woman suffrage has made cowards and pupets of men. It has coarsened and cheapened women. Were the men to vote on woman suffrage in California today it would not carry.

"Suffragists asked suffrage that they might get good men in office, and their cleaner for a fifty-fifty show for all offices.

"I shall do penance forever for the part I played in bringing suffrage to California.

"Please urge your colleagues not to do what will bring ruin and disaster, but to stand for that 90 per cent. of women who do not want suffrage, but are glad to trust all politics and governmental affairs to their loved husbands, fathers, sons and brothers.

"To the South, woman suffrage would bring more than calamity, the letter concluded.

HOBSON ASKS COX'S PROHIBITION VIEWS

A gardener, trying to make the front lawn look as it did when Governor Cox was a boy, was appealed to. He waved a trowel in the general direction of back of the barn, and the correspondents, going around a corner of the barn, saw Governor Cox down on his knees trying to blow life into a small fire of green logs, an emergency table set with paper plates and cups, a lot of packages lying around, and the Governor's son, James M., Jr., sitting with his feet dangling over the side of the automobile watching the proceedings.

The Governor, with his particular pride, his son, often slips away for trips into the woods to go hunting or go fishing, and today, when the Governor had finished and at the clear sunshine (he ran into rain later) he just decided to slip back to the old place for a picnic with his son, Jr.

Then the relentless correspondents came barging around the corner of the barn like Democratic candidates were especially surprised man. He stood with his head and a lighted match in one hand and just looked.

"You fellows win," he finally said. "Come to join the picnic. Run the car over to Middletown, son, and get some more chops and, all fix."

"We've got company."

Chum Jim, obeying orders, departed, and the Governor, commandeering planks and boxes, lengthened his table for the company, set out more paper cups, ran short of knives and forks and had to borrow some, and was just getting ready to put some potatoes in to roasting, when two more cars drove in sight.

The state-steered guests remained formal as the cameras were mounted and the stripes and—"No pictures, absolutely not an inch—put the machines up and you can join the picnic—but no movies." With the alternative of eating a picnic supper by candlelight, the movie men decided to forego a picture the movie fans on the mantelpiece.

Young Cox, who is a pretty fast driver, was then sent to Middletown by that time boiled the ham chops, a dozen of ice cream, he and of course wishes these to supplement food too, which Mrs. Cox had originally prepared for her husband and the boy.

Intuition and Chops.

While the city newspapermen wandered about gazing at the Governor's pigs or trying to milk some of the prize cattle that were surveying the invasion, the Governor was busy at the salting of the chops. That done he put them in a wire broiler and flopped them onto the embers of the log fire. Hands on his hips, a happy smile on his face, the youngish-looking Democratic standard bearer stood at the head of the circle watching those chops sizzling. Pretty soon an appetizing whiff came floating up.

"Smells almost like venison," said the Governor. "I tell you, fellows, there's nothing beats getting off into the woods somewhere, having your trapper or guide get a fire going, and then putting a piece of venison on it. The sharp in the air has sharpened your appetite; the woods are so quiet—why, it almost makes you think that civilization is a failure."

A tiny puff of smoke from the chops and the Governor broke off and quickly flopped the chops over.

"How do you know when they are done, Governor?" asked some one.

"Why, I guess it's intuition," was the answer, as the chops came off the embers and onto the plates. Right here let it be stated that the Governor's intuition was in first-class shape—they were done at just right—and the entire meal disappeared about as neatly as the Governor had disappeared to go picnicking with his son.

Then at the suggestion of somebody the "Future Chief" dedicated to furthering the cause of democracy and destined to meet hereafter without reference to who does the cooking was organized with Miss Marjorie Hutson, Cleveland correspondent, as the first President, the Governor having declined the nomination.

While no date has been set, Governor Cox expects soon to go to Washington for a conference with President Wilson. Friends of the Executive said today that several telephone talks had taken place between Governor Cox and Secretary Tumulty. It was pointed out that the visit was not likely to take place until after the first week in August, the time when the Democratic Committee will formally notify the Governor of his selection.

The Governor said today that he would go to Columbus on Monday and that barring his return to Dayton for notifications, he would make the Ohio Capital the centre of his campaign.

Interest in Bonaparte's Coming.

DAYTON, Ohio, July 8 (Associated Press).—Putting aside cares of being a Presidential candidate, Governor Cox spent the afternoon on a farm, his boyhood home, thirty-six miles from Dayton. The Governor answered many questions of the curious news gatherers concerning his early boyhood, which he spent on the farm. He also discussed many phases of farming.

Local interest is now turning to the approaching conference of the candidate with the subcommittee of the National Committee and Franklin D. Roosevelt, which will be held as soon as the party can arrive from San Francisco. The Governor will make no speaking engagements until he has conferred with the committee.

Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the Democratic Committee, E. L. Moore of Youngstown, the Governor's pre-convention campaign manager, and other party leaders are expected to participate in the conference.

ROOSEVELT'S BUSY OUTLOOK

Will Reach Chicago Monday, See Cox, and Then Hurry Home.

ON BOARD WESTERN PACIFIC SCENIC LIMITED, Wendover, Utah, July 8 (Associated Press).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Democratic nominee for Vice President, who is on his way East from San Francisco, said today that he would complete his campaign plans after consulting Governor Cox, Presidential nominee, and members of the Democratic National Committee.

His personal preference is to have the notification of nomination take place at his home at Hyde Park, N. Y. He will however, bow to the will of the national committee.

Mr. Roosevelt will stop at Glenwood Springs, Col., tomorrow for a twenty-four hour stay with Representative Lathrop Brown of New York, and will arrive in Chicago Monday morning. There he will arrange to meet Governor Cox at Dayton or Columbus, after which he plans to go direct to Hyde Park for a day's visit with his family.

The Assistant Secretary will see at least one of the yacht cup races off Sandy Hook from a destroyer and then go to Washington. Mr. Roosevelt said that he had considerable work to do at the Navy Department after the formal notification. He expects to take about a week's vacation with his family at Eastport, Maine, beginning July 25.

Gives Guarantee for Northville.

NORTHVILLE, N. Y., July 8.—This telegram was sent to Governor Cox at Dayton today: "William Wadsworth guarantees you 149 votes in Hope, Hamilton Township, N. Y., being total vote to be cast. And says he spoke no Postmasterships to other job

POLITICAL LEADERS CALL ON HARDING

Cox either has run behind his ticket or else there were contributory causes to his successes that cannot be encountered this Fall.

"In the first place, Cox never has been strong with Ohio farmers. We have counties in Ohio that have been overwhelmingly Democratic for years. Two counties that I might mention are Darke and Mercer. Fifty per cent. of their population are farmers, and despite the fact that they vote regularly for the Democratic ticket, Governor Cox never has succeeded in carrying them."

"In the 1912 campaign," Mr. Hard continued, "Cox was elected with Republican and Progressive candidates against him. In 1914 he was forced out of office by Willis, who also had running against him a Progressive candidate.

"Coming to the 1916 Presidential year, Mr. Hard went on, "we find that President Wilson carried the State by 80,300, while Cox won over Willis by only 6,416 votes. On the other hand, Senator Pomerene defeated Myron T. Herrick for United States Senator by 86,000 majority. Now, Mr. Herrick probably was the strongest candidate the Republicans had in Ohio that year. He had returned from Paris with an unusual reputation as Ambassador to France, one of our strongest candidate lost by 86,000, while Governor Cox had only one-sixth of Senator Pomerene's majority that year."

Discussing the 1918 campaign, when Governor Cox was up for re-election against Willis, Mr. Hard pointed out that Willis had been "accused" being a pro-German on account of his vote in Congress in favor of legislation forbidding passengers to travel on armed liners.

For the first time since his return to Marion, Senator Harding visited his office at the Marion Star, today, where he received the congratulations of the newspaper's staff. Many of the heads of departments of Senator Harding's paper have risen from office boys, printers' devils and newsboys. A few left to work on papers in larger cities only to return "back home" to the Star.

It was too early for Senator Harding to watch the preparation of today's issue. He had to get back to his campaign headquarters to work on his speech of acceptance, but he left with the promise to return at soon as he could some afternoon when his paper goes to press. The Senator expressed the wish to "make up the paper," a function which he, a practical printer, always took upon himself even after the Star had grown to a prosperous circulation.

"I'll be up to see it myself, I am one of the few I know of," Senator Harding boasted today. "I like the excitement in the office of a small country daily when it goes to press. When a paper has but one edition a day we are confronted with many last-minute problems that are not encountered on larger papers. For me there is hardly any greater fun than to be in the hustle and excitement of the Star office making up the paper in time to catch our trains.

All day long neighbors called at the inconspicuous green-painted house on Mount Vernon Avenue with remembrances and good wishes for Mrs. Harding. All sorts of bundles and packages were delivered at the Harding front door. Some were cut flowers in florists' boxes; others were bunches of flowers arriving just as they came from Marion gardens, which are now in full bloom.

Evidently the old-fashioned but kindly and neighborly custom of an exchange of home-cooked dainties still exists in Marion, for little girls called away from their dolls and small boys interrupted from defeating the Boche at the second battle of Chateau-Thierry arrived at the Harding front porch with cakes and preserves. And, when the children could not be found, their mothers carried over their gifts themselves.

Senator and Mrs. Harding entertained a few relatives and neighbors at dinner tonight. One of their guests was Mrs. E. H. McLean, who arrived from Washington to spend a few days with the Hardings. Mrs. Harding, kept from doing the marketing this morning by calling, Inez Mowhorter, the negro cook, rode downtown in the big Harding automobile and returned with the tonneau filled with delicacies and utensils needed in the household. From the street Mrs. Harding could be seen through the kitchen door busy with her servants during the intervals when the front door bell was not ringing.

Older Marion residents take great delight in telling how twenty-nine years ago Mrs. Harding, then Miss Florence Kling, defied her father's threats to disown her should she marry young Warren Harding, who had just bought the Marion Daily Star and had hardly a dollar to his name to put the little country paper on its feet.

Amos E. Kling, Mrs. Harding's father, who died a few years ago, was one of Marion's wealthiest men, and a stockholder in many thriving industries in this part of Ohio. That his daughter should go against his wishes and marry a young newspaper man with apparently no future at all, set him into a rage and he disowned his daughter and refused to recognize his son-in-law.

For many years he fought young Harding relentlessly in every enterprise the young newspaper man was engaged in. Politically, Kling fought Harding from tooth to toenail, as one of the old residents expressed it today. Every candidate the young owner of The Star was for, the older Kling was against.

In many ways his father-in-law's opposition was a great asset to Harding, elder Marionites say. The townspeople admired the pluck of the young woman who refused to be intimidated by her father and chose a life of struggle and poverty. Her wife's sacrifice, coupled with encouragement, Senator Harding has often told his Marion friends, filled him more than ever with the determination to make good. In the early days of The Marion Daily Star he was editor, typesetting youngster, make-up man, circulation manager and when the printing plant was short-handed he pulled off his coat and set type. Mrs. Harding, too, found time from household duties to help her husband in The Star office and she organized and looked after the squads of newsboys that delivered the growing little paper in Marion.

Some of those newsboys are business men in Marion and their allegiance is divided between Mrs. Harding and the Senator.

Mr. Kling's children took sides with their sister and when their father remarried ten or twelve years ago the second Mrs. Kling effected a reconciliation. Senator Harding had made a success of the paper and was prominent politically and the elder Kling and his son-in-law became as "fish friends as they had once been enemies."

United States Senator Hiram Johnson said today that he had received a "very cordial" telegram from United States Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican Presidential nominee.

MAY ABANDON "FRONT PORCH"

Chicago Hears That This Has Already Been Decided.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Concerning rumors that Senator Harding's "front porch" campaign will be abandoned, members of the Republican National Committee here, while confirming them, are indisposed to enter into an explanation other than expressing a general belief that it would be better to have Senator Harding's personality better known to the American people as a whole than for him to remain in semi-seclusion in his own State. Moreover the nomination of Governor Cox has put an entirely different complexion on affairs, and Republican leaders insist that an aggressive campaign on the part of Harding is absolutely necessary.

Harry M. Daugherty, Harding's campaign manager, said today of having received fewer than 300 insistent demands from Republican leaders throughout the nation asking that

A. H. MEADS CALLS FOR DARTMOUTH CHANGE

ATTACKS DISCIPLINE THERE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Albert H. Meads, as attorney of La Grange, Ill., whose son, Robert T. Meads, a student at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., recently shot and killed Henry E. Maroney, a fellow-student, returned last night from Hanover, where he has been investigating the affair, and today demanded the resignation of President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth.

Mr. Meade declared the shooting was the result of a quarrel over whisky smuggled over the Canadian border. He said that "bootlegging" by the students was so systematized that hundreds of youths had been engaged in the practice. He blamed President Hopkins for this condition, and said his resignation would be a fitting sequel to the slaying.

"I went to Hanover, N. H., to help my son the moment I heard of the regrettable affair," said Meads. "What I found out about conditions was so revolting as to be almost unbelievable.

"There are on file in the office of County Solicitor Noonan of Grafton County the depositions of more than 100 students, in which they state that they either engaged in or knew about the traffic in booze. To see an intoxicated student on the campus, they said, is a common thing.

"It seems," continued Meads's father, "that the boys hire an automobile truck for $100 a night, go over into Canada, purchase liquor at very low prices, and return, selling it in Hanover for from $16 to $20 a quart. It is true that my son was one of the 'bootleggers.'

"The fact is that, on the night of the shooting, Maroney came into the room where my son was studying for the June exams and purchased a quart of whisky for $16. He returned later with another student and demanded a quart for $8.

"On being refused he assaulted Robert and took the liquor. Robert followed him to a fraternity house and demanded the money. They fought and Robert shot him.

"This slaying should be blamed on the President of Dartmouth College and its other officials. If President Hopkins did not know of the whisky traffic the students were engaged in he was among a very small minority in the town.

"If he was aware of the 'bootlegging,' it is worse, for he failed in his duty to protect the youths intrusted to his care."

Attorney Meads said he would go to Hanover in September to press an investigation into conditions at the college before the Grand Jury.

Judge Daniel P. Trude, of this city, declared tonight that any defense of President Hopkins "is not necessary, as he is recognized as one of the ablest college presidents in the United States."

"It is my pleasure to have been a classmate of President Hopkins," Judge Trude said. "He already has received offers of the presidency of other institutions because of his fine record at Dartmouth. The charge that he could have prevented the transportation of liquor at Hanover is ridiculous. That is a duty of the police."

An answer to the charges made by Attorney Meads is expected from President Hopkins. John C. Redington, President of the Dartmouth Alumni Association of Chicago, has wired to Mr. Hopkins for his statement of the facts in the case, to be published over his signature as an answer to Mr. Meads's accusations.

Mr. Redington, who visited Dartmouth last month, said accounts of the shooting that he had heard there varied materially from the one given by Attorney Meads.

Boy Killed Stealing Ride.

Clarence Benson, 8 years old, of 209 East Forty-fourth Street, died last night in Bellevue from a fracture of the skull and internal injuries received when he fell from an automobile truck in the Forty-second Street tunnel between First and Second Avenues. The boy attempted to jump on an automobile truck which was towing another, slipped and fell under the wheels of the second truck.

CONCERNED OVER MISSOURI.

Republicans Consider Situation There Due to Funds Exposures.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Revelations made before the Senatorial investigating committee concerning the expenditure of the Lowden and Wood campaign funds in Missouri today forced the Republican National Committee to consider the situation produced in Missouri as a result.

For several hours Will H. Hays, Chairman of the National Committee, was closeted with Senator Spencer, National Committeeman Jacob L. Babler, David Procter and Judge Matt G. Reynolds, and the Missouri situation was gone into in detail.

When the conference was ended the only decision that had been reached was that Chairman Hays and other of the Republican campaign managers should hold another conference on the Missouri situation at St. Louis. No date was set for the conference, but it is expected that it will be held within the next two weeks.

At this conference it was officially announced the members of the Senate committee who are demanding the resignation of Babler as the National Committeeman from Missouri will be given a hearing. No intimation of the policy which the committee was to follow was given at the National Headquarters. It was officially denied that it had been suggested through the National Chairman that Babler resign.

At the same time it is known that the Missouri situation is displeasing to Chairman Hays and that he intends to do everything in his power to remedy it.

Senator James M. Reed, who, as a member of the Senatorial investigating committee heard the testimony of Babler and his lieutenants, was a visitor at the Republican headquarters today and had a chat with Chairman Hays. He was accompanied by Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who is chairman of the investigating committee. Both denied that they had been asked for their views concerning the revelations as to the expenditures of the Lowden funds in Missouri.

Senator Reed insisted that his call was a purely social one and that he had merely dropped in at the headquarters in the Auditorium Hotel when he had gone with Senator Kenyon to the hotel, where he is stopping.

"Is there any political significance in your call?" he was asked.

"Just exactly the same significance there was when Sullivan shook hands with Corbett when the two entered the ring at New Orleans," was his reply.

LANDIS ATTACKS WILSON.

Criticises President for Commuting Sentence of Cattle Swindler.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, in a statement addressed from the bench to members of the bar, today criticised the action of President Wilson in commuting the sentence of James Dorsey, reputed millionaire cattleman, of Gilbert, Ill., from eight years to four.

"I wonder what frame of mind he must have been in to cut such a sentence," the Judge said.

"Dorsey was convicted of using the mails to defraud. It was charged he sold 12,000 head of common stock cattle after advertising them by mail as pure bred Holsteins. It was also charged by the Federal Government that the cattle were diseased.

"This millionaire cattle king was sentenced some time ago to serve eight years in the Federal prison for using the mails to sell tubercular cattle throughout the West," Judge Landis said.

"Finally he was brought to trial and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. The sentence was affirmed by the Court of Appeals, but sentence was stayed a number of times.

"I suppose Dorsey's pardon is about ready. However, I am going to watch that man and this case with great interest."

CONGRATULATE ROOSEVELT.

had said he passed the night of June 7 and the morning of June 8 with them.

Other contradictions also were explained. Henry Hansler, a taxi driver at Cedarhurst, had said, according to Mr. Swann, that he drove Mrs. Pendleton to the railway station on the morning of June 11, while Mr. Pendleton had said that he had driven her there in his own car. Mr. Pendleton said the taxi driver had been taking Mrs. Pendleton to the station for the 10:28 train nearly every morning, but that on that particular morning he (Mr. Pendleton) had driven her to get the 9:36 train. His opinion was that, because of his routine calls at the Pendleton residence the chauffeur had made a mistake and, although he probably had called that day, he had not driven Mrs. Pendleton.

Another contradiction was that Mrs. Pendleton had said that she and her husband went to a moving picture show on the night of June 10, whereas her husband had said they dined with friends. It was explained that the visit to the moving picture show took place on the night of June 9. Mr. Pendleton's statement that he had dined with a friend on Long Island on the night of June 10 was corroborated by Raymond Little and other witnesses.

Says "Facts Seem to Shift."

"I am not doubting any one and I am whitewashing no one," said Mr. Swann. "The facts seem to shift one way and another from day to day."

"This is only one of several episodes that we were following down," said Chief Assistant District Attorney Talley. "There are others which are receiving as much attention as this one."

Mr. Swann turned over to reporters the transcript of the examination of Mr. Pendleton at the Criminal Court several days ago, in which he made statements which agree with those of the other witnesses questioned yesterday. At this examination Mr. Pendleton said he had not seen Elwell in 1920, but he later recollected casual meetings with him. One of these was at the race track on the day before the murder, when he said he had merely exchanged a greeting with Elwell.

Assistant District Attorney Dooling talked yesterday with Frederick Ingraham, a lawyer of 302 Broadway, who drew up a will for Joseph B. Elwell in 1916 which left the estate to Elwell's son. So far as he knew, the will had not been signed. The will which has been filed is of earlier date and cuts off the son and wife in favor of Elwell's parents.

Mrs. Marie Larsen, the housekeeper, who discovered the murder, was questioned again at the District Attorney's office, but told nothing new, according to Mr. Talley.

"Tony," the Bootlegger, Identified.

In their quest for evidence of the bootlegging plot in which Elwell's name has been involved, officials under James Shevlin, Supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent, yesterday established the identity of the man who is believed to have supplied the conspirators with thousands of dollars' worth of contraband liquor.

The man had been known to the officials as "Tony," but Mr. Shevlin's agents who were searching the city for him were said to have obtained admissions from some of the conspirators which fully established his identity.

Mr. Shevlin was in Washington, where he had been summoned to report on the Elwell whisky plot and other matters in connection with the suppression of the sale of liquors in this State. In his absence John B. Quigley, Assistant Supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent, and August Hasenflug, special counsel to Mr. Shevlin, conducted the bootlegging inquiry.

Mr. Hasenflug, who has been examining witnesses in the inquiry, said certain witnesses who had been summoned for examination during the day had been notified not to appear until further notice.

"We have decided they must not be questioned until leads Lord and Mangin are working on have been run down, and evidence which they expect to obtain has been accumulated in such form that when we question them they'll know they had better tell the truth," explained Mr. Hasenflug. "There has been a deal of lying on the part of some men called to this office and it is our purpose henceforth to let such fellows know that they can't deceive us."

Francis G. Caffey, United States Attorney for this district, has been in close touch with Mr. Shevlin. He is said to have insisted that no arrests be made until conclusive proof of guilt has been obtained. Prohibition agents expect to present such proof within the next few days.

SHOOTS SISTER BY ACCIDENT

Boy of 16 Held by Police—Girl, 14, May Die.

John Baalke, 16, of 624 Eleventh Avenue, was locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street police station on a charge of felonious assault late yesterday afternoon, after a bullet from his revolver accidentally had inflicted what surgeons said might prove to be a fatal wound in the head of his sister, Mary, 14.

According to the police, John took the revolver from the drawer of his dresser and laid it aside while he was looking for a stickpin. In a manner not explained, the revolver was discharged and one of its .45 calibre bullets struck his sister, who was in an adjoining room, in the head. The missile did not penetrate the skull, but caused such a wound that in Bellevue Hospital last night Mary's condition was described as "very serious." Baalke said he bought the weapon several months ago as a means of protection.

GROCERY TRUST CHARGED.

Proceedings Started in Kansas Against 38 Wholesale Concerns.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 8.—Receiverships, fines and ouster from the State are asked in proceedings filed in the Kansas Supreme Court today against thirty-eight wholesale grocery concerns, under the Kansas anti-trust law. The Supreme Court immediately issued an order restraining the companies, officials and employes from removing or obliterating records or correspondence that might substantiate the charges made.

Technically the grocers are charged with entering a combination in restraint of trade and it is charged that the alleged agreements not to sell below agreed prices were made through the Missouri-Kansas Wholesale Grocers' Association, of which the defendants are alleged to be members.

FOR NEW CABINET POST.

National Educators' Association Urges Secretary of Education.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 8.—The report of the Resolutions Committee of the National Educators Association, made public tonight, declares for early adoption of the Smith-Towner bill, which will create a Department of Education, whose head would be an officer of the President's Cabinet, and scores some of those opposing it. The report will be presented formally tomorrow.

Miss Annie Webb Blanton's resolution urging the States of Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, Tennessee, North Carolina and Florida to ratify the Federal suffrage amendment appeared in the committee's report with one or two clauses added. Miss Blanton is State Superintendent of Public Instruction in Texas.

A strong declaration is made for "a minimum of four years' carefully planned preparation following graduation from high schools for teachers."

LYAUTEY ENTERS ACADEMY.

French General's Reception Had Been Delayed Eight Years.

PARIS, July 8.—General Lyautey, former resident French Governor in Morocco, today was officially received by the French Academy. Originally he was elected to membership in the academy in 1912, but, owing to his duties in Morocco, and afterward in connection with the World War, his formal reception was delayed for eight years. Former President Poincaré and Count d'Haussonville were General Lyautey's sponsors.

The roster of the academy is now complete for the first time in many years. Georges Clemenceau should be the next member received, but the former premier persists in his determination not to enter the academy if the official ceremony in connection with receptions is to be performed.

AKROON, Ohio, July 8.—The estate left by Ohio C. Barber, the late match manufacturer, was appraised at $5,581,115 in an inventory filed in the Common Pleas Court here today. Stock held by Mr. Barber totaled $2,765,875.

RALLIES LEGION TO TILDSLEY

Radicals' Expulsion and Son's Service Called His 'Grave Crimes.'

Francis M. Fallon of 322 Riverside Drive, President of Post 469 of the American Legion, yesterday sent letters to all Legion post Presidents in New York County asking for their support for the re-election of Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Fallon declares that the two "grave crimes" for which Dr. Tildsley's re-election is being held up by certain members of the Board of Education are, first, that he had a son in the service, and, second, that "he was responsible for the expulsion from our teaching forces of radical teachers, some of whom stated that the red flag should fly above the American flag."

The board will meet on Thursday to consider Dr. Tildsley's re-election, and Mr. Fallon urges that all American Legion men appear before the board. He also asks the posts to write to four members of the board, who, he says, are either against Dr. Tildsley or have not declared themselves openly for him —Anning S. Prall, President, and George J. Ryan, Dr. John A. Ferguson and Joseph Yeaks.

GASOLINE; MATCH; 1 DEAD.

Clothes of New Jersey Woman Catch Fire After Cleaning.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 8.—Mrs. Thomas Hopkins, 1058 Anna Street, used gasoline to do some cleaning in her home today. The gasoline got on her clothes and gloves. With her in the room at the time was her blind husband.

She lighted a match to start a fire in her gas cooker. Her clothing caught fire immediately. She ran into the bathroom and jumped into a tub partly filled with water. Instead of putting out the flames, the water seemed to spread them, for when neighbors arrived after Mrs Hopkins had managed to make his way out of the house to call for help, the bathroom was in a blaze.

Mrs. Hopkins died a few minutes after the ambulance arrived. The fire did little material damage.

50 PER CENT. PROFIT O K'D.

Jersey Women's Clubs and Market Officials Limit Retailers' Gains.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, July 8.—Fifty per cent. gross profit on market produce is sufficient. This is the conclusion arrived at by the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, co-operating with the New Jersey State Bureau of Markets. These two organizations have started propaganda to limit the retailers' margin between buying and selling prices to 50 per cent.

The Bureau of Markets of the New Jersey State Department of Agriculture in a statement issued today and signed by Alexin L. Clark, Chief of the Markets Department, asks that housewives and consumers join the movement and support the work of the two organizations. The statement says that "50 per cent. profit is enough. It is not all profit. We know that, but 50 per cent.

BACKS CONVICTION OF UNION SPEAKERS

Pittsburgh Judge Upholds Action of Duquesne Officials in Arresting Six Organizers.

BUT REDUCES THEIR FINE

Holds Mayor May Refuse Permit in Interest of Public Safety—Will Appeal Case.

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—Judge R. M. Kennedy, in Common Pleas Court here today upheld the conviction of six organizers of the American Federation of Labor for attempting to hold a street meeting in Duquesne, Pa., without a permit, last May, but reduced the fine of $100 imposed by the magistrate in each case to $25. An appeal, it was announced, would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Under a city ordinance passed by the Council of Duquesne, a steel town fifteen miles from Pittsburgh, it is necessary to obtain from the authorities a permit before a public meeting can be held.

On May 3 R. W. Riley, secretary of the National Committee of Iron and Steel Workers in the Pittsburgh district; Basa Daniels, organizer of the United Mine Workers; John Oichon, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor; J. S. Beaghen, organizer of the Bricklayers' Union; James S. Sause, organizer of the Boilermakers' Union, and W. M. Finck, an instructor in Brookwood College, Katonah, N. Y., each tried to make a speech at a street meeting in Duquesne.

The men claimed they had applied for a permit for the meeting and had heard nothing from Mayor George S. Crawford. As each tried to address the crowd he was approached by Thomas J. Flynn, Chief of Police, and asked whether he had a permit. When none was shown, each man was arrested and taken to the City Jail.

The men were arraigned the next morning and each fined $100, with the option of thirty days in the County Jail in Pittsburgh, and later were removed to this city. The case was appealed on the ground that the ordinance was "void, illegal, unfair, discriminatory, oppressive and unreasonable and in violation of the constitutional rights of the people to free speech and free assemblage."

Judge Kennedy, in his decision, held that under the ordinance it is necessary, before public meetings can be held, to obtain a permit, and if the mayor in his judgment feels the proposed meeting will be detrimental to the public, he can refuse to grant a permit. Refusal of such a permit, the court held, is not an invasion of the rights of the people, but if the meeting might tend to provoke disorder, refusal of the permit affords a protection and a preservation of their rights.

"It is true that the Mayor," said Judge Kennedy, "might have thrown a cordon of police around the meeting, and permitted it to proceed, but the presence of police at such a time is not always an assurance of peace, and if the Mayor in his judgment deemed that impractical or unsafe, and I feel that the safer way was to forbid the meeting, how can his action, viewed in the broad sense, be an infraction of the rights of the people?

"It is to be observed," continued Judge Kennedy, "that the ordinance does not prohibit assemblages, public meetings, &c. On the contrary, it provides that the Mayor shall issue a permit therefor, unless detrimental to public interest, and that the City of Duquesne, acting through and by him, is the judge. It is not the cause of organized labor to which the Mayor objects; it is the open discussion of such a subject. He cannot refuse a permit because he does not approve of the subject, but the open discussion of the subject, which presents to him an entirely different question.

"This was an assemblage upon a public street. The avowed intention of the meeting was to publicly discuss a subject in a locality where in the past its discussion has been the cause of riots, bloodshed and death, a subject which at this time provokes great excitement, bitter feeling and inflamed passions among those who discuss it.

"The time for the meeting was fixed for a Sunday afternoon in May, at which time an unusually large number of idle and curious people are on the streets.

"Believing, therefore, that the ordinance in question is of the same general class as that sustained in the cause of the commonwealth versus Curtis, supra, the defendants were legally convicted of its violation. In view of the testimony in these cases, we are, however, of the opinion that the offenses do not call for the extreme penalty imposed by the ordinance, and have therefore fixed the fine at $25 in each case."

'MILLIONAIRE' CREW ON THEIR RETURN TRIP

Fireman of the Frederik VIII. Go to Pier in Automobiles Loaded Down with Purchases.

With every member of her "millionaire" crew at his post the Scandinavian-American liner Frederik VIII. sailed yesterday for Christiania and Copenhagen. She carried 1,135 passengers. When the vessel sailed for New York there was a strike, which threatened to be a national menace in Denmark. When it appeared that the sailing of the Frederik would be postponed a number of business men, some said to be members of Denmark's wealthiest families, volunteered to man the vessel. For that reason the ship's company won the title of the millionaire crew.

The strike is over, but the members of the crew elected to fill their contract as they had signed for the round trip. So Hoboken witnessed yesterday the rare sight of firemen arriving at the pier in automobiles with many articles they had bought in this country.

The 300 members of the crew have had a two weeks' holiday here. Two of them, it was said, had made a trip to San Francisco and returned yesterday morning.

SAYS BOY-ED HID GOLD AT OLD TRINITY GRAVE

Means, Admitting German Deals Early in War, Is Grilled in King Will Case.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Gaston B. Means's alleged activities as a German secret agent under Captain Boy-Ed were aired again in court today in Means's testimony in the suit brought by him and Mrs. Mary Melvin to probate the alleged second will of James C. King, late millionaire lumberman.

Means's alleged connection with the German spy system prior to this country's entrance into the war had first come to light two years ago, in the previous action to prove the second will.

He testified today that he met Boy-Ed and his friends at the German Club in New York City. A tomb in Old Trinity churchyard was another meeting place, and large sums of money which passed between him and Boy-Ed, he declared, were cached behind the tombstone to be called for by Means.

The court overruled a motion by Means's attorneys asking that the Northern Trust Company, trustee of the King estate, be required to produce all correspondence with Assistant District Attorney James Dooling of New York and a former Government agent of the name of Ambruse.

In his testimony as to transactions with Boy-Ed, Means said that, after making arrangements with the Captain, he began work to learn what the United States shipped to England, adding that this was done before America entered the war.

"I was receiving $100 a day for my services," he testified, "and sometimes I would get $1,000 a week. While I was doing this work for Captain Boy-Ed I did not work for the Burns Detective Agency. This agency could have made money, but the company was decidedly pro-English.

"I remember that Mrs. King invested $25,000 in rubber, to be shipped to Germany. I made the deal at the market," Means declared.

116 TO JOIN POLICE FORCE.

Graduate from Training School Today and Report for Duty Tomorrow.

One hundred and sixteen new patrolmen will become members of the police force tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, when they will report to various precincts for duty. They will be graduated from the training school at Headquarters today, after two months of intensive training. Many are ex-service men.

With the assigning of the new patrolmen, Commissioner Enright intends to do some "house cleaning," particularly in the East Fifty-first Street and West Forty-seventh Street Stations. Twenty veteran patrolmen will be transferred from the East Fifty-first Street Station tomorrow to make room for twenty-six new men. Ten old patrolmen will also be transferred out of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, and sixteen of the recruits will take their places.

ACCUSED OF EXTORTION.

Storekeeper Charges Man with Demanding $10 on Income Tax Threat.

Francis L. Lewis of 159 West Ninety-seventh Street, who said he was a Government census agent, was locked up in the West 100th Street Station last night on a charge of extorting $10 from Samuel Levine, a storekeeper at 2,802 Broadway, to conceal the fact that Levine had not filed an income tax report.

The storekeeper also said that Lewis demanded $10 from him for concealing the omission. Levine said he gave Lewis a marked $10 bill, and then called in Detective Sergeant Love, who arrested Lewis. The detective said that when he searched Lewis at the station he found a marked $10 bill in his pocket in addition to a Deputy Sheriff's shield for Richmond County, issued in 1915. Lewis denied the extortion charge.

5,000 AT FUNERAL OF POLICEMAN'S VICTIM

40 CARRIAGES IN CORTEGE

Crowd at Services Largest Ever Seen in Neighborhood—Many Floral Tributes.

On the first anniversary of his marriage, funeral services for Charles Tucker of 527 West Forty-sixth Street, who was accidentally shot and killed on Monday by Patrolman John Wissel of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, were held yesterday morning in the Sacred Heart Church on West Fifty-first Street. The funeral procession was said to have been the largest ever seen in the neighborhood. There were forty carriages, five of which were filled with floral tributes from friends and relatives.

Special police were stationed in the vicinity of the Tucker home to prevent any untoward demonstration that might grow out of the shooting. There was no disorder. More than five thousand persons viewed the body before the services. Mrs. Sarah Tucker, his widow, nearly collapsed as she entered the church.

The services were conducted by the Rev. William C. Ryder. Father Ryder spoke of the excellent character of Tucker and of his popularity in the neighborhood.

Tucker and four friends were riding in an automobile along Seventh Avenue, near Forty-sixth Street, Monday afternoon when the machine was boarded by Patrolmen Wissel and Hogan who said they had heard shots fired from it. While searching the occupants for fire-arms Wissel accidentally shot and killed Tucker. He arrested Cornelius Egan of 502 West Twenty-ninth Street, and Charles Gleason of 447 West Forty-sixth Street, charging them with the homicide.

The next morning Wissel confessed to a superior officer that he and not Gleason and Egan had killed Tucker. He said he had been afraid to admit it before. Assistant District Attorney John R. Hamlin, after questioning Wissel, exonerated him from blame but said Wissel had been imprudent in charging others with the death of Tucker. Wissel is yet to be disciplined by the Police Department.

John Cacadonia, of 500 West Forty-fifth Street, Frank Ruchichiano of 442 West Forty-fifth Street, with Egan and Gleason, the companions of Tucker in the automobile, were discharged by Magistrate Corrigan in the West Side Court on a charge of suspicion of grand larceny in connection with possession of the machine.

Realty Operator's Will Offered.

In his will, filed here yesterday, Hyman Hein, real estate operator, who died at his home, 3 West Eighty-eighth Street, on May 22, left $125,000 outright to the widow, Emma, and $125 per week for her maintenance. She is to have the residuary estate as well after bequests of $5,000 each to his mother, Frances Hein, his brothers, Louis and Harry, all of 251 West Eighty-ninth Street, and Theodore, of 47 West Eighty-ninth Street, shall have been paid.

NEEDS VOLUNTEERS FOR QUERY BOOTHS

Community Service Could Easily Use 200 Women to Impart Information.

FALLING OFF OF ATTENDANTS

And the Work Is Particularly Heavy In Summer—What They Want to Know.

Volunteer workers, it is announced by Community Service, are needed for the information booths which are scattered through the city. Miss Shand, in charge at headquarters, 15 East Forticth Street, was asked if they could use two or three hundred volunteer workers for the booths.

"Could we!" she exclaimed. "Could we!"

It was explained that they work in three shifts and that workers were needed, especially for tiding over the hot weather.

"A great many of our regular workers have left during the past few weeks," she said.

This, it was said, was due not only to the usual Summer exodus to cooler spots, but also to a cooling of the ardor of the workers. Possibly they were suffering from uniformitis, it was suggested, and with the marked decrease in the number of uniformed men coming to the booths for information, their enthusiasm likewise waned.

The Summer months are always heavy, New York being full of outsiders at this season. It was pointed out that just any one would not do for the work—that intelligent women are wanted.

"At first, we thought we would be able to get them all over thirty and under well, never mind," it was explained. "Now we have had to lower the entrance requirements, and we are glad to get volunteers from twenty-five up. We train the new worker in the office first, then in the booth with some one experienced to work with her. As soon as she knows where to look for the information and has got a grasp of the work, she is left with full responsibility. She always has headquarters to fall back upon, however, and, if she cannot handle any inquiry, may send the inquirer to the office."

Booth Workers Dwindle.

About 500 women have done this work to date. Recently the roster of active workers numbered 385. But, since the men in uniform have ceased coming to the booths in such numbers, the list has shown decided gaps. The old guard, of about one hundred, is reported to be as faithful as ever.

The information about everything for everybody booths hope to solve the vacation problem for girls in this town this Summer. They will be told where they can swim, play tennis or golf, fish or camp; where they can go for short trips or week-ends. The girl coming into town a stranger is in particular need of this information.

There is a steady stream of people wanting to know where they can get positions of every kind, from mill hand to lady's maid. Community Service maintains no employment bureau—officially—but, unofficially, they have placed many applicants. They give them advice, and the applicant finds the advice so practical that it almost invariably works.

A man came to a booth recently who wanted to get to California, but had no money for his ticket. Stumped? Not a bit of it. He was sent to the office, and the office sent the young fellow down to the Panama Steamship Company, with the suggestion that he work his way out. Two or three have been sent that way and they reported back that the company appeared glad to have them. Experienced booth workers make light of this service and say that they are able to place people because, in the course of their training and incidental to their regular work, they learn a lot of things.

"The rooming bureau is a strong feature of the work," said the occupant of one booth. "Only this morning I had a couple from Holland come up to the booth to ask if they could possibly find a place where they could live in New York at a reasonable rate. They had arrived the day before and gone to one of the hotels and the good vrouw had almost fainted at the rates asked. Never had she dreamed of such a thing."

Looks for Lenient Landlords.

The old Pershing Club's officers' file is used by the Community Service rooming bureau as the base of their card index system. When the Pershing Club closed its doors, the file was taken over bodily and the work carried on. The people whose rooms are listed therein are said to be more altruistic than the ordinary landlord or landlady. They will not rent rooms to "anybody" and won't put their names and addresses down with ordinary agencies. They are more reasonable in their terms, it is asserted, and give preference to the people sent by the information booths.

Only the very mildest form of eavesdropping is necessary to discover that the booth worker's day is an interesting one. Standing near the little booth and busily reading THE NEW YORK TIMES one notices an excited little Frenchman gesticulating frantically and talking to the woman who is with him.

"I tell this lady," he shouts, after the manner of one speaking a strange language to a stranger—"I tell my wife," he repeated, "that if anything go wrong, go to the lady in the booth. I just brought her over and cannot take care of her all the time. I have to work. I tell her if a man is saucy to her, tell the lady in the little white house and she will take care of her."

With that the Frenchman put his hand under the lady's chin and tilted up her head so that her face could be seen.

"You see," said he with great point and simplicity, "she is pretty girl."

The occupant of the booth gave assurance that she would do as he promised and that his new wife should not lack protection if she asked for it, and the Frenchman departed, well content.

Next a sailor arrived with a kitten. A man had given it to him with the request that he hold it a minute, and it was already a half hour, he said. What should he do with the kitten, miss? He was told he might leave it and this victim of the latest variation of the hold-the-baby trick gleefully hands over the kitten and likewise departs comforted.

Aiding Helpless Humanity.

"Helpless humanity is about right," says the worker. She tells an amusing tale of an elderly woman who got her shoes thoroughly wet and asked what to do with them. The sympathetic worker gave her minute instructions and directions.

"A week later this woman came up to me a block or two from here and said: 'You told me what to do about my shoes and I did it, and they are all right. I want to thank you.'"

Indorsements and expressions of appreciation are received from people coming from almost all parts of the world. One woman, a New Zealander, who thought she was going right through, found she would be held up here for a couple of months. She stopped at a booth and was sent to the office. She knew no one and was almost sick with lonesomeness and homesickness. She found a place to live and frankly did some visiting around at the booths, so that she would not forget how to talk altogether, she explained.

The Rotarians dispersing after their recent convention at Atlantic City, said they found the booths a great help. These Rotary Club members were here three days and they asked all sorts of questions—the questions that Southerners and Westerners ask in New York, and where to shop, what sights to see, &c.

Interesting sidelights are cast on the mental condition of some of the returned men who apply to booth workers.

One of these phoned headquarters that an ex-soldier had asked for information as to the locality of the officer in charge of Summer camp work. As he said he was a total stranger in the city, and as it was time for her to go off duty, she had taken him to the required office. She said she had waited an hour with the man for the officer's arrival, and must leave him and what ought she to do?

The officer said later that the man had lived in New York most of his life, and knew the city thoroughly, but apparently felt too dazed to find his way about. The officer, who talked with him, said: "Shell-shock."

What They Want to Know.

Many of those inquiring at the booths ask about one thing when they want to know about something quite different, and this phase of the matter, resembling the peculiar psychology in the witness, calls for careful handling. A little deftness on the part of the booth worker usually brings out the real question or questions that the applicant hesitates to ask. Here are some of them taken at random from the very brief records kept by booth workers:

Where to get working papers.
Fast rates in New York City.
Reconstruction work abroad.
How to apply for positions in Canal Zone.
Is a discharged man exempt from jury duty?

Where is Meuse Division Society of the Fifth Division?
Is there a five weeks' engineering course given anywhere?
Hotel accommodations for reasonable prices.
Employment for civilians, men and women, as well as uniformed men.
What States are giving bonuses, how to apply for them without returning to home State?
How to volunteer to sing in prisons.

What to wear to dance at Seventh Regiment Armory.
Where to find Finnish neighborhood in New York City where a man from Poland could get acquainted.
In which of the public schools are the army and navy food sales?

SAYS HE HEARD SNOW PLAN WIFE'S DEATH

OVERHEARD ON TELEPHONE

Woman's Attorney Reveals Statement of "Horrible Plot" Made by a Detective.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Preliminary hearing of Chester A. Snow, a millionaire patent attorney of this city, and two others, who are charged with a conspiracy to murder Mrs. Addis Hubbard Snow, divorced wife of the attorney, was opened today in the Federal Police Court.

Henry E. Davis, counsel for Mrs. Snow, testified that he had listened-in on a telephone conversation between Mrs. Ena P. Acker, a private detective, and Snow, during which the latter, Davis declared, agreed to plans for "doing away" with Mrs. Snow.

Davis told the court that on July 5 he was summoned to Mrs. Snow's home and that later Mrs. Acker arrived and told them that she had come "to disclose the most horrible plot I ever knew."

She said, according to Davis's testimony, that she had been employed by Snow at first to involve Mrs. Snow by trailing her, shadowing her and being in company with her to get "something on her."

When nothing came of this, Davis quoted Mrs. Acker as saying Snow proposed to Mrs. Acker to get rid of Mrs. Snow—"to get her out of the way by any means she might."

Mrs. Acker's plan, as Davis testified Mrs. Acker explained it to them, was to take Mrs. Snow in an automobile and administer poison or a sufficiently powerful drug and to have the automobile turned over in a ditch in such a way as to appear as if Mrs. Snow's death was an accident.

Hugh Milton Langdon has been arrested in the case with Mrs. Acker on the charge that he was to have driven the automobile.

DRY AGENTS VISIT BEACHES.

Squads Descend on Coney, Rockaway and Other Resorts—One Arrest.

Complaints of illicit sales of liquor at beach resorts in the city yesterday caused John B. Quigley, Assistant Supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent, to send several squads of enforcement officers to Coney Island, Rockaway, North Beach and South Beach, Staten Island. It was reported last night at the prohibition enforcement office in the Custom House that several arrests had been made, but the name of only one of the offenders was made public. He was Henry Mensing of 744 Richmond Terrace, Staten Island, who was arrested in the restaurant conducted by the L. I. Harris Corporation on the boardwalk at South Beach. A quantity of whisky was seized by enforcement officers following Mensing's arrest.

The police and enforcement officers yesterday were looking for three youths who on Wednesday night, posing as prohibition enforcement officers, held up Fred Wilmot in his hotel at 404 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City, and, after threatening to arrest Wilmot on a charge of violating the Volstead act, assaulted him.

Wilmot told detectives that during the attack one of the men discharged a pistol close to his body. The youths were scared off by others in the hotel, Wilmot said, and escaped in the automobile in which they drove up to the hotel.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING.

Instances Showing There Are Right and Wrong Ways to Go About It.

There is the wrong and right way for co-operative marketing to obtain the greatest results. They must be organized and operated along sound business lines, according to experts of the Bureau of markets of the United States Department of Agriculture, who cite two instances to prove their point.

A sweet-potato co-operative marketing association was formed in a New Mexico county that boasted seven sweet-potato warehouses. Six of these warehouses were ignored in organizing the association. The owner of the seventh warehouse was permitted to hold 51 per cent. of the stock. With such a monopoly, this gentleman was able to control the business of the association, with the result that all the sweet potatoes were stored in his warehouse, and the other warehousemen faced the threat of being driven out of business. However, the seventh warehouse owner was finally made to see the error of his ways, and through the assistance of the field marketing agent of the United States Department of Agriculture the association has been reorganized upon a truly co-operative basis.

In the adjoining county were two men who had made a considerable fortune in sweet potatoes, largely through their ability to store their potatoes in their own warehouses. The other sweet-potato growers were able barely to eke out a small profit, because they were compelled to sell their produce immediately. The two warehousemen finally were prevailed upon to interest themselves in the formation of a co-operative association. The association was thereby enabled to negotiate a loan from the bank for the construction of a warehouse to take care of the pooled produce. This was such an encouragement to the farmers that it was soon necessary to construct another building because of a considerable increase in crops.

The two leading sweet-potato men in this association do not hold a majority of the stock. The organization is a co-operative one in the full meaning of the word. Each member is on an equal footing with every other member. At a recent meeting of the association it was announced that through the combined efforts of the farmers $40,000 in additional profits had been secured, with all the seed sweet potatoes yet to be sold.

COPYRIGHT TIME EXTENDED.

Great Britain Will Make Date Conform to Peace Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—American authors, under a reciprocal plan of the United States and Great Britain, are to enjoy copyright privileges in Great Britain for their works which are published not later than six months after the actual termination of the war between all the Central Powers and the British Government, a date which must be hereafter determined.

British subjects, reciprocally, enjoy copyright privileges in the United States by virtue of the President's copyright proclamation of April 10, 1920, provided they comply with the American copyright laws, and such compliance must be before the expiration of fifteen months after the date when the President issues his proclamation of peace.

Although American publication rights in Great Britain are conditioned upon publication of the work not later than six months after "termination of the war" as hereafter to be fixed by the British Government, the latter Government has assured the United States that if it should happen that the date of termination of the war, when so fixed by Great Britain falls in advance of the President's peace proclamation, Great Britain then will be prepared to take the necessary steps to substitute for the expression "termination of the war" a date corresponding to whatever may be the date of the President's peace proclamation.

Between cost price and selling price is enough on any kind of produce.

For the past four weeks the committee of women interested in the movement in ten cities of New Jersey have reported gross profits of 75 to 200 per cent. is common. These two agencies are now watching the prices on berries. Several carloads a day are shipped out of Hammonton district. Next week the two agencies will devote their attention particularly to cabbage.

WOOLEN MILLS SHUT DOWN.

Special to The New York Times.

LAWRENCE, Mass., July 8.—The four local mills of the American Woolen Company, employing about 14,000 persons, closed this evening for an indefinite period because of business conditions and lack of orders.

William M. Wood, President of the company, made the announcement several days ago regaring the closing of the mills before July 10. No definite date has been set for reopening them.

Books that are Helpful

Right thinking means right doing, and to think right is not necessarily a matter of conscience—although the man of conscience generally thinks right. There are ways of training the mind through the reading of inspirational books, and you will find no better way to begin than with one or more of the books listed below. The term "right doing" comprehends the conservation of one's health, and "right thinking" is an all important factor in preserving the individual's health. The more you know of the mind the broader your vision and the keener your interest in life.

OLYMPIC SAILS EAST WITH RECORD LIST

T. F. Ryan, James Speyer and W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Among the 730 First Cabin Travelers.

The White Star liner Olympic sailed yesterday on her first trip eastward as an oil burner with the largest number of passengers carried by a vessel since the war. She had 1,245 passengers, of whom 730 were in the first cabin. The pier was packed with visitors when she backed slowly out into the river and began her voyage to Cherbourg and Southampton.

W. A. White, inventor of the oil burning system with which the Olympic is equipped, is making a round trip on the liner. Because oil fuel has to be transported across the Atlantic, the Olympic is carrying 27,000 barrels.

Thomas F. Ryan and Mrs. Ryan were among the passengers. Mr. Ryan refused to discuss finance or business. "Not a word about anything of anybody," he said. DeLancey Nicoll and H. E. Vreeland were among the friends who came down to wish him bon voyage.

James Speyer, accompanied by Mrs. Speyer, was also on board. One of those who booked at the last minute was William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. His name did not appear on the passenger list.

Shortly before the Canopic of the White Star Line sailed with full cabins from Pier 60, North River, for the Azores, Gibraltar and Naples yesterday afternoon, Detectives J. J. Kelly and Stephen J. Dunleavy of the line searched the ship for would-be stowaways. They found two, and one of them on being questioned proved, the detectives said, to be a man for whom the Federal authorities have been seeking.

He is Salvatore Pessarello, of 67 President Street, Brooklyn, who a few weeks ago was arrested in Boston, the detectives say, in an alleged attempt to smuggle large quantities of morphine and other narcotic drugs. The pier detectives turned over the man to detectives of the Italian squad from Police Headquarters.

The other stowaway was Rocco Fellano, 30 years old, who said he lived at 55 Grove Street, and had $100 in his pockets but wanted that to spend when he reached Italy.

OPPOSES FIREMEN'S UNION.

Newark Official Rules Against Man Attending St. Louis Convention.

William J. Brennan, Director of Public Safety of Newark, has expressed his disapproval of Newark firemen attending the convention of the National Firefighters' Union in St. Louis in September. He has put in force a rule that no fireman shall leave the city for more than twenty-four hours without stating his destination and getting permission.

Director Brennan said he is opposed to outsiders meddling in the affairs of Newark, and that the "firemen are city servants, sworn to uphold the law, and must not take dictation from outsiders."

SEES LOWER GRAIN PRICES.

The re-establishment of an open futures market for grain, particularly for wheat, is likely to result in somewhat lower prices for grains than those now prevailing, in the opinion of Alfred W. Mansfield of the firm of Thomson & McKinnon, who has just reached New York from Chicago.

Mr. Mansfield argues that with the nationwide credit situation already strained, with transportation systems not functioning at anything approaching their normal capacity and the requirements of industry and with the prospects for good crops, the elimination of the Government's price guarantee for wheat and the opening of wheat markets will tend to force prices downward. If the foreign demand abates, as many believe it will, Mr. Mansfield thinks this will be an additional reason for expecting lower prices.

"The farmer," he says, "unless he is in a very strong cash position, will be unable to carry over this year's production, as he has in former years. His local bank will not be able to give him extensions this year such as it has done in the past. This situation, no doubt, will bring out a great deal of selling of cereals and undoubtedly will force liquidation of other commodities."

TONNAGE SHOWS DECREASE.

Fewer Ships Built in U. S. Than in Preceding Year.

The total shipping built in the United States, including a small tonnage built for foreign owners, and officially numbered by the Bureau of Navigation, Department of Commerce, for the fiscal year ending June 30, last, aggregated 2,241 vessels of 3,860,484 gross tons, compared with 2,158 vessels of 3,734,741 gross tons during the preceding fiscal year.

The peak of production, under the vast shipbuilding appropriations by Congress to win the war, was reached in the Autumn of 1919 and the following Winter, when, from September, 1919 to February, 1920, the output was at the rate of 4,250,000 gross tons a year. This rate was maintained through the proceeds of Federal taxation and of the sales of Liberty bonds applied by Congress to shipbuilding, involving a total expenditure for ships since June 30, 1917, of about $3,000,000,000, with an annual interest charge of about $150,000,000.

The recent reduction in Government construction and the increase in private construction, involving a gradual decrease in the total output, reflect the slow transition from war conditions to peace conditions and the beginning of the re-establishment of commercial and economic principles in shipbuilding, according to the Commerce Reports.

Army Bugler's Wife Missing.

George Worth of 336 West Forty-sixth Street, asked THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday to help find his wife Norma, who has not been heard of since she left home on Wednesday morning. Worth served as a bugler in the 152d Depot Brigade, Seventy-seventh Division. His wife, who is known among her friends as Billie Glover, was Norma McGlasson of Oklahoma. They were married in March, 1919. Mrs. Worth had jewelry valued at about $500 and $100 in cash. She is five feet tall, has blue eyes and dark hair.

CHAUFFEUR HELD AFTER RAID ON BANK

DENIES HE WAS IN TOWN

Detectives of Corona, L. I., detained Abe Weinberg, a chauffeur, at the Hunters Point Police Station last night after Policeman Charles Blaes had identified the chauffeur as one of a party of seven young men who sped through Jackson Avenue, Corona, in a big automobile immediately after the attempted holdup of the Bank of the Manhattan Company's branch at Corona by seven auto bandits during the luncheon hour on Wednesday.

When Weinberg was locked up, at the direction of Captain Patrick Randles of the Detective Bureau, detectives said it had been established that Weinberg obtained the car, identified as the one the bandits used, from the Upton garage, 604 East Ninety-sixth Street, Manhattan, returning it to the garage at 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening. Weinberg denied that he was in Corona on Wednesday. He had taken a party of three men and three women to Rockaway Beach, he said, meeting them at Fifty-ninth Street and Lexington Avenue, Manhattan, in response to a telephone call. The Queens Boulevard, main route from Rockaway to Manhattan, runs through Corona about a half mile from the bank.

Policeman Blaes positively identified Weinberg as one of the men in the car he signaled to slow up for the detour at Trains Meadow Road, as Jackson Avenue beyond that point is being repaved. Blaes said he had time to get a good look at the men in the car. When the machine did not stop the policeman took the number, but he had no means of following. A few minutes later Blaes got the alarm to look for a car answering the description of the one which had passed, and he notified the station house that he had the number. Detectives Barrett and Caputo of the Newtown precinct located the automobile in the Upton Garage Wednesday night.

Morris Stotman, proprietor of the garage, told the police that he had permitted Weinberg to take the car after the chauffeur had complained that his taxicab was not in running order. Weinberg, a taxi driver, is 22 years old, and gave 63 East Ninety-ninth Street, Manhattan, as his address.

The police were investigating his alibi last night. Lillian David and Dora Stadler, bank employes, did not identify Weinberg as one of the four men who entered the bank.

FINED FOR DEFYING COURT.

Judge McDermott Imposes $100 Penalty for Refusing Jury Duty.

Judge McDermott yesterday in the Kings County Court adjudged Ingo Maddaus guilty of contempt of court and fined him $100 for refusing to serve as a juror.

Maddaus was summoned as a juror on Tuesday, but did not appear until Wednesday afternoon, when he told Judge McDermott he was too busy to sit on a jury, and then walked out of court. In imposing the fine Judge McDermott reprimanded Maddaus for his unwillingness to do his duty as a citizen, and explained that half the fine was for his refusal to appear for jury duty and the other half for walking out of court in defiance of the Judge's order.

NEW AID FOR TUBERCULAR.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8. — Important medical discoveries are discussed in a preliminary report received by the War Department on the study conducted by the army medical authorities at General Hospital No. 19, at Otsego, N. C., where tubercular cases are treated. The result of this study promises new information, particularly in regard to mistaken diagnosis in the case of tuberculosis and hookworm.

The army authorities now examine every man who enters this hospital for hookworm, and this is done irrespective of his birthplace or early geographical environment. The report says many cases, which had been diagnosed as tuberculosis, on further examination showed signs of hookworm. Under treatment for hookworm the patient regains his weight, the hemoglobin content increases, the red blood cell count goes to normal and the color improves.

The proportion of hookworm found has been great, and the proportion of men thus afflicted, whose condition has simulated tuberculosis and yet who are non-tubercular, is said to be "startlingly large." So far as is known this is the first medical investigation made along these lines.

Accurate figures as to the number of hookworm cases which had shown all the indications of tuberculosis will soon be compiled. It is estimated that about 10 per cent. of the patients suffer from hookworm at the time of admission, and that about 2 per cent. do not have tuberculosis.

11 PLAGUE CASES IN TEXAS.

Five Deaths Reported—Twenty Per Cent. of Rats Killed Are Infected.

AUSTIN, Texas, July 8.—Eight cases of bubonic plague have developed and three victims have died to date at Beaumont, Texas, the State Health Officer announced here today. At Galveston there have been three cases of plague with two deaths so far, he added.

The Health Director declared that 20 per cent. of all rats killed at Beaumont weer infected with bubonic plague, which he said he considered "a decidedly heavy rate."

Considerable progress is being made in rat extermination campaigns at the Texas ports, he said, but added that 15,000 more traps were needed at Beaumont, where State and Federal health forces were being increased.

BACHELOR HEIR ASKS AID.

Student Says Father's Will Requires Him to Marry to Get Legacy.

Surrogate Cohalan reserved decision yesterday on an application by Moses Aronson, who is entitled to $15,000 from the estate of his father, Julius Aronson, for an allowance of $300 a year during the three remaining years of his course of study at the University of California. His father died April 29, 1919, and gave him half an estate of $30,000 on condition that he remains true to the Jewish faith and marries a girl of that religion.

Aronson told the Surrogate that he has no intention of disobeying his father's wishes, but because of the condition imposed in the will he has been unable to collect his inheritance. He says that unless he can get $300 a year for his education he will have to wash dishes, act as waiter and do gardening as he did last year.

Woman Dies in Auto Crash.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., July 8.—Mrs. Mary Schiffler of 440 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, wife of a candy manufacturer, died in the Port Jervis Hospital from injuries suffered in an auto accident today. She was driving along an embankment when she suddenly lost control of the car, which went off the highway into a creek where it turned over. Mrs. Schiffler was 43 years old.

We have only set the clock for the beginning of lower prices and we shall keep the clock wound up until it strikes the day of freedom from war rates.

It is a reasonable and right undertaking and each day will show progress here a little and there a little more.

We can do better than simply live by our epitaphs—see to it!

Summer Needs for Miss 14 to 20

And Some Very Interesting Savings.

Voile Frocks at $15.75

Flowered or figured voile frocks in foulard patterns have been especially purchased to sell at this moderate price. The harem skirt and tabs of ribbon at round collar, cuffs and girdle of model illustrated are particularly charming. The other model has rows of dainty ruffles on the side to give the slightly distended silhouette affected this season; its crisp white organdie surplice collar and cuffs are very "summery." A wide range of colors has been chosen: navy blue and white; blue and tan; copenhagen blue and tan; black and white; white and black.

Georgette Frocks at $35

Our $59.50 grade

Georgette crepe—unusual indeed, at this lower price, in navy blue, flesh and white, come either in the model illustrated, whose drop skirt is so uniquely banded with gros grain ribbon, which also appears on the waist, or in a model which features a drop skirt enhanced with wee ruffles and pintucks, which are repeated on the blouse. Its China silk lining is of a very fine quality, as is the crepe from which the frocks are made.

Silk Skirts at $14.95

Originally $29.75 to $35.

The silk skirt fills so many needs during the summer that it is well-nigh indispensable. In the very brilliant shades of novelty weaves that have been developed to so fine a poin they are particularly beautiful. Baronette satin in novel weaves, checks and stripes; wash silks and satin; and tricolettes are a few fancy silks used. Plaited and gathered models are in the collection; patch pockets with varied flaps are a chic touch. Colors are American Beauty, raspberry, green, golden yellow, flesh, white, gray.

Waist measures, 24 in. to 30 in.

Domestic and imported gingham frocks come in a wide variety of models with broken or plain checks and in a range of much desired colors.

Wool Jersey at $10.50

These are the most attractive suits we have had at this price this season.

One model is of fine wool jersey in a vivid sports shade of purple, made with a V-neck and well cut armholes—which are so necessary for the success of any suit. The bottom, armholes and neck are outlined with a wide band of purple and white-striped jersey. This may be had in self color, in black and white, and in blue and white combinations. It is equipped with little trunks knitted onto it.

A slip-on model with no trunks, for those who prefer this type to be worn over their wool tights, is in self color and in combinations of color made by a trimming of contrasting bands.

The model is perfectly straight, with the waistline confined with a string girdle. In midnight blue and all black or in sports colors.

Sheer Blouses for warm days

This season a great many of the more inexpensive blouses are the best becoming and the most attractive. That is a comfort in the summer, when no woman can have too many blouses. One needs them for sports and for tailored wear and to wear with one's trim white skirts for house wear.

One model is an example of how very smart an inexpensive blouse may be—which is very much to the point. It is of fine voile made with tiny tucks and edged with Valenciennes lace. The collar has a long jabot arrangement that is a pleasant variation of the popular frill. Price $6.50.

Short sleeves and a finely pleated frill, made double, distinguishes another blouse that is most smart and attractive. Of voile also, with all of its seams put together with hemstitching. At $4.25.

'PANIC' COAL PRICE CHARGED TO WILSON

PRODUCTION HIGH IN JUNE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The American people at the present time are "panic-stricken without reason or excuse over the coal supply situation," was the statement made here tonight by George H. Cushing, Managing Director of the American Wholesale Coal Association. He declared that there is not now any shortage, and, furthermore, that there is no danger in the near future of any coal shortage in this country.

Mr. Cushing placed the blame for much of the coal shortage agitation, which, he said, had thrown the country to the verge of panic, on "too much Governmental agitation of the danger of a famine."

Since last November, Mr. Cushing said, there had not been a day when some Governmental agency had not been busy "frightening the people with a coal famine next Winter." There was "a reason," but no excuse, he added, for the present high coal prices prevailing in the open market.

"In the matter of both coal supply and prices, the people," Mr. Cushing said, "are in real need of protection from their friends. They have been told practically every day for eight months that the worst shortage of coal in history is imminent. Those who need coal have been thrown into a panic.

"Today they are frantically bidding against each other in every market. Some even will sign blank checks and allow the coal man to fill in any amount which satisfies him. Of course, prices have risen—in the open market—to the highest level in peace times in history.

"However, there is no shortage of coal. There is no danger of any such shortage. Therefore, there is a reason, but no excuse, for the current high prices—in the open market. The reason is that we have had too much Governmental agitation of the danger of a famine.

"The fact is that since Nov. 1, 1919—eight months—there has not been a day or even an hour when some Governmental agency was not agitating about coal and predicting a coal famine.

President's Coal Action Cited.

"Specifically, the President assumed control of coal on the first of last November and returned the Fuel Administrator to power. He appointed the Central Coal Committee, which retained control of coal distribution to the end of March, 1920. Thus for five months the nation was on coal rations, implying an impending shortage. It retained control over exports until May, 1920, thus leading the people to believe that they were being robbed of coal to benefit Europe.

"The President's Coal Committee began work in January, 1920. It had only to arbitrate a labor dispute. It is still here. And its present function is to agitate the coal question to 'avoid a famine.'

"Beginning early in April, a subcommittee of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate held hearings which lasted through two months. At every session there were frequent references to a 'coal famine.' Assertions of such a danger were welcomed.

"In May, the President's Coal Committee, the Council of National Defense and the United States Geological Survey—three Governmental agencies—sent out questionnaires as to the coal supply. The effect was still further to raise the specter of a coal famine.

"Then, in June, the Interstate Commerce Commission, declaring that 'an emergency exists in coal,' issued a priority order with respect to the movement of coal to New England. This capped the climax by saying, in Governmental language, that what had been feared had happened.

"Thus, eight Governmental agencies—to say nothing of the Department of Justice—have been preaching famine and creating panic for eight months.

Says People Reacted in Alarm.

"The people could react in only one way. They had to believe their officials. If they believed, the only sensible thing for them to do was to buy coal when it could be had, at any price which was asked. The rise in price has been truly phenomenal.

"I have investigated nearly every alarmist report. Not one of them will stand scrutiny or analysis. Broadly speaking, the actual facts are that the consumption of bituminous coal for the coal year, April 1, 1920, to March 31, 1921, will not exceed 545,000,000 tons.

"Because of labor unrest everywhere, it is more likely to fall far below than to rise above that figure. But, assuming that it will reach that figure, the demand is for only 10,288,000 tons a week.

"The present assumption is—I never heard of it until this year—that unless we reach this average weekly consumption in the early weeks of the coal year, we are rushing headlong into a shortage of coal. That has not been true in twenty-five years.

"It is not true this year. The records of the coal trade are that, with the exception of 1917 and 1918—war years—we never reached, in production, a figure equal to the required weekly average production until the middle of August in any year.

Production Ahead of Previous Years.

"This year we reached it and passed it in the second week in June. Thus our production is eight weeks ahead of schedule. That doesn't look like an 'impending famine.'

"One alarmist report was that New England had in storage only two days' supply of coal. This week the Geological Survey made public the results of an investigation by the President's Coal Committee. This showed that on May 31 the gas plants of New England had on hand a supply of coal equal to thirty-two days. The electric utilities of New England had on hand a storage supply equal to forty-one days.

"The industrial consumers of Maine had forty-five days' supply, New Hampshire thirty-four days', Vermont forty-five, Massachusetts thirty-eight, Rhode Island thirty and Connecticut thirty-two days'. The total storage for New England, exclusive of the railroads, was sufficient for thirty-eight days. There is no 'impending famine' in those figures.

"The same report said that the retail dealers, in addition to tremendous tonnages moved directly to householders, had in storage amounts of anthracite as follows: Maine, sufficient for thirty-nine days; New Hampshire thirty-two, Vermont thirty, Massachusetts twenty-one, Rhode Island twenty-two and Connecticut (its geographical position is the least dangerous) thirteen days. The retail dealers of New England, as a whole, in addition to tremendous movements to ultimate consumers, had anthracite in storage sufficient to keep them running for twenty-one days.

New Western Shipments Aid Supply.

"The shippers via the Great Lakes were reported to be in great danger because the movement in April and May fell behind that of 1919 by 3,232,000 tons. The facts are that Illinois and Indiana have both been shipping heavily, by rail, into that same territory. My opinion, based upon inquiry, is that the all rail shipments from Indiana and Illinois have offset the absence of Lake shipments.

"My own appeal for information on this subject brought no response. No Governmental agency has shown any interest in developing this vitally important fact.

"Another alarmist report was that New York and Chicago had on hand only two days' supply of coal. Any one familiar with the work involved in gathering the data to support such a statement knows that this is merely a wild guess. It is almost an impossible task to compile the facts. Nevertheless, that assertion has not been challenged.

"Still another assertion was that the heavy production of coal has been in the Mississippi Valley, while there has been a shortage in the Appalachian District which supplies the East.

"Some dependable figures are now being compiled on that subject. A rough estimate made by good authority does not support the statement that the Eastern field is failing. On the contrary, the figures show that the Appalachian field is performing this year about as it has done for fifteen or twenty years.

"In fact, no alarmist report can stand in the face of the facts. Even so, the country is paying prices fixed by the alarmist reports, and those reports are most industriously circulated by Governmental agencies."

PRESS EAST'S COAL NEED.

Providence Meeting Starts Direct Appeal to Washington.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 8.—A committee to go to Washington, "to press home the seriousness of the coal shortage in New England," was appointed by the New England Commissioners of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, at a conference at the Popham Club tonight.

The committee will meet James J. Storrow, Fuel administrator, in Boston tomorrow and will then proceed to Washington.

The advisability of approaching the Shipping Board to ask for a decrease in rates on coal shipped coastwise in Government vessels, was considered at tonight's conference.

The conference reserved that the Grand Trunk Railroad extension to Providence should be constructed, and that it would assist in solving the transportation problem of New England.

William L. Fairbanks of Boston suggested the establishment in Boston of an organization to include ship owners, traders and all men interested in New England shipping, for the purpose of "boosting" New England ports and commerce.

Di Rocco Brindlas of Boston declared that Italy was anxious to enter into closer trade relations with the New England States.

Speeders Sent to Prison.

George Godick, 28 years old, a chauffeur, of Avenue St. John, the Bronx, arrested for speeding an automobile on First Avenue, between Eighty-sixth and Ninetieth Streets, at thirty-five miles an hour, was sentenced to ten days in the workhouse by Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb in Traffic Court yesterday. George Greenstein, a Brooklyn chauffeur, was sentenced to three days in City Prison for speeding on Fifth Avenue.

GILHOOLY STILL WELCOME.

Foster Mother Not Seeking to Deport Former Stowaway.

When Michael Gilhooly, the Irish boy who came to this country from Belgium as a stowaway and was adopted by Mrs. Marion C. Curry in October, returns to Europe it will be with Mrs. Curry and not as a deportee, said David S. Godwin, attorney for Mrs. Curry, who denied yesterday the report that his client wanted to turn the boy over to the immigration authorities to be sent away.

Gilhooly, he said, is liked by his foster mother and he wants to stay here. Mrs. Curry intends to make a trip abroad this Fall and telephoned Ellis Island in the belief that it would be necessary to get permission to take her charge but of the country.

Assistant Immigration Commissioner Byron H. Uhl said yesterday that the person who called Ellis Island had not only asked if the authorities would deport Gilhooly, but requested that he be taken that very day. Mr. Uhl told the person on the wire that Mrs. Curry was responsible for the stowaway for a year and that if she wanted him sent back to Belgium she would have to defray the expense. Gilhooly crossed the Atlantic five times as a stowaway before he was finally admitted to the country.

now being offered for sale to subscribers at a price which after charging 6% interest on the investment and 2% for amortization will cost them

In purchasing space on the Park-Madison Co-operative Ownership Plan, subscribers are protected by every safeguard. The building will be free and clear of mortgage, and its completion guaranteed by a Surety Company Bond.

A sufficient amount of space will be reserved for renting, the revenue from which will be sufficient to pay all estimated operating costs and leave a surplus.

WITH the adoption of the "sky-scraper", style of architecture, New York gave to the word "landmark" a meaning peculiarly characteristic of the Empire City of the World, of the dynamic energy, the resourcefulness of its business interests.

These great edifices, which are talked of, written about and copied, in a small way, from Coast to Coast, personify the spirit and progress of America.

Business building ownership formerly was the vogue in New York. Then came the era of renting. We have now gotten back to the ownership idea.

The recent buying-for-occupancy movement has been a most general one and has not been confined to any one class of business or any single section of the city.

Among the important transactions were the sales by me of the Empire Building to the United States Steel Corporation, of the Liberty Tower Building to the Sinclair Oil Co. and the Cheseborough Buildings to Henry L. Doherty & Co.

The co-operative plan, as applied to the dominant, Mortgage-Free, Park-Madison Building, when analyzed and reduced to figures, proves the wisdom of co-operative ownership of this high character. Rent ceases to be an item in the overhead of subscribers, while the amount invested originally in the purchase of space,—at a very material reduction from the value, per square foot, of offices, in the Terminal Zone—can be amortized at a convenient rate yearly, and recovered eventually.

The Park-Madison Building presents a most unusual opportunity to those requiring office space in large units on single floors. It helps solve a most distressing problem.

NEGRO ROBBER HELD IN JOHNSON MURDER

IMMEDIATE TRIAL SOUGHT

Brooklyn Prosecutor Hopes for Indictment by Monday and Asserts Case Will Be Rushed.

Pedro Bulgo, a West Indian negro, was arrested yesterday by detectives searching for the man who murdered Mrs. Harriett Johnson of 852 East Twenty-ninth Street, Flatbush, and assaulted her husband, Edward Johnson, while attempting to rob the Johnson home. Following admissions made by Bulgo, Harry E. Lewis, District Attorney of Brooklyn, ordered him charged with murder in the first degree and felonious assault. Bulgo was released from prison only recently after serving a long term.

"Although Bulgo has not made a complete confession," said Mr. Lewis, "I am satisfied from his statements that he is the man who struck Mr. and Mrs. Johnson down. I shall place the matter before the Grand Jury tomorrow and expect an indictment by Monday. If I can secure a judge who is willing to sit at this season of the year I will move for his trial in the County Court on Wednesday. There shall be no delay in the prosecution of this case."

Investigating the crime, Detective Captains Coughlin and McCluskey questioned seventeen negroes working for the Nassau Coal Company, adjoining the Johnson home. They learned nothing until they put Alexander Tabb, 20 years old, on the rack.

Tabb made conflicting statements as to his whereabouts. When threatened with arrest, he said he had lied to save the reputation of a negress in Mercer Gardens, L. I. Then he told Captain Coughlin that Edward Richardson, of 826 Fulton Street, foreman of the coal yard gang, told him that Bulgo did the killing.

"Richardson told me," said Tabb, "that Bulgo came to his home at 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon and said 'I laid out Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and I did not get a cent.' He said Bulgo told him he entered the Johnson yard by way of the coal stables. In the dining room he knocked over a chair. He heard Mr. Johnson coming down the stairs and ran into a small outhouse. When Mr. Johnson entered with a rifle, he took it away from him and knocked him down. Then Mrs. Johnson came in with a lighted lamp and he hit her over the arm with the rifle and soaked her over the head."

The detectives took Tabb to Richardson's home where the foreman corroborated Tabb's story. He added that Bulgo wanted the money to get Arline Smith, a negress out of the Raymond Street jail.

The police then induced Mrs. Richardson to visit the jail and tell the Smith woman she had some letters for Bulgo. The negress told Mrs. Richardson Bulgo could be found at 348 Prince Street. Detective William Brosnan found him there.

At police headquarters Bulgo told Captain Coughlin that another man accompanied him to the Johnson home and that this companion struck down the aged man and wife. After repeating this story to the District Attorney, Bulgo was taken to the Johnson home where he re-enacted the tragedy.

GEM ROBBERY AT FREEPORT.

Loss of $30,000 Rumored, but the Owner Says It Was $1,000.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 8.—Much excitement was caused here today by the report that the home of O. A. Hirsh, 17 New York Avenue, had been entered between Friday afternoon last and this morning and jewelry valued at $30,000 stolen. The police were informed of the robbery by Mr. Hirsh this forenoon.

Detectives were sent to the Hirsh home, but later they refused to discuss the robbery. It was learned, however, that the jewelry was owned by Mrs. Hirsh and had been taken from her boudoir while the family was away over the holidays on an automobile trip. When Mrs. Hirsh was questioned tonight she said:

"The report that $30,000 worth of jewelry was stolen from us is an exaggeration. It is a fact that thieves entered our home while we were away, but the loss will not amount to $1,000."

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT ENGINEERS

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE publicly announce the organization of a new corporation, for which we have acquired an option to purchase the property (land and building) described below.

The plan provides for the reservation of the stores on the ground floor, seven full floors, the corridor space, and the pent house, to be rented for account of the corporation. And we estimate that the income so received will more than pay mortgage interest, taxes, and all operating expenses for the entire property.

We propose to divide the ownership of the stock of this new corporation into eight units, varying in cost from $110,000 to $130,000 each, payable in installments over a period of eighteen months. With each of the eight stock units purchased, will go the right to receive what is practically a fully paid-up perpetual lease of a floor of the building.

To business corporations or individual owners thereof, to firms or partners therein, to individuals engaged in business and requiring space therefor, and to those having funds for investment, we offer this opportunity to purchase a unit of ownership, with all the rights that go with it.

THE PROPERTY

The Cuyler Building is one of New York's well-known, centrally located, business properties. It was erected by the present sellers, as a speculative investment, in 1912, from plans and specifications by William H. Gompert, architect. It covers a land area of 14,000 square feet. It fronts on two streets. The cubic content of the building is 2,962,000 cubic feet. Above the store floor, the ceiling heights are 11 feet 6 inches in the clear. It has a corridor running through from street to street. It contains seven Otis elevators. It is fully sprinklered.

OCCUPANCY ADVANTAGES

A tenancy forever undisturbed by the turning over of the title to a speculator—with its attendant disturbance of service, and possibility of enforced removal, or of inordinate rental increase.

Absolute control of definite space, making it possible to provide for changes in space requirements, necessitated by expansion or contraction of business.

A permanent location in a desirable neighborhood.

INVESTMENT ADVANTAGES

You will have a part ownership in a property (both land and building) acquired at a reasonable price, centrally located in the biggest business city in the world, where rentable space is, and will continue to be, in great demand.

You will own outright what is virtually a fully paid-up lease of a whole floor—equivalent in size to a five-story 25 x 100 ft. building.

You will be privileged to sublet, subject to reasonable restrictions as to character of occupancy, and you will receive the entire rental direct, with no tax, mortgage interest, or operating expense to pay.

POSSESSION

Possession of space may be obtained on varying dates, beginning February 1st, 1921, and will be determined by the floor a tenant participant in ownership selects.

Choice of eight floors, from the fourth to the sixteenth inclusive, is to be subject to subdividing partitions as they now exist and to any and all leases now in force on such floors, and subject further to the right of first choice by present tenant occupants, who are now considering this identical plan, submitted to them for their consideration in advance of this public announcement.

WHY THIS PUBLIC OFFER?

Because, even though the sale is being made at a considerably lower figure than the present-day reproduction value, under this plan, the sellers receive a larger cash payment than is possible if they sell to any of the professional real estate operators who are bidding for the property.

—AND FINALLY

Based upon our twenty years' experience of concentrated application to the development, management, rental, and sale of New York City Real Estate, we say without any qualifications whatsoever, that we believe this proposition to be safe and sound, from whatever angle it may be viewed.

The option price on this property includes all the costs of incorporation of new company, of title policy, and our commission. There is no loading—no watered stock—no promotion fee to be taken care of.

The property will be delivered by a full covenant and warranty deed, in fee simple. It is not a leasehold. Construction risks and shortage of labor and material cannot interfere with occupancy.

THEY LIVE FOREVER IN NEW BRUNSWICK

CASE OF PETE FERGUSSON

He's 107, but He Hotfooted It Into Town When He Heard of Editor Hawke's Illness.

SUSSEX, N. B., July 6.—A casual inquiry as to the whereabouts of a certain elderly party who used to live a few miles in the hinterland of this place revealed that there had been quite a depletion last Winter and Spring in the ranks of those who are getting along in years in New Brunswick.

Driving along a picturesque country road, winding through a valley of fertile farms, the visitor came upon a bewhiskered farmer who was busy mending a spring-tooth harrow.

"What's become of that old chap that used to work in haying every Summer over on that farm on the hillside?" asked the visitor.

"Old chap, old chap," mused the farmer. "I don't seem to remember any old chap over there."

"Oh, you mean Johnnie Perry," replied the farmer, his puzzled expression giving place to one of enlightenment. "But you said an 'old chap.' Why, Johnnie wasn't old," he continued reproachfully; "just getting along—what you might call elderly.

"Well, it was kind of queer about Johnnie. You see, the last Summer he worked at hayin' he was only 99. He 'peared to be 'bout as spry as ever and could handle hay 'bout as well as he'd been doin' it for nearly 90 years. But right away after he was a hundred years old he complained at feelin' tired. There wasn't a thing the matter with him—just tired. He died three months later and nobody could account for it. Doctor said nothin' ailed him and folks around here thought it was awful queer for the doctor to let him pass out like that. He took his tobacco reg'lar, right up to the last. Yes, him goin' off like that, seemed a mighty queer thing to me."

The farmer shook his head sadly over the doctor's delinquency; but he brightened up again as he thought of Pete Fergusson.

"Take Pete Fergusson, now. Pete's 107. He was born at St. Peter's Road, Prince Edward Island, on April 1, 2813. He lived there till he was 'bout 15, when he up and went to sea. After followin' the sea for twelve years, he give it up and went to live in Boston, workin' around vessels. Then he moved to Cape Breton, and from there to Sunny Brae, where I kind o' think he's settled down for good. Anyway, he's been there thirty year now.

"Well, Sir, what d'ye think Pete up and did last Spring? You couldn't never guess. Sunny Brae, you know, is near Moncton, so when he read in the paper—Pete never had to wear glasses—that Editor John T. Hawke of The Transcript was under the weather, he just hoofed it in to Moncton to The Transcript office to see about it. When he got there one of the newspaper boys says:

Could Have Come Arunning.

"'And did you walk all the way from Sunny Brae, Mr. Fergusson?'"

"Pete grinned. 'Yes,' says he, 'and I could 've run if it'd been necessary.'

"You ought to hear Pete tell about the Miramichi fire in 1825. He was livin' at St. Peter's Road then. He says the cinders and leaves come down thick as snowflakes. The islanders were scared most to death, because they thought the end of the world had come sure.

"Pete has fine health and he ain't ever been to a dentist nor a doctor, neither. One time he fell off of a scaffold on to a lot of farm tools. He broke both arms, several ribs and his shoulder blade. The other shoulder and his breast bone were out of joint. They called in a doctor who happened to be passing. He took one look at Pete and says:

"Then he clum into his old buggy again and started off without settin' a single bone. Oh, them doctors—them doctors! I expect one of them'll be the death of me yet."

He paused and extracted a bunch of soiled clippings from a pocket, then continued:

"I keep track of the passin' of those who have gone before their time. Just hark to these:

"'Mrs. J. W. Starkey (née Hannah Patterson) died April 22 at Houlton, Me., in her ninety-fourth year.'

"And here's another: 'Friends will be sorry to learn of the death of Jacob L. Wright, which occurred on Saturday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Earle, Pleasant Point. He was 94 years and 6 months old, and was a native of Millstream, Kings County, N. B.'

"Then here's a piece of news about John McKenzie, the stone mason, who died here in Sussex: 'John McKenzie, one of the oldest citizens of Kings County, died on Wednesday afternoon. The diseased was born at Salt Springs, Kings Co., in May, 1819, and had he lived until next month he would have reached the age of 101 years. The diseased retained all his faculties up to the day of his death. He could read without spectacles and had a very retentative memory.'

"I'll bet, if you got right down to the bottom of it, you'd find that them doctors was to blame.

"Now, here's Kings County, with the biggest place in it not more'n 3,000, yet when a man that's gettin' on in years dies we don't claim he's the oldest man in the universe, like they do in some places I could name—the place you come from, for instance. Just notice how it says that John McKenzie was 'one of the oldest citizens of Kings County'—one of the oldest, mind you.

A Surprise for the Farmer.

"Here's another one: 'At Maple View, Victoria County, William P. Flanders died on April 21 at the age of 93 years. He had been in good health until within a week of his death, when, a sudden weakness coming over him, he fell, breaking a leg'—thunder! I never noticed that before; didn't know he had an accident at all. I might have known some doctor had something to do with it. That's always the way; you just build yourself up so's you're hale and hearty, then some little accident comes along and the doctor gets you and—good night!

"Here's one at quite a distance, where they brag more about age: 'The eldest Salvationist in the world died recently in Toronto. She was known in Salvation Army circles as "Granny" Beaver. She was born May 9, 1816, and joined the Salvation Army at St. Catherines, Ont., thirty-five years ago. By her own request she was buried in her army bonnet.'

"Here's another New Brunswicker, who died over in Greenville, Me., where she'd gone a visitin': 'Mrs. Angeline Swasey, who passed away at Greenville, Me., on April 25, was born ninety-nine years ago last July in the little village of Kingsclear, York County, N. B. Last Spring she made a trip alone from Grand Falls, N. B., to Lincoln, Me., to visit her son, going from there to her daughter's in Enfield. There she made a vegetable garden, caring for it herself.

"Last Fall she came to Greenville to visit her son. She could see without glasses, do lovely embroidery, braid mats of wheat straw and has made some beautiful quilts—fool's puzzle, herringbone and magnolia leaf patterns.

"Now listen to this, because it's the gist of the whole thing:

"'A few weeks ago she fell when closing the door in her room. She assured her daughter-in-law that she was not injured. An hour later she felt as ill that a physician was called, who, after an examination, found she cracked her hip bone. Since then she has been confined to her bed. She leaves seventy-five grandchildren and 105 great-grandchildren.'

"So, you see every time a little thing like a fall happens when a person gets to be a respectable age, they call one of them doctors, and then it's all off. You can't tell me—I know. Ebenezer Pierson, who's only ninety-six, and who gets mad every time a person says there's bones in a herring, says a hundred is an awful age for a woman; but I say it's just the prime of life. If it hadn't been for that fall, she might have gone on indefinite acontemplatin' the increase of her posterity.'

"'It's got so no one around here dast say a word against one of them doctors, or they'll sue you. There's John Brown, who limps a little on account of accidentally shootin' a bullet into his foot. John's gettin' kind of elderly; nobody knows just how old he is, and he won't tell, but his name is on a muster-roll of the militia writ in 1845.

"'Well, the doctor hears some of the boys talkin' about John limpin' and kind of blamin' him. Doctor, he rips out a big oath about some heathen god.

"'By the Great Trochanter,' he roars, 'if I hear anybody bellyachin' like that again I'll sue 'em for trigonometry and biography. It's plain enough what ails John. He was foolin' with a pistol and the bullet was in between the radius and ulna and knocks off the head of the radius. No wonder he limps!'"

COMPANY LOSING MONEY

The fact that E. Clarence Jones, wealthy member of the New York Stock Exchange, is an equal partner with William A. Brady in the ownership of The Playhouse in West Forty-eighth Street and in The Playhouse Company, which operates the theatre, became known in the Supreme Court yesterday when Mr. Jones filed a petition stating that it was impossible for him to get along with Mr. Brady any longer and asking that the court dissolve the New Netherland Theatre Company, which owns The Playhouse.

Justice Davis signed an order directing all persons interested to show cause before John J. Farrell as referee on Aug. 19 why the corporation should not be dissolved.

Mr. Jones said he and Mr. Brady each owned 500 shares of stock and each contributed $50,000 to The Playhouse Company. Mr. Brady is President of the New Netherland Theatre Company, and George C. Dougherty, brother of his wife, Grace George, is Vice President, while Charles F. Gehrmann and Henry G. Dowsett, named as directors by Mr. Jones, are Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Jones says the corporation made money in the beginning because Mr. Brady devoted his time and attention to it, but of late years he had become interested in other theatres and in films, and the corporation had been losing. Mr. Jones said he believed that one cause of the loss was the frequent appearance of Grace George at The Playhouse.

Mr. Jones said he had found it necessary to dissociate himself from Mr. Brady because the lease to The Playhouse Company would expire Dec. 31 next. Mr. Brady offered $62,000 a year until 1926, but after the directors had accepted his offer he refused to sign a lease which provided that the Directors representing Mr. Jones could take action against him in case he defaulted on any of the terms of the lease.

"By reason of my unpleasant and unprofitable experience for ten years with Mr. Brady, I am entirely unwilling to enter into a new arrangement by which Mr. Brady, as President of the lessor, shall be in a position to determine when and to what extent he shall enforce the rights of the lessor against himself as lessee," said Mr. Jones. "I have tried to sell my stock, but have been unable to do so, and am informed and believe that persons familiar with the business methods of Mr. Brady are unwilling to purchase stock in a corporation of which he is President and executive officer."

BARBARA MAUREL SINGS.

Replace Rafael Diaz, Who Is Ill, at Stadium Concert.

Barbara Maurel was heard last night by one of the largest audiences yet drawn to the City College Stadium by the open-air Summer concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra. Called at short notice to replace Rafael Diaz, who was ill, the young mezzo-soprano sang airs from "Samson and Delilah" and "Carmen," as well as Lieurance's Indian lyric, "By the Waters of Minnetonka."

Her voice carried throughout the two blocks' space of the amphitheatre, and the crowd asked three encores, which were Massenet's "Ouvre Tes Yeux," the popular "Back to Old Virginny" and Cadman's "At Dawning."

Conductor Rothwell's players had to repeat the second of Grieg's "Two Norwegian Dances." They gave orchestral numbers also of Wagner, Liast, Johann Strauss and Tschaikovsky.

MUSIC NOTES.

Tonight's campus concert at Columbia starts with three Beethoven numbers by Goldman's Band, and Marguerite Ringo will sing Gounod's waltz from "Romeo and Juliet."

Word was received yesterday from James Sievin, who sailed for Italy three weeks ago, that he had arranged in Rome for another tour of America next season by the Vatican Choir.

The management of Luna Park has reengaged for a ninth season at Coney Island the forty players of Vito Bavetta's Royal Italian Band.

SAYS GIRL DRANK BRANDY.

Youth, Arrested, Tells of Dinner at Which Companion Became Unconscious.

Margaret Murphy, 16 years old, of 942 Warren Street, Brooklyn, who was taken to the Kings County Hospital early yesterday morning after consuming a quantity of liquor while dining with three young men in a Flatbush Avenue restaurant, was considerably improved last evening. The physicians in attendance could find no indication of wood alcohol, which at first was feared might be the cause of the girl's coma.

Daniel Keohan, 19, of 576 Baltic Street, one of the party who was arrested by Policeman Stanton on the charge of disorderly conduct, was arraigned in the Flatbush Police Court. Magistrate Folwell remanded him until Monday for examination. Keohan told the police that he and his companions had five bottles of Martel brandy, but that Miss Murphy drank only a small part of it. The police are trying to learn where the brandy came from.

NEGRO SLAIN BY FARMERS.

Missouri Sheriff Unable to Save Escaped Convict from Mob Violence.

CENTERVILLE, Mo., July 8.—Fred Canafex, an escaped negro convict, was shot to death by a mob of whites near here late yesterday. Canafex is alleged to have attacked a daughter of Frank Simmons, a farmer residing near Ellington, on Tuesday night.

Canafex escaped from a prison road camp near Ellington on Tuesday. Shortly after his escape was discovered the Sheriff of Reynolds County heard that the girl had been waylaid and attacked by a negro.

A mob of armed farmers found Canafex and riddled his body with bullets. The Sheriff's posse organized to prevent violence was impotent against the infuriated mob.

Canafex was sentenced to prison for twenty years in 1914 on a charge of first degree robbery.

Brush, President of the American International Shipbuilding Corporation, in making the announcement, said the launching gang would be allotted only fifty minutes to complete the task.

A million a month

HERE'S a record! Reached in only eight years! A wonderful growth, and still growing! Not a one-time showing, but a milestone passed as the result of a steady, consistent climb, month by month, year by year!

More than a million dollars a month is being paid for Stewart Motor Trucks by business men and farmers throughout the United States and in 38 foreign countries. The figures for June exceed $1,400,000.00.

Stewart now ranks as one of the world's leaders in truck building. In eight years Stewart sales have jumped from $12,000 a month to over a million dollars a month.

Stewart Trucks have won—

TROUBLING THE PHILOSOPHERS OF THE PORCH.

It is plain that the Republican managers did not expect the nomination of Governor Cox. It is also plain that they are a good deal upset by it. They were making all their plans on the basis of a Democratic candidate quite other than the Ohio Governor. Now they find themselves compelled to the difficult and perilous operation of changing their line of battle in the presence of the enemy. And they are getting plenty of warnings from within their own ranks that the enemy is powerful and dangerous. The New York Tribune bluntly says: "The supporters of Senator HARDING will be most foolish if they do not frankly realize the formidableness of the Cox and Roosevelt ticket." Citations like that from Republican newspapers could be multiplied. Says the Detroit Free Press: "The San Francisco Convention has chosen the most formidable candidate within its reach." The Chicago Tribune admits that "Republicans realize that they have as much of a fight on their hands as the Democrats could prepare for them." Nowhere has the disturbing effect of the Cox combination upon the calculations of Republican leaders been more clearly set forth than by the Washington correspondent of The Providence Journal. He writes:

> It is as though the Republican army was "set" for an attack, when suddenly the Democrats have launched their offensive upon the Republican flank and in an unexpected quarter. The Republicans must quickly change front, alter their plan of battle at the last minute, and in this transition risk a great advantage to the enemy.

One of the first results of this throwing the Republican plan of campaign into confusion is the rising demand that Senator HARDING give up the idea of a rocking-chair campaign on his front porch. The cry is that he must take off his coat and take the stump in a dozen States like any other candidate forced to fight for his party. It had all been so differently and so comfortably arranged. The amiable Senator was simply to receive successive delegations at Marion and give them large doses of his smiling philosophy of the porch. The visitors would not be exactly a "surprise party." Their coming would be known long in advance, and the remarks of their spokesman submitted to the candidate and probably edited by him, so that he might not be made the victim of a Burchardism. But the whole affair was to be suffused with gentility. It was to be more or less of a picnic. And The Marion Star would have wound up its description of the delightful proceedings by saying: "A good time was enjoyed by all."

Now, however, all this idyllic dream of rural festivity is to be changed into the stern realities of warfare. The Tribune demands that Senator HARDING "come out of his intrenchments and take the aggressive." How can a man be aggressive on his own front porch? There he is a host as well as an orator, and can't hurl 'arf bricks at people waiting eagerly to take him by the hand. A man can be a politician "at ease" on his vine-clad porch, but can he be a fighter? He can be all adrip with the milk of human kindness among his neighbors and guests, but it is impossible to think of him scouring the country for political vittles through the lattice-work that shields the porch from the too fervent glistering sun. The whole conception of a porch campaign too much suggests a commander lying in a hammock and sleepily asking the others to go and do the real fighting.

The indications are now clear that Senator HARDING will have to come off his porch, figuratively as well as literally. Sitting or gracefully standing on a porch, a candidate can abound in the opinions both of those who are for and those who are against the League of Nations. He can throw one affectionate arm about Senator JOHNSON and the other about Mr. TAFT. But out in the open, with an opponent prodding him with questions, he will have to come down on one side of the fence or the other. The Republicans admit that the nomination of Governor Cox will compel them to fight harder than they had thought would be necessary. It will also compel them to speak plainer. If they are going to be aggressive, they will have to quit straddling.

AN ARMY FLIGHT TO NOME.

The breath cannot be kept in the body of aviation in this country without ventures, novel and daring, that attract notice and make people talk. About the middle of next week four army officers and their mechanics will leave Mitchel Field, Garden City, in four De Havilland planes for Nome, Alaska. Their route will be to Portal, N. D., and thence through Canadian territory northwest to Fairbanks and Nome, a distance of 8,000 miles. The schedule calls for no flight of more than 300 miles a day, and in sixteen days after leaving this city the aviators should be in Nome. With the Weather Bureau assisting and the Canadian authorities co-operating, the War Department has made preparations that permit no doubt of the success of the enterprise.

Such an undertaking would be a waste of time and material unless useful purposes were served. Photographs of the country traversed are to be taken—the other day army fliers put a lake in the Panama wilderness on the map—and notes will be made and information obtained for the establishment of an air mail route to Alaska. The United States Government particularly wants to have the region between Fort Hamlin and Circle photographed for the use of the Geological Survey. Well worth reading will be the report of the expedition made by the commander, Captain ST. CLAIR STREET. In pioneering days an army officer with an elaborate and costly equipment spent months in exploration, and a year passed before his story was published. Today the aviators, who are the envy of their brother officers, can fly over uncharted territory, photograph it as they go, and in a comparatively short time their graphic reports will appear in the department records.

TRADING WITH RUSSIA.

So-called "liberal" sympathizers with the Bolsheviki, whose hearts have been moved to pity by the suffering and hardship imposed upon those noble sons of freedom by the blockade, will rejoice over the announcement of the State Department that restrictions upon ordinary trade and communication with Soviet Russia have been removed. The Bolsheviki in Russia and their agents and propagandists in this country and in England will exult; they will interpret this action of the United States as portending full recognition of the Soviet Government.

The trade privileges permitted under this announcement are pretty carefully limited. "Materials susceptible of immediate use for war purposes will, for the present at least," be excluded from the privilege of exportation to Russia. Locomotives and rolling stock to replace the broken-down equipment of the Russian railways are sorely needed by the Red armies. They would come under the category of war material, and hence cannot be sent to Russia. Two difficulties stand in the way of sending any kind of commodities in considerable quantity. One is that the Russians have little or nothing to give in exchange except gold, and, as their gold in large part has been stolen by them, its rightful owners might lay claim to it in the hands of those who took payment in that medium. In the second place, the United States Government will extend no protection whatever to those who engage in trade with Russia. There are no American Consuls there to take up American claims; our Government has no relations with Soviet authority; none of the so-called commissions in Russia is recognized by us; traders must assume their own risks. No passports will be issued, and the Post Office will accept no mail from or to Soviet Russia.

Commercially, the privilege of trading with Russia will be of very slight importance. That is fortunate for all other nations and the cause of peace and good-will on earth. For any large volume of exports to Russia would bolster up the Bolshevist cause, postpone its collapse, and prolong the period of danger for Russia's neighbors, for all countries where the Bolshevist propaganda is active.

The political effect of the move remains to be seen. The State Department declares that "political recognition, present or future, of any Russian authority exercising or claiming to exercise governmental functions is neither granted nor implied by this action." Any recognition or any move toward the recognition of the Soviet Government would, of course, be a calamity. It would have the worst possible effect in Europe. It would give immeasurable encouragement to the Bolsheviki. It would greatly strengthen the Soviet authority in Russia. It would be recognizing a Government based upon assassination, terrorism and pillage. It would doom the Russian people to an indefinite prolongation of their suffering under the bloody proletarian despotism. It would be a crime against civilization. When resumption of trade under the restrictions now imposed was suggested to the allied Powers last Winter the proposal was not well received, by France at least. British efforts to do business with the trumpery "commissions" ended in a fiasco, for it was speedily discovered that the commissions were under Soviet control. The recent negotiations with KRASSIN showed that Mr. LLOYD GEORGE still had a hankering for trade with Russia, but nothing came of the interviews, and KRASSIN has returned to Moscow.

All the influence of the propagandists and their sympathizers will be exerted to induce our Government and other Governments to go one step further and recognize the Soviets. That effort will be and should be resisted by all those in authority who have wisdom enough to look beyond the immediate and mostly illusory present advantages of trade with Russia to the appalling results of building up Soviet Government as a permanency and perpetuating its rule over 150,000,000 people, for all the world knows that the Bolsheviki would be unremitting in their efforts to spread their propaganda in other countries and promote uprisings everywhere against what they call robber Governments.

THE NICKEL FARE QUESTION.

According to the interpretation of the decision of the Court of Appeals by the Corporation Counsel, there are many nickel fare questions instead of one. That is, the rate of fare depends on the facts and conditions in each case and there can be no blanket decision. There is one rule under the conditions before and after the Constitution of 1875; another rule after the Public Service Commission was created in 1907; another rule when the fare is settled by contract; different rules under State and city franchises, and perhaps still other rules. That seems reasonable. If the same law controlled conditions so different, the law would certainly work wrong in some cases, perhaps even greater wrong than is now being worked by the excess of zeal which is shown in trying to remedy existing wrongs in a blundering rather than practical manner.

The one sure thing is that, whatever the law in any particular case, the people will not long get more than they pay for, including a profit to the suppliers of the service, which is valued more as it takes its flight. This is the one city which is conspicuous by its retention of a nickel fare. Hundreds of other cities have raised their fares and retained their old accommodations or enlarged them. Here unlimited merit is claimed by those who have preserved the nickel fare at the cost of the accommodations provided. A nickel fare without a transfer, or with a transfer for a price, is not the old nickel fare. The nickel fare with transfers was a device to meet the competition of the subways and to enlarge earnings without increase of overhead costs. That sort of nickel fare disappeared because it gave more than the nickel paid for, and the privilege was abused by those who did not foresee the results of what was pilfering by them as truly as some acts of the roads were called robbery. "Thou shalt not steal" was posted in the Third Avenue line by the matter-of-fact Receiver WHITRIDGE. Now the chickens have come home to roost and the question is, What is going to be done about it?

The first prospect is for more litigation and more decisions in some years more, years having been wasted in finding out how to begin. It is certain there is no use in expecting permanent benefits by orders contrary to good business management of a matter which is rightly more a matter of business than of law. The simplest case of all is where the fare is settled by contract. Nothing prevents reasonable men from altering a contract; and when a contract cannot be altered because one of the parties to it will not consider the matter for reasons outside of the contract, that is unreasonable conduct. By standing immovably on its subway contracts the city has stopped the construction of the very roads on which it demands that a nickel fare shall be charged. The city has driven contractors harshly into bankruptcy, has embarrassed its partner, the Interborough, and has deprived itself of taxes and its citizens of nickel fares on the unbuilt roads, to a total far surpassing the contractors' losses, besides keeping home seekers out of cheap home sites.

No thanks have been voted for a course of conduct which was not asked for and is not appreciated. On the contrary, the residents of Staten Island have given expression to their outraged feelings in a manner which is worthy of imitation, but which gives little promise of relief. There may be a stronger hope in the ruling that the Public Service Commission has control of franchise rates fixed after the Commission's creation. A franchise is a contract, and even a more solemn contract than a mere business bargain. If a franchise contract may be altered by law, why may not the dual subway contract? If the Public Service Commission can give orders to a railway corporation, why not to a city corporation? But better far is adjustment of such matters by the rule of reason and reasonable agreement than by edict, even if lawful.

RAILWAY RATE FACTS AND ARGUMENTS.

The argument on the increase of railway rates has ended, and it is to be hoped that the Commission is as ready for the question as the country. Ever since the Commission was created in 1887 the rates to be charged have depended more on the law than on the facts. At last the law has been made to fit the case as it is, rather than as it ought to be, and it may be hoped that we can get a decision on the facts, rather than on arguments about the facts.

One official argues that the increase of rates will add $9,600,000,000 to the cost of production and living, according to the theory propounded by no less an authority than Commissioner WOOLLEY. Another official with no particular opportunity to be informed on railway matters argues that there are cars enough, if only they were moved more miles in a day than ever they were. Mr. CLIFFORD THORNE asserts that "within three months" after the return of the roads to private control they had fallen down in "operation." The official who more than any other is responsible for the desperate condition of the roads' finances says that extension of Government operation alone can get the roads out of the hole into which Government operation put them. The lower depths in Government operation can be dealt with when the case is more urgent. At present it is the country which is in a hole, rather than the railways.

Such estimates, arguments, opinions and theories are best tested by facts which no one disputes or can dispute. The other day THE TIMES published the New York Central's statement that for the first five months of this year 3,882,579 carloads of freight had been moved by it, a gain of 414,240 cars, or 12.5 per cent., despite discouragements of strikes, weather and shortage of equipment. During the recent strike the Erie reported that it was breaking its record for cars moved. The Interstate Commerce Commission's reports come down no later than March, on the day the arguments closed, just in time to be considered in connection with them. For the first three months of this year the operating revenues of all roads were $1,117,632,175, against $912,470,040 last year. An increase of $205,162,135 is better proof that the country is unreasonable in its expectations than that the railways are "falling down" or "in a hole." The proof that the country is in a hole appears from the country-wide demand in the East for coal cars to fill the bins from which the reserves for the Winter are missing, at the time between seasons when they ought to be filling. And yet millions more tons of coal have been mined this year. In the West there is an equal outcry for cars to move the breadstuffs of the last crop, to empty the elevators for the new harvest now under way with daily improving prospects.

Too much coal, too much grain. A larger supply of railway accommodation, and yet a supply below the demand. In all candor, is it the roads or the people that are in the deeper hole? And is it the people or the roads that are paying the penalty of reducing rates because the roads made too much money, and some of the roads were managed with more reference to the security market than the freight market?

A good rule for the increase of rates under such conditions is that "too much is enough." If an excess is allowed, it will fall on the average or can be reduced if the railways again make too much money. The idea that the Commission can calculate the yield on the unvalued property of $20,000,000,000, more or less, to a fraction of 1 per cent. is absurd. Where there can be no such accuracy the smaller fault is too much than too little.

GERMAN DISARMAMENT.

When it is considered that by the terms of the Peace Treaty "the total number of German effectives" was to be reduced to 100,000 by March 31, 1920, and that the Allies extended the time to July 10, the proposal, or application, of the German representatives at Spa to postpone disarmament for fifteen months more, while admitting that there were 1,000,000 armed men and 2,000,000 rifles in the country, was an amazing symptom of bad faith. No wonder the French are distrustful and uneasy. It may be, as has been asserted, that the Germans, despite the possession of thousands of machine guns and field pieces above the minimum imposed upon them, in addition to 2,000,000 rifles, are incapable of a serious military effort now, having neither a navy nor an aviation corps; but a million soldiers could be recruited from her gymnasia, citizen guards and other devices for raising a great army over night, when Germany, with doubtless other equipment than that brought to light, would be ripe for a vast deal of mischief on the Continent if the French were caught off their guard.

The British, with Ireland an armed camp and the Indian frontier threatened by the Bolsheviki, would probably be slow, or unable, to dispatch an expeditionary force to France. The employment of British troops in another European war would be vehemently opposed by the radical labor element, whose numbers are legion. It is not merely a coincidence that the German Government finds reasons for not fulfilling its obligations under the Peace Treaty when troubles are clouding the horizon of her conquerors. The Nationalist movement in Asia Minor has already necessitated a campaign by French and British as well as by Greek troops, and it is known that the Turks are intriguing with the Russian Soviet Government. The flames kindled in Asia Minor may spread into a conflagration. In Ireland civil war threatens, if it is not imminent. The Germans view the situation there with secret satisfaction. It is at such a time that they balk at every clause in the Peace Treaty that provides for their disarmament and aims to render them impotent to engage in a military offensive for a generation. The war is not truly over so long as they can scheme to make the peace abortive.

That is an unconvincing picture of the German delegates—Herr SIMONS is the painter—sitting up all night at Spa to frame a reply to the demand of MILLERAND and LLOYD GEORGE that the Germans surrender the arms they were holding back. The German Government, said SIMONS plaintively, was facing the distrust of the Allies on the one hand and fear of Bolshevism on the other. The distrust of the Allies has long been justified, and it is Germany that threatens them with the spectre of Bolshevism—her Government is not really afraid of it. The proof is that its delegates offer a leisurely plan of collecting the arms illegally held and turning over machine guns in excess of the number needed for an army of 100,000 men. The Government cannot be in dread of the Bolsheviki if it counts on surrendering so many machine guns every three months. There may, indeed, be reason to suspect that it would not scruple to make terms with LENIN. There are precedents. It is the same old Germany, unchastened by defeat, plotting mischief, dreaming of revenge, truculently submissive, and ever ready to take advantage of a weakness among the Allies and to sow dissension. An extension for the time of disarmament by fifteen months was, of course, impossible. A compromise upon six months is said to have been agreed upon. It is the utmost concession that should be made to the fears and imaginings of SIMONS and his associates.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

His Defense Should Be Cautious.

Being an enthusiastic player of golf, it is entirely natural that Governor Cox is indisposed to admit that golf is the rich man's game—so indisposed, indeed, that he denies the truth of the characterization. One notices, however, that he does not carry denial to the extent of saying that golf is for poor and rich alike. If that were a campaign issue he certainly would be beaten on it if Senator HARDING took the other side, for while it is true that one does not have to be enormously rich to play golf, or even to be rich at all, as that word recently has come to be understood in the larger cities, it is also true that the game is not for anybody not in what even now would be called fairly comfortable circles.

Golf balls and golf clubs are expensive, the fees of caddies are not minute, while the entrance fees and annual dues at any of the associations under the auspices of which only can the game be thoroughly enjoyed and properly played are not to be paid without at least a twinge of pain by others than the desperately devoted, no matter how wealthy. The playing of golf, too, takes an amount of time to be afforded only by those with fairly abundant leisure, and even in these days of short working hours leisure is possessed chiefly by the more or less well-to-do.

So, while Governor Cox could justify an assertion to the effect that golf is not exclusively a rich man's game, he would have a lot of difficulty in carrying along that line its defense much further.

A Joke with Something of Significance.

In a speech made this week at the Dayton Country Club—the same speech in which he denied that golf was a rich man's game—Governor Cox said something which, though spoken in jest, evidently had something of seriousness in it, and something that should receive the attention both of those who like and those who do not like a "wet" candidate for the Presidency.

"Have you noticed," he asked his hearers, golfers all, or almost all, "that your morning game is better than your evening game, especially since—!" Then he paused, and, as the report runs, "there was a laugh, above which was heard a deep, doleful voice, 'Prohibition!'"

It is impossible to decide with certainty what is to be inferred from this as to the Governor's own opinion as to the relation between golf and prohibition, or rather between prohibition and efficiency generally, but it is at least a fair deduction that he knows what careful experiments and common experience have shown as to that relation, and that he has seen the thing illustrated on the links. The man who finished his sentence for him also must have seen it, in spite of the dolefulness of his tone.

The incident, therefore, is calculated to sadden all "wets" and to give at least a little encouragement to all "drys." Most of them, probably, will make too much of it, as is the fashion of extremists always, but it is not without significance for either of them.

He Would Have Gained from Change.

Senator HARDING, it seems, is writing out his speech of acceptance in longhand, using a pencil and pad, instead of a typewriting machine or dictating to a stenographer. This, he says, has been his habit of writing for thirty years as a newspaper man, and he humorously begged an observer not to take the continued following of long-established custom as proof that he was a reactionary.

It will not be so taken, though the failure to adopt new methods that have gained general recognition as expedient does show a little something as to the Senator's mentality. The fact is, however, that great numbers of men, in and out of journalism—men not at all "reactionary"—have never had enough incentive to change from pen or pencil to typewriting or dictation, and so have not acquired the special form of facility which the employment of either requires. They have their reward—they have escaped the several weeks of increased and decidedly painful labor which such a change of habit involves; but they have paid a penalty as well—the penalty of not being able, for a vastly longer period, to do their work both more rapidly and easily.

Senator HARDING says that with his pencil and pad he can write along just as he thinks, and so he can, but so he could have done with a typewriter or a stenographer if only he had persisted with their use until familiarity with the one or the other as a means of putting thought on paper had been acquired. When he began writing with a pencil he had to overcome a resistance even stronger and more painful than the one the newer methods create, but those were childhood sufferings and he has forgotten them.

The practiced manipulator of the typewriter gives no more thought to his machine than the Senator does to his pencil—is as nearly unconscious of its existence as he writes.

As Bandits They Did Not Shine.

Bank robbing, like murder, can be viewed in the abstract, and then can be commended as well done or condemned as showing nothing of intelligence or skill. From this point of view Wednesday's attack on the Manhattan Company's branch in Corona, L. I., deserves criticism severely adverse.

As elements of success in their undertaking the seven bandits, or would-be bandits, who made the attempt seem to have had only an automobile and a mask apiece. More than that is required, and these wretched amateurs consequently failed in a way nothing less than disgraceful to metropolitan criminality. They lacked courage, determination, knowledge of the bank's inner arrangements, the tone and bearing that frighten, readiness and skill in the use of pistols—everything. Of course they failed.

And it was inevitable that such bunglers and tyros in an ancient if not honorable profession found themselves confronted by bank employes who defied coercion, did the exact opposite of what they were ordered to do, and as a result saved every cent of the bank's money as well as their own lives. Far from least ready-witted, brave and efficient among them was DORA STADLEM, who found several things to do in the emergency that were better than screaming or fainting would have been. She joined actively in the defense, and her masterpiece was in getting to a telephone in spite of threats and calling the police.

Quickly despairing, the robbers turned and ran to their car. They were good runners, and so was the car, so they got clear away, but there's no glory in that. They should confine their ambition to the stealing of doormats.

Mistaken Identity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A number of residents of my neighborhood think that the Democratic nominee is the notorious "Boss" Cox of Cincinnati. Your editorial today does not indicate it. Will you enlighten us?

New York, July 7, 1920. X. Y. Z.

[This mistaken theory of identity is destroyed by two important facts: (1) Boss Cox of Cincinnati is dead. (2) Boss Cox was a Republican. At one time his influence, patronage and favor were extended to Mr. Harding, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, in aid of that gentleman's political aspirations.—Editor THE TIMES.]

Brusiloff's Appeal.

General Brusiloff's appeal to Russian officers, though it must have been approved by the Moscow rulers, may be considered as an indictment of Bolshevist policies. He defends the right of the Russian people to self-determination. But that is exactly what the Bolsheviki so far sternly deny. By force of arms they dispersed deputies of the first Constituent Assembly and ever since have ruled by commissaries of their own choice. They have ignored the people and the country at large, sacrificing everybody and everything for the benefit of a single class, the proletariat. Men and women not belonging to that class were deliberately outlawed, robbed and massacred with impunity by thousands. And now, when the Bolshevist regime has proved to be a deplorable failure, they appeal to the officers, all of whom belong to the nobility, the bourgeoisie, the clergy and the merchant class. Maltreated but yesterday in every possible manner, these officers are begged today to forget and forgive all abuses, to join the Red Army and obey sincerely the Soviet Government. Truly, these officers are expected to have not human, but angelic patience, kindness and self-abnegation.

Whistler Memorial Abandoned.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Believing that many of your readers will be interested to learn the present status of the memorial to Whistler which Rodin was commissioned in 1906 to design, and which it was planned to erect in Chelsea, I am sending you a copy of a portion of a letter just received from London from the Hon. Treasurer:

"You will remember that in 1906 a collection was made, to which you contributed, for the purpose of engaging Monsieur A. Rodin to provide a memorial of James McNeill Whistler. M. Rodin unfortunately died without completing the task he had undertaken to carry out. The Trustees used every endeavor during the artist's lifetime, unsuccessfully, to obtain its completion. They propose, therefore, now to distribute the funds in their hands pro rata to the subscribers of the original sum (which was invested in trust securities)."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Alderman Quinn's resolution in reference to co-operative apartments need cause no alarm to participants in legitimate plans, and I am certain that the promoters of such plans will welcome investigation.

The widespread extension of the co-operative idea will be of inestimable benefit to the city in every way. It will create a new citizenship of home-owners, looking toward the improvement of our institutions and the preservation and enhancement of our natural advantages. Considerations of beauty and cleanliness will enter into our civic lives and we will emerge into a new community where disturbedness and self-respect will function as never before.

Prospective buyers should, however, safeguard themselves by seeing to it that they are paying a fair price and that the promoting company is well prepared to meet all the obligations of construction, financing and management of the project.

LITTLE JOYS.

What do the free things think about—
The birds and little flowers?
They seem so idle, nights of blue,
And all day's golden hours!

Just this: They think of little joys—
Of other birds and flowers,
Of sunshine on the garden wall,
And scent of blossomed bowers.

They think of all the clematis vines,
Grown 'round the garden trees,
And ponder graceful, floating clouds,
And little joys like these.

You have seen fit to give space to the fact that a member of the Board of Regents of the State of New York favors the abolition of English grammar.

One of the outstanding reasons why grammar should be taught is the somewhat fact that hosts of people who speak and write English with relative force and clarity are unaware of its existence, an innocence the betrayal of which is assured if examined.

To take even the negative side of this question is to make it appear debatable. To advocate the discontinuance of English grammar is to favor Bolshevism in educational matters and nothing more. To say that Shakespeare knew nothing about grammar and hold him up as an example of any kind is specciousness driven to the extreme. There are no Shakespeares in this country, there never have been any, and there has been only one in England. And incidentally it may be, though no one can tell, that if Shakespeare had studied grammar his works might have consumed less time on the part of commentators, for it can hardly be doubted that some of his most mysterious passages, into which a thousand and one different interpretations have been read, are not deep but merely ungrammatical.

But this is of negligible importance. Shakespeare wrote such English as he wrote because grammarians unknown to fame before his day, in his day and now gathered up the diversified parts of the English language, wove them into a unified and logical whole, and produced the most versatile, if not most effective, speech known to man. To say that Shakespeare owes nothing to grammar and grammarians is like saying that the sole owner and driver of a limousine car owes nothing to the legions of mechanics and engineers who have brought automobiles up to their present state of perfection. Walter PRICHARD EATON has been criticised because he could not, after showing millions of people where the English language came from and how it was built up, spell English correctly or pronounce it without accent. It is the fate of those who work for others, of those who burn the midnight oil that others may see more clearly.

There is already far too great a tendency in education to make it easy, which is immoral; to make it short, which is irrational, and to make it practical, which is dangerous. Education is a difficult, slow and rational affair. And to be educated consists entirely and merely in knowing what you are talking about. There is no doubt that a child brought up in cultured surroundings will speak a cultured English. But if he is never taught grammar he will never know what it is all about. Take him to task and it will be found that he is utterly incapable of explaining his linguistic virtue. And virtuous that depends for its existence on ignorance is of unmeasured and unproved value.

The contention that the present grammatical nomenclature should be done away with is not worth respectful attention. It leaves out of consideration the fact that England was settled in turn by the Celts, Romans, Angles, Saxons, Danes, Norman and English. It fails to see the very strength and beauty of such a term as "imperative mood." It forgets that a series of possibly queer-sounding words is the first and necessary result of any science new or old. Why do not automobile men stop talking about clutch and carburetor and shoe and valve? We have to have words for things. Bolshevists came into being and the first event of their career was the making of a word that describes them.

You comment somewhat at length on "the." Why do we say: "John goes to college," but "John goes to the university"? "John goes to town," but "John goes to the city"? English grammar is not only fascinating but mysterious, and the study of it increases respect for the law.

Then there is another reason why grammar should be taught. With all of our screeds on democracy everybody, without exception, likes to belong to and tries to gain membership in some sort of aristocracy. There is only one into which it is impossible to break by irregular methods, and that is the aristocracy of the intellect. It is not easy, but it is unfortunately possible to break into any other type of aristocracy. It is possible, though it is tending to happen more and more rarely, to become President of a university or the ranking official in the church or get a seat on the Stock Exchange by means and methods that are not quite comme il faut. But there is only one way to become a member of the intellectual aristocracy, an aristocracy open to every American citizen, and that is by knowing why things are as they are. A man may be as wise as Solomon and as erudite as the most erudite, but if he does not understand the structure of the language that chance has made his mother tongue he is no fit candidate for the uppermost class. Let us save grammar—and education!

The Honolulu Flag Incident.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A paragraph appeared in your paper of the 21st inst. in which some society asserts "with the approval and co-operation of Archbishop Mannix" that he rose to the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" in Honolulu Harbor. As an American citizen, passenger on the Ventura and witness of the incident in question, I wish to say that this is not true.

The Archbishop, having remained seated while the British anthem was played, continued to do so when "The Star-Spangled Banner" was struck up. Mr. M. C. Parsons, with all courtesy, drew the Archbishop's attention to this fact without result. He then followed it with a request that he should stand. On this being ignored, the outraged American citizens, who had previously sympathized with the British passengers in an affront offered the British anthem, contemplated forcing recognition. It was decided instead that the Department of State's attention should be drawn to the studied insult, and it was also decided to acquaint The Chronicle, San Francisco, with the facts. Nothing was published by that paper, however.

Whatever excuses may be offered, it is obvious that eleven American citizens would not undertake such a step if the grossest form of insult had not been offered their national flag.

Evasive explanation does not meet the case. The fault happened as indicated, and every true American, no matter where his sympathies may lie in other directions, or what the nature of his creed, would have acted as did Mr. Parsons and the others associated with him in the protest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The best part of this morning's news was your headline, "Bryan Is Sad." If the Democratic Party has accomplished nothing else, it will be sufficient achievement to eliminate this "Old Man of the Sea," who for so many years through the exploitation of a bogus radicalism has so largely blocked the party from attaining true Progressivism.

INTERCHURCH GETS NEW LEASE OF LIFE

REORGANIZATION OUTLINED

Committee of Fifteen Is Named to Perfect the Working Details.

The Interchurch World Movement will be continued, though on a greatly modified basis. One outstanding change will be the spending of less money. This was decided by a unanimous vote late last evening at a special meeting of the General Committee of the Interchurch and representatives of the thirty denominations which have been affiliated with it. The session was held in the assembly hall of the Foreign Missions' Council of the United States and Canada, 25 Madison Avenue, and was attended by 150 men and women. They were in session from 11 o'clock yesterday morning, with only intermissions for luncheon and supper. The sessions were behind closed doors. Almost every State in the Union was represented.

To the surprise of many, both the Baptist and the Presbyterian denominations were officially represented, in spite of the fact that both had withdrawn from the movement, the Baptists after arranging to pay what their leaders should decide was their share of $2,500,000, for which they had underwritten the movement, and the Presbyterians after agreeing to pay the $1,000,000 they had guaranteed.

In the absence of Robert Lansing, formerly Secretary of State, who is Chairman of the General Committee, the presiding officer was Fred. B. Smith, Vice Chairman. It was said that even the Interchurch officials came prepared to see the organization disbanded. But sentiment swung entirely the other way.

Tustin Represents Baptists.

The Baptist Church was represented by Ernest L. Tustin, Director of Public Welfare in Philadelphia, who a fortnight ago, in Buffalo, was elected President of the Northern Baptist Convention; also by H. E. Greaves, business manager of the Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, which has just raised $68,000,000.

The Presbyterian Church was represented by two members of her Executive Commission. They were the Rev. Dr. Henry C. Swearingen, pastor of the House of Hope, St. Paul, Minn., and the Rev. Dr. George B. Stewart, President of Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y.

The Baptist withdrawal was absolute, but the Presbyterians voted to retain an advisory relation. They agreed also to contribute $100,000 this year if the movement reorganized "as a going concern."

By continuing, the Interchurch has available $500,000, some of which is part of the $2,000,000 pledged by Friendly Citizens. The rest has been pledged by individuals since the financial crisis became public.

Yesterday's meeting was called to hear the report of a business men's committee which was appointed a fortnight ago at a meeting of the Executive Committee held when it looked as if the Interchurch Movement was nearing the end. The chairman was James M. Speers, President of James McCutcheon & Co., and another member was Raymond Robins.

Committees Reach Agreement.

In the morning the general committee appointed a committee of eleven to confer with the Business Men's Committee. Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Methodist, of Chicago, was Chairman of the Committee of Eleven. The two bodies were out until late in the afternoon. Then they brought in the report which was adopted paragraph by paragraph by the general committee. This was in part as follows:

"The committee is unanimous in the conviction that the main purpose and objects for which the Interchurch World Movement was created should be conserved and therefore the movement should be continued, though on a greatly modified scale.

"We heartily approve the action of the Executive Committee in closing the accounts of the movement as of June 30, in calling upon the constituted bodies for their obligations and in making a clear distinction between the past and future operations of the movement.

"That inasmuch as material must be cared for, subscriptions collected and an irreducible minimum of work must be carried on pending the reorganization hereafter to be recommended, we recommend a budget not exceeding $75,000, which amount shall become a part of the obligations already incurred by the corporation.

"Inasmuch as the time is manifestly too short for working out a feasible plan of reorganization to-day, we recommend the appointment of a committee of fifteen members, which committee shall confer with representatives of the denominations co-operating in the movement, and, if they deem wise, with representatives of other Interchurch bodies, and shall recommend plans for the future. The Executive Committee is requested in the meantime to utilize the surveys, literature, and all such material of the Interchurch World Movement as can be operated through the boards and other agencies of the denomination without expense to the Interchurch World Movement as such."

To Reorganize Work.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Methodist Episcopal.
Mrs. Mary Leonard Woodruff, Methodist Episcopal.
The Rev. H. C. Swearingen, D. D., Presbyterian in United States of America.
The Rev. R. C. Morris, D. D., Presbyterian in United States.
Mrs. Anna Atwater, Disciples of Christ.
The Rev. James H. Mohorter, D. D., Disciples of Christ.
The Rev. William Horsee Day, D. D., Congregational.
Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Congregational.
The Rev. W. C. Parks, National Baptist.
The Rev. A. C. Sidall, D. D., Church of the Brethren.
Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Methodist Episcopal South.
The Rev. L. H. Lewis, D. D., Methodist Protestant.
Dr. Joseph H. Appel, Reformed in United States.
Bishop S. C. Breyfogel, Evangelical Association.

It was a matter of comment that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who had given of time and money from the first, was not present, and no message was known to have been read from him. He is in the West.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling again dented that the Interchurch investigated the steel strike of last Fall and then delayed its report had anything to do with the present crisis" of the movement. He said the strike report would be released to all the newspapers of the country about July 27.

ROCKEFELLER AT 81 FINDS LIFE BRIGHT

CHILDREN SEND FLOWERS

LAKEWOOD, N. J., July 8.—John D. Rockefeller celebrated his eighty-first birthday here today. He declared he felt hale and hearty and was enjoying every minute of his life. He passed on some of this joy of living to the employes on his estate by distributing gifts, accompanying each with a handshake. Mr. Rockefeller's sister, Mrs. Davis, was present, while his children sent flowers and telegraphed their congratulations.

Mr. Rockefeller began the day with his usual round of golf, playing with Miss Martha Jamison, who motored over from Spring Lake, against the Rev. William C. Wedemeyer, pastor of the Lakewood Baptist Church, and Edwin J. Nelson, Superintendent of the Lakewood schools.

As he made his way over the two and a half miles of the nine-hole course, Mr. Rockefeller's enthusiasm was unflagging and his strokes vigorous. Miss Jamison and he won by a hole, the stroke scores being tied. The game was decided at the last hole.

Throughout the day Mr. Rockefeller was in high spirits. Beyond the statement that he was enjoying every day, he merely said he was glad to be celebrating his birth anniversary. His friends expressed satisfaction over his mental keenness and physical vigor. They said the last few years had seemed to pass over him with exceptional kindliness.

The celebration, the first held by Mr. Rockefeller at his Lakewood estate, closed with a dinner. Only a few old friends and relatives were present.

MISS MORGAN A BRIDE.

Miss Consuelo Morgan, daughter of Harry H. Morgan, United States Trade Commissioner in Belgium, and Mrs. Morgan, was married yesterday in Paris to Count Jean de Maupas du Juglart.

The bride has been studying in Paris since last March. Her wedding gown was made partly of point d'Alencon lace, which has been used in former weddings in the du Maupas family, one of the oldest in France, dating back to the eleventh century. Count and Countess de Maupas will make their home in Paris.

Starr-Barner.

Smith-Bogart.

Miss Margaret D. Smith of Los Angeles, Cal., and Captain James H. Bogart, U. S. A., of Boston, were married yesterday at the home of Captain Bogart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bogart, at Port Chester, N. Y. The Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong officiated.

Brooks-Gilmer Nuptials.

Miss Mary Buffington Brooks, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Swepson J. Brooks of Fiske Farm, Harrison, N. Y., and Lieutenant Francis Hooks Gilmer of the U. S. S. Arizona, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gilmer of New Orleans, were married at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, at Harrison. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William St. John. The Recruit band of the Twenty-third Street Navy Recruiting Station played during the reception. The bride, during the war, served as a yeoman at this station. She is a graduate of the Rye Seminary, class of '17. Lieutenant Gilmer was graduated at Annapolis in 1918.

Engagements.

Mr. and Mrs. Elisha C. Tower of this city and Troy have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Marie Tower Martiniz Zorilla, to George Waters Stieff of Baltimore. Mrs. Martiniz is the widow of Christobal Martiniz Zorilla of Hornos, Mexico, who was killed when the United States Marines landed at Vera Cruz, in April, 1914. Mrs. Martiniz has been residing since at the Ritz-Carlton in this city and also with her brother in Baltimore. The wedding will take place early in August at the Troy residence.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Haas of this city and Tarrytown, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sally Harriette Haas to Carl Robert Sadowsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Sadowsky of this city and Irvington. Miss Haas is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mr. Sadowsky graduated from Princeton, class of '20. He served in the navy during the war.

NO SUGAR SHORTAGE.

We Have Had 15% More Than in Other Years, Says Government.

Despite the contention by many storekeepers that a sugar shortage had existed in this country during the early part of the year, the Department of Agriculture asserts that the United States used 15 per cent. more sugar this year than in former years. A greater supply of sugar than ever before has been handled in this country during the last few months, it continues, with net imports 25 per cent., or over 1,000,000,000 pounds, greater than in any previous period.

"From all present conditions, sugar will be more abundant next Winter," says a recent publication of the department. There will apparently be an increased acreage of both cane and beet sugar this year in the United States, Cuba, and in other countries in the Northern Hemisphere. The rise in the price of sugar has encouraged increased plantings of cane and beets.

"In spite of a world shortage of sugar and a decrease of 400,000,000 pounds in domestic production, there has been used or hoarded during the current year in the United States 15 per cent. more sugar than in former years. It is obvious, therefore, that there has been no actual sugar shortage here this year. The difficulties encountered have arisen from the inability of the consumer to secure his share of the supply. Unless enormously increased amounts have been consumed, the trouble must be laid to hoarding and it is very evident that large quantities are being held for future use both by housewives and commercial concerns.

"During the past fifty years the consumption of sugar in the United States has steadily increased, at an average annual rate of one pound per year, until in the last few years the average yearly per capita consumption for all purposes is between eighty-five and ninety pounds. This compares with a per capita consumption of 36.9 pounds in 1899. The increased consumption of sugar by the soft drink, candy and ice cream industries during recent years has helped raise the total average, but to what extent is not known."

SAYS MEXICO'S AIM IS RECONSTRUCTION

FOR FRIENDLY RELATIONS

Surprised by Charge That Obregon Had a Hand in Carranza's Death—Doesn't Believe It.

Mexico is at the parting of the ways, and her people must choose today the path that leads to reconstruction or the one that means further revolution and turmoil, says Manuel Carpio, representative of El Heraldo de Mexico, who arrived in New York yesterday. Mr. Carpio said he made a tour recently through all the States of Mexico and found nowhere, even among those who represented the vital forces of the country, an unwillingness to help President Adolfo de la Huerta.

The editor said he was very much surprised to read that Julia Carranza, daughter of the late President, had asserted that General Obregon was responsible for the death of her father and that she had documents to prove it. While deploring the death of Carranza, Mr. Carpio said that such statements as those of his daughter, without production of proof, would merely mean the circulation of scandal and would prevent Mexico from showing her peaceful condition to the world.

He believed Obregon had no hand in the death of Carranza, he continued, because during the revolution Obregon had maintained an isolated and rather haughty attitude, which made him unamenable to intrigues. "We all deplore the death of Carranza, and we want to see the murderers punished," he declared. "He was a fine character surrounded by incompetents."

Has a Policy of Reconstruction.

"President de la Huerta is impressed with the necessity for a far-sighted policy of reconstruction," said Mr. Carpio. He wants to reorganize the public finances and to establish banks. General Alvarado has already begun the financial reconstruction. He is coming here on a mission that has to do with the increasing of trade relations between the United States and Mexico. His object will not be to negotiate a loan, but to make plans for the exchange of goods.

"President de la Huerta sees the need for settling the agrarian question. He wants to see an effective distribution of labor on the farms and to prevent a great migration of our workers to the United States. He is also desirous of reducing the army to from 40,000 to 60,000 men. We now have an army of 200,000, and steps toward reducing this number have already been taken by General Calles, Minister of War.

"Illiteracy is another point of attack by President de la Huerta and the new Government. We want every one in Mexico to know the three R's. As a beginning in this direction a campaign is under way whereby every illiterate person, teacher, Government employe or otherwise, will give a pledge to teach reading, writing and arithmetic to 100 persons. A special diploma will be granted by the University of Mexico City to each of these volunteers. The campaign is under the direction of José Vasconcelos, head of the university, and 15,000 employes of the Treasury Department all over the country have already made pledges to do this work.

Friendly Relations Desired.

"I think the peaceful condition in Mexico today shows what we have been fighting for. We who want Mexican reconstruction to succeed and desire friendly relations between the two countries, which are opposed by crooks and politicians and selfish intriguers of both countries who take advantage of troubled conditions to keep alive turmoil and mistrust and give opportunities to writers and propagandists and mercenary people to go on feeding the people of the United States with the impression that Mexico is a savage country.

"We want to show the United States that we are an able nation, that we have been thrown into disturbances not exactly by our incapacity for government, but because of the interests that would possess our wealth.

"I hope that the oil interests will appreciate the liberal spirit of the new order of things in Mexico and will come to an agreement with us. I don't think an agreement is impossible, and in fact I am hopeful one will be arrived at. Some of the foreign oil representatives give the impression that they want to rule in Mexico. They want Article 27 of the new Constitution to be abolished and to restore the Constitution of 1857.

"As to foreign loans, my private opinion is that after careful consideration of the subject the Government should seek a loan on the basis of converting the present debt and not to give scandalous promises that small countries are so apt to give. I have in mind what happened to Persia and China, and I don't want Mexico to be another Persia or China."

BONILLAS PREDICTS REVOLTS.

It Is Impossible for Mexican Militarists to Hold Together, He Says.

WASHINGTON, July 8 (Associated Press.)—A conflict of irreconcilable elements that make up the present régime in Mexico is certain to break out in the near future, said Ignacio Bonillas, former Mexican ambassador to the United States. In discussing Mexican affairs and the recent revolution here today.

Senor Bonillas, who was a civilian candidate for the Presidency, was with President Carranza during the flight from Mexico City and narrowly escaped with his life after his chief had been killed. He arrived in Washington several days ago to await the return of Senora Bonillas from Italy, where she has been visiting their daughter.

"The great mass of people of Mexico are tired of revolution and of military rule," the former Ambassador said. "They greatly desire peace and a government of civilians, with the army solely as the supporter and guarantee of orderly civil government, as other modern nations do. The Obregon coup was a purely military. Obregon himself knew that the people were overwhelmingly in favor of a civilian as President, and he tried to win this support by putting aside his military rank.

"The present régime in Mexico is made up of heterogeneous elements that cannot be reconciled for long. The prompt elimination of General Pablo Gonzales by the Obregonistas after they had used him to precipitate the coup that ended in the killing of the President is an indication of what will come. All the bandits who made trouble under the Carranza administration joined forces with Obregon, and it is too soon for them all to break away. But they will, and the beginning has come with the frequent small outbreaks in various parts of the country. The Pablistas (follows of General Pablo Gonzales) are already grumbling at the elimination of their chief."

Senor Bonillas said that while Obregon was a strong man, he was not strong enough to hold power in Mexico during a protracted period of reconstruction.

VILLA MODIFIES HIS TERMS.

Conciliation Is Considered Likely—New Revolt in Petosi.

MEXICO CITY, July 8.—Elias L. Torres of El Paso, who conferred on behalf of the Provisional Government with Francisco Villa, the rebel leader, with regard to an armistice, has announced that Villa has modified his peace terms and that conciliation is likely, says the Excelsior.

General Larga has started an uprising in the State of San Luis Potosi, according to announcements by the War Office today. It is added that as the leader has only 100 men the movement is not considered important.

General Pablo Gonzales will leave Mexico shortly for the United States, according to reports received by his friends in this city.

Petroleum men will be given further hearings in an effort to adjust the differences between them and the Government. Provisional President de la Huerta told newspaper correspondents today.

The Provisional President said there would be more uprisings and that the revolts thus far had been promoted by men fearing that they would be held responsible for their past acts.

Mexico will export during 1920 more oil than the rest of the world, including the United States, according to estimates made by George Blardone, the Tampico oil statistician. He declares that Mexico's exportations for the year will be between 130,000,000 and 135,000,000 barrels, the figures being based upon the record-breaking production of oil in this country for the first five months of 1920.

NOGALES, Ariz., July 8.—General Alvaro Obregon, in a statement here today regarding reports of revolts in parts of Mexico against the de facto Government, said the revolting Generals were former Carranza adherents who feared punishment by the present Government on graft charges.

The revolts, the General said, are confined to two or three local sections and are regarded as a bluff, preceding flight of the revolting parties to the mountains as fugitives from justice.

COX SUFFRAGE PLEA LOST.

Louisiana Legislature, 52 to 46, Refuses to Ratify.

BATON ROUGE, LA., July 8.—All possibility of Louisiana enfranchising the women of the nation through ratification of the Federal Suffrage Amendment was removed tonight when the biennial session of the State Legislature adjourned sine die.

From the first to the last day of he session suffrage ratification was given consideration, either in the committee rooms or on the floors of the two houses. The ratification resolution was defeated by both the House and Senate early in the session, but the suffrage forces, undaunted, worked to bring up another resolution.

Hopes of success were heightened yesterday by the appeal of Governor Cox, the Democratic Presidential nominee, for ratification. Attempts today to obtain suspension of the rules to bring up a ratification resolution in the House, however, failed 52 to 46.

Supporters of bills to grant the vote to white women of the State also met defeat during the session, all such bills having been defeated.

The principal measure recommended by Governor Parker, embodying a plan to raise $3,000,000 annually by severance taxes on natural resources of the State, such as oil, timber, sulphur, gravel, gas and moss, was passed with comparatively little opposition.

ITALY INVITES AMERICANS.

LONDON, July 7.—American delegates to the International Conference of Chambers of Commerce recently held at Paris have been officially invited by the Italian Government to visit Italy.

The Government invites them to make a brief survey of the industrial and financial position of the country with a view to future trade possibilities, and also to acquaint themselves with actual conditions in Italian industrial and commercial life. The trip is to cover the chief places of interest in and around Padua, Ferrara, Venice, Milan, Genoa and Turin.

The delegation includes John H. Fahey of Boston, the Chairman, upon whom King Victor Emmanuel has bestowed the decoration of Commander of the Crown of Italy; Willis H. Booth of New York, Edward A. Filene of Boston and C. C. Mead, Secretary of the Merchants' Association of New York, all of whom were made Knights in the same order at the time of the decoration of Chairman Fahey.

AID TO AMERICANIZATION.

Employers Asked to Help Immigrants Learn About America.

The co-operation of employers of foreign labor is asked by the Interracial Council, 120 Broadway, in the work of distributing information designed to stabilize immigrant labor and to give foreign-born workers a better understanding of the institutions of America and of world conditions in general.

The Council is prepared to distribute the reports from foreign-language papers regarding conditions abroad and from other unbiased sources, such as the Red Cross. These reports are intended for publication in shop bulletins, and also through posters and pay-envelope slips.

TO SHIP BEES BY AIRPLANE.

Canadian Apiarists to Import Them from the South.

Delivering bees by air is the latest use to which an airplane will be put, according to Aerial Age, which tells of the owner of large apiaries in Ontario, Canada, arranging for an airplane to bring him a supply of bees from the southern part of this country.

"It is expected that a large number of bees will be imported into Canada for next year," says Aerial Age, "and the Canadian breeders are anxious not to get a strain which might weaken during the Winter months. It is therefore important that the bees arrive at the right moment next Spring in Canada and without loss of time. This is where the speed of the airplane is to be turned to account."

Platten's Sentence Confirmed.

The re-trial by a Swiss courtmartial of Fritz Platten, one of the right-hand men of Nikolai Lenin and a prominent Swiss Socialist and ex-member of the Federal Council, on a charge of having incited troops to mutiny in connection with the general strike of November, 1918, through the distribution of circulars, ended on June 15 with the affirmation of the sentence of six months' imprisonment pronounced several months ago while Platten was in Russia. Swiss papers say that the case will probably be carried to the highest court of the Confederation. Platten returned to Switzerland only two weeks before the trial after having been held a prisoner for some time by the Poles, who had captured him and his wife at Kovo in Lithuania, when an airplane in which they were sailing from Rome was forced to descend.

DE LA HUERTA TAKES HAND IN OIL AFFAIRS

Mexican President Calls Conference and Will Himself Endeavor to Reach Settlement.

SAYS DIFFERENCES ARE FEW

He Thinks Troubles Are Mainly Over Words, Due to Misinterpretation of Law.

Special to The New York Times.

MEXICO CITY, July 8.—The oil question will be settled, if the present opinions of President de la Huerta hold good, after meeting with lawyers for the oil companies and some government lawyers.

Oil owners will be given five years to denounce their properties, and after denouncement they will have permanent rights. All the properties "jumped" under decrees of Carranza will have the right of protection, and the owners and lessees will be given preference to prove ownership.

The new organic oil law will be the same as the mining law, with a proviso that the owners be given protection against claim-jumpers. Titles to lands fro mbefore 1917 to the present date will be considered equal. The main principle of government ownership of the soil will still hold, but the owners under the law, when denounced, will legally extract oil or not as suits their convenience.

De la Huerta, lying in a sick bed, received the American and English reporters tonight in Chapultepec Castle. He was lying in the large double bed used by Maximilian for afternoon siestas. The President talked to the press men for more than three hours on general topics. The conversation, stated the President, was not for publication, but when he expressed his ideas on the oil regulation he said that as the settlement was a matter of vital importance to Mexico, it might be made known.

His present ideas, the President said, were formed after careful study of the problem. While he did not think he would change them, he would have a meeting in the next few days with lawyers representing the oil interests and consulting lawyers of the Mexican Government, who would discuss all oil matters. He had decided to take this step as both sides, after the recent conferences, held that the department of industry had claimed conversion.

At the new meeting de la Huerta will, after hearing the arguments of both sides, take further counsel with his own lawyer, who is not interested in the oil question and can give an unbiased opinion.

The oil question, said de la Huerta, is a storm in a glass of water. After study he could see that no attempt had been made to really settle the question. The oil men have stated that Article 27 confiscates their land. The whole point said de la Huerta, was a question of a name.

"Take, for example, one large mining corporation," he said. "They are extracting minerals and shipping to foreign countries. Who are their directors? We do not care. They have complied with the law, and have, under the law, full protection to do what they wish with the property. What difference does it make if the minerals under the land are Federal? They have the right, under the law, to mine and use these minerals for their own benefit. It will be the same with the oil. What difference does it make if the oil is called National, when the owner of the property has the right to extract the oil and sell, or ship it or not, just as he chooses? They will have protection of the law."

Answering a question on the decree of Carranza which permitted denouncing the properties which had not obeyed the decrees, de la Huerta stated that the owners would be given prior rights to establish ownership and given five years to make denouncement. After denouncements had been made they would obtain absolute title and ownership.

Referring to the point raised as to whether the constitution of 1884 separated oil from mineral rights, de la Huerta stated the constitution of 1857 stated that the Government owned all sub-oil, while the constitution of 1884 gave no sub-oil rights to the land owners, but the government had the right to modify all constitutions to suit changing conditions.

The present articles are part of the legal constitution, were not retroactive and could not be stopped, he stated, as the United States had changed her constitution through amendments, such as ending slavery without taking account of the investment in slaves. These ideas, said De la Huerta, will be formed into decrees which will be passed upon by Congress. When meeting in September, Congress will make final decision of the validity of articles 27 and 214.

De La Huerta stated that he was studying means for reducing the present taxes of five pesos per hectare to a very much lower figure. He had thought five pesos high and was willing to make the lowest rate possible in order to help the industry.

The president stated that uprisings by different generals were expected, as a number were known to b dissatisfied, but he was sure the men who in the past had followed revolutions as an occupation could now find work, as the country was short of labor.

HALL—Ernest. At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Liberty Insurance Company of America, held on the seventh day of July, 1920, the following minute was unanimously adopted and placed upon the record:

The sad removal by death, on the thirteenth day of June, 1920, of our associate, Hon. Ernest Hall, from the many spheres of influence and usefulness in which he easily took the place of leader, especially in this legal profession, brings to us, the officers and the Board of Directors of the National Liberty Insurance Company of America, the deepest and sincerest sorrow, in recalling his exalted character, his loyalty to this company and its officers and his distinguished services to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to the City and to his county.

He was ever a true patriot. To know him was to admire him.

Attracted by nature, his willingness and capacity for service seemed only to intensify those qualities of heart and life which made him conspicuous.

He served his company as Director and legal counsel for more than thirty-nine years; was a member of its Executive and Finance Committee and he donated his law library to the company.

He was a devoted husband and father, and was zealous, considerate, generous and faithful in every relation of life; he has completed life's task, when life summons easy.

Resolved that this minute be placed upon the record, and also sent to the press, and that an engrossed copy be sent to the family under the seal of the corporation.

PRINCETON BEATS OXFORD IN MEET

Tiger Athletes Score Creditable Victory Over Rivals in Dual Clash in England.

TAKE SIX OF TEN EVENTS

RUDD IS DOUBLE WINNER

LONDON, July 8.—Princeton defeated Oxford in their dual track and field meet at the Queens Club here today. Princeton won six of the events, while Oxford was victorious in four. The spectators included the Duke of York, John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, and Earl Beatty and Lady Beatty. Also in the stands were President Hibben and Dean McLanahan of Princeton and Viscount Bryce.

Princeton athletes finished first in the 100-yard dash, 120-yard hurdles, high jump, shot put, hammer throw and broad jump.

R. E. Brown, of Princeton, won the 100-yard dash. B. G. D. Rudd, of Oxford, the South African runner, was second. R. D. Clark, of Princeton, was third and Wood of Oxford was fourth. Brown won the event by a yard and a half. The time was 10 seconds flat.

Erdman Wins Hurdle Race.

In the 120-yard hurdles C. R. Erdman, jr., of Princeton, was first, G. W. Trowbridge, of Princeton, was second, and Jeppe of Oxford, third. Erdman finished a yard and a half ahead of Trowbridge, who was six yards ahead of Jeppe. The time was 15 2-5 seconds.

Rudd of Oxford won the quarter-mile run. W. E. Stowenson, of Princeton, was second, and C. L. Adams, of Princeton, was third. Rudd took the event by six yards. The time was 50 seconds.

Rudd also won the half-mile run, with F. L. Murrey of Princeton second and Neil Hughes of Oxford, third. Rudd won by twenty-five yards in 1 minute 59 4-5 seconds.

The mile run was won by Milligan of Oxford, with Montague of Oxford second, R. McCulloch of Princeton third and A. Swede of Princeton fourth. Milligan won by eight yards in 4 minutes 21 1-5 seconds.

Montague Is First.

The three-mile race was won by Montague of Oxford. Swede of Princeton was second, Broadbent of Oxford third and McCulloch of Princeton fourth. Montague led throughout and won by eighty yards. There were 160 yards between the second and third man and eighty yards between the third and fourth. Montague's time was 15 minutes 10 seconds.

S. Harrison Thomson of Princeton won the high jump with a jump of 5 feet 9¾ inches. F. Sweet of Princeton was second with 5 feet 8 inches. White of Oxford was third with 5 feet 8 inches.

The broad jump was won by D. B. Lourie, of Princeton, with 21 feet 6 inches. J. N. C. Ford, of Oxford, with 20 feet 9¾ inches, was second. Thomson, of Princeton, was third with 20 feet 7½ inches and L. O. Ingrams, of Oxford, was fourth with 19 feet 9½ inches.

Theodore G. Speers of Princeton was first in the hammer throw with 137 feet 7½ inches. G. E. Wood of Oxford, with 137 feet, was second.

In the weight put C. D. Halsey, jr., of Princeton, was first with 44 feet 8½ inches and R. F. Cleveland, of Princeton, was second with 40 feet 10½ inches.

The victory of the Princeton athletes as against Oxford can be traced, if such a thing is possible, to the victory of R. E. Brown in the 100-yard dash. In every other respect the meet ran true to the predictions made by track experts of America and England. While it was said that Princeton would win the field events and the 120-yard high hurdles and Oxford four of the track events, the only doubtful race in the minds of both the American and English experts was the 100-yard dash, which was the feature on which the fate of the meet turned. A victory here would assure Princeton a victory, while defeat would throw the meet into a deadlock.

The triumph of Brown, who is American intercollegiate 100 and 220-yard champion, over Rudd, who is regarded as one of England's greatest runners, B. G. D. Rudd, the famous South African athlete. Whether or not Rudd could race in both the quarter and half mile and still have stamina enough to race with Brown in the short dash was a serious question. The task that faced the South African was completed by the showing of Brown in the British championship last week at Stamford Bridge, where he failed to do the 100 in even time, a performance that he bettered yesterday in defeating Rudd by a yard and a half.

Princeton's victory for Princeton in the 120-yard hurdles was a slight deflection from the advance calculations. Trowbridge of Princeton won the event at Stamford Bridge and was expected to repeat against Oxford. In all other respects the meet ran true to form. Montague of Oxford, who won the three-mile race, was beaten by Gordon Nightingale in a similar race at the Penn relays.

Even Sneak Thieves Take Wallop at Poor Umpires

The way of the baseball umpire, like that of the transgressor, is hard. It was especially tough yesterday, when some one broke into the umpires' room at the Polo Grounds during the game and stole all the clothes, jewelry and money there belonging to Umpires Billy Evans and George Hildebrand. The saddest part of the tale is that between them Evans and Hildebrand had $900 in their pockets in good cold cash. Not content with this swag the thieves took their street garb, and the two indicator holders had to go to their hotels in the umpiring uniforms. The door on the umpires' dressing room was pried open with a crowbar. The police are hunting for the thieves and the money and the clothes and also the jewelry.

LEAFS ESCAPE A BEATING.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ont., July 8.—With the Jersey City nine leading by 4 to 1 a rainstorm swept the field and caused the postponement of today's game. Only three innings were completed, but there was considerable excitement crowded into them. Umpire Moran was in hot water much of the time, making some decisions which displeased the fans mightily. Both teams suffered about equally.

Pat Shea, who has won eleven straight games for the Leafs, was on the mound and judging by his poor form it appeared probable that the Skeeters would stop his winning streak. The rain saved him.

The Leafs produced much merriment for the crowd by their clumsy tactics in the fourth inning. The rain was falling fast, but Moran kept the players at it. The Leafs decided that delay was good policy and they executed the same to perfection. Shea adopted the longest windup in history and the infielders tossed the ball around as if at practice. Finally Shea put one in the groove and Wiggleworth lifted it to Whiteman. The latter caught the ball and then threw it over Kauff's head. Kauff recovered and tossed it to Gonzalez who erred and Blackburne chased it to the stand. On almost every pitch Catcher Devine returned the ball over Shea's head.

Moran announced his intention of making them play it out, but the rain soon came down in torrents and the field was covered with miniature lakes. The umpire, soaked from the deluge, then called it off, pleasing the Leafs and disgusting Manager Donovan.

Benny Kauff has already made himself solid with local fans. He is playing in real major league form. Today in the first inning he hit for two bases and stretched it into three by great base running. It may be that he is not as good as Spencer, but the local club and fans are elated thus far over the trade.

CRIPPLED YANKEES DEFEATED IN NINTH

BRACE OF ERRORS FATAL

The Detroit Convalescents defeated the Yankee Hospital Corps at the Polo Grounds yesterday, 4 to 3. Crippled Ty Cobb won the game for the feverish Tigers and disabled Chic Fewster lost it for the ailing Yanks. Nearly 20,000 fans who want to attend the clinic in perfect health came away suffering from palpitation of the heart. The operation of separating the Yanks from the ball game was performed in the ninth inning. The Yanks were still under the effects of the anaesthetic when the internes put the patients away for the night. The downfall sent the Hugmen back to second place, Cleveland winning two at Washington.

The two patients, Fewster and Cobb, who played the leading roles in this affair, are still in the hands of their physicians. The Yanks were leading, 2 to 1, when the Tigers came up for their last rope in the first of the ninth. There is some excuse for Chic Fewster making an error after the ordeal he has been through with the sawbones, but what excuse is there for crippled Ty Cobb fooling the doctors by making a hit after he has been laid up for a month? None whatever. If Ty's doctor knew that Cobb was going to get rough and make hits, he probably would not have allowed him to leave the sick room so soon. It's no way for a patient to act, hopping from the hospital to the ball field and then making a hit that wins a ball game. A fine way for a sick man to act.

Up to the ninth it was a grand ball game. Rip Collins and Doc Ayers had indulged in a great pitching duel. Rip had allowed the Tigers one hit up to the seventh and then Shorten's single and Harry Heilman's triple gave Hughey Jennings' lads a run. In the same inning Wallie Pipp decorated the ball for a homer into the left-field bleachers and tied the score. Babe Ruth got a triple and scored on Meusel's sacrifice fly, shoving the Yanks to the front, 2 to 1.

Fewster Slips Up.

That was the layout when the Tigers came to bat in the ninth. Collins got a bit wild and Bush walked. Shorten had all the intentions in the world of laying down a sacrifice, but he popped to Meusel. Veach then slammed a hot bouncer at Collins, who got the ball by the throat and turned and threw to second for a force-out play. A beautiful double play started Fewster in the race, and if he had gone through the game would have been over and all hands happy.

Fewster ran over to second and was so anxious to grab the ball that he took it first that it slipped through his hands and Bush raced around to third. Harry Heilman laced a single to left and Bush scored with the run which tied the score.

Cobb now batting in place of Ellison," warbled the Yankee yodler who does the announcing.

A round of applause swept over the field, for it was Ty's first appearance in a baseball uniform in a month. On June 6 Cobb wrenched his left knee badly in a game against the White Sox and he had been crippled ever since. He still walks with a decided limp.

Cobb Comes to the Rescue.

Cobb, the convalescent, was just as dangerous as Cobb when he had his health. He poked a single to right and Bobby Veach raced over with the run which put Detroit in front. Heilman legged around to third, Cobb and Heilman acted as if they were going to work a double steal. Heilman took a big lead off third and Hannah made a throw to the base. The ball hit Heilman and bounced out of everybody's reach, and Harry scored with another run. Pinelli rolled to Meusel and Cobb was run down at second. Pinelli ended the inning when he was exterminated at first.

The Yanks came up in the ninth with the score 4 to 2 against them. Sammy Vick one of the few Yanks left who still retains his health, rolled to Pinelli, and the third baseman made a low throw to first, Vick going to second. Wallie Pipp, in spite of his sore finger, singled to right, and Vick scored.

The Babe Ruth roar broke loose. From the throats of 20,000 came the loud cry for home run Jackson. With Pipp on first and Babe up, and two runs needed to win, what more appetizing layout could fans ask for? But wait. Remember, Babe is a cripple. His left wrist, which was injured in Washington and then shaken up again in his recent automobile pileup in Newark, Del., was unlimbered yesterday when he slid into third base. As he came to the bat in the ninth it could easily be seen that his swing did not have the usual sweeping freedom. Babe sent a bounder to Young and was thrown out at first. Pipp took the second. Meusel fanned, Pinelli tossed Bodie out at first, and that was the bitter end.

Ayers in Good Form.

Doc Ayers took the Yankees by surprise at the very start and for six innings the Yanks didn't get a hit. Doc fanned Hannah and Collins in the third and struck out Fewster, Vick and Pipp in the fourth, making five of the Yanks in succession that succumb to his tantalizing delivery. Eighteen batsmen faced Ayers in the first six innings. Not until Collins got a pass in the sixth did any of the Yanks know what first base looked like.

Base upon the pitching of Rip Collins. He was never better and Pinelli's single in the second was the only hit the Tigers got until the seventh. Rip was in trouble in the fourth, but he pulled out gloriously. Young walked and Bush sacrificed. Shorten walked, but both Veach and Heilman shot rockets to Bodie in centre and no danger ensued.

Shorten opened the seventh with a single right. After Veach had skied to Bodie, Heilman jammed a terrific triple between centre and right and sent Shorten over the plate. Heilman didn't get beyond third, for Collins fanned Ellison and threw Pinelli out at first. Sam Vick was the first athlete up for Huggins in the seventh and he lofted a high one to Shorten. Pipp uncorked the pleasant surprise of the afternoon when he thumped a home run into the left field bleachers. It was the first homer Wallie has made at home this season and probably the only home run he has ever pounded into that section of the steerage patronage.

The Tiger outfielders spread out as Ruth came to bat. Babe hit a high fly to left and took Veach completely unawares. Veach was playing far over toward centre field. Bush made a bold attempt to get under Babe's balloon, but missed it. As the ball fell Babe was at second. He saw that no one covered third, so he kept right on to the dizzy corner. As Babe slid into the bag he put his left hand under him to break the shock and against his hurt left wrist, which was dressed in swatches of bandages. Bob Meusel lifted a high fly to centre and Ruth rushed over with the run which put the Yanks in the lead.

Then followed the incidents aforementioned, incidents bubbling with heart-breaking interest to the home cause.

Curves and Bingles

The Yanks are in the same position as the man who has one foot on the steps of the hospital and the other on a banana peel.

Doc Woods, who looks after the Yankees' ailments, is now doing the work of a hospital staff of physicians, four graduate nurses and half a dozen internes.

Manager Huggins hasn't broken down yet, but after yesterday's game he looked just as chipper as a man going to have all his teeth extracted.

Babe Ruth has now hit safely in 22 successive games. His total of bases for this string of whacks is 70.

Ty Cobb had hit in 11 successive games when he was injured on June 6, and yesterday was the twelfth game in which he has hits afely.

This was Chic Fewster's first home appearance this year. The fans gave him a warm reception. Strange to say, Fewster isn't a bit shy when he is at the bat. The chap has got in the head in Florida last March hasn't taken away any of his gameness.

For six innings this was the swiftest game the Yanks have played this season. They played the first six in just sixty minutes.

Ruth has become so popular that the girls in the field boxes bring their camera and take snapshots of him as he walks to the plate.

Hughey Jennings has lost none of his pep. He is out on the coaching lines chirping as gaily as if his club was only a few games away from the pennant.

GIANTS BEGIN TRIP BY LOSING TO CUBS

Toney Is Soundly Thumped and Chicago Captures First Game by Score of 8 to 5.

CHICAGO, July 8.—The Giants, resuming operations today after two days of rest, showed signs of being somewhat over-rested and succumbed to the Cubs in the opening conflict of their second Western trip by the score of 8 to 5. It wasn't for lack of rooters that the invaders from New York fell by the wayside, for a good array of Elks from Gotham and other points eastward, now here for their convention, meandered out to the ball park to spruce up the Giants by means of vocal pyrotechics. Neither was the disaster due to unfavorable playing conditions, for the day was made to order for the remaining warhorses of McGraw's brigade. It was merely a case of being outhitted and outfielded—which, after all, seems to make any further explanation unnecessary.

The Giants are still a pretty good drawing card in Chicago in spite of their mishaps this season. The glamour which served as a bale for the team in former and happier days when the New Yorkers and the Chicagoans were scrapping away in the first division is not yet entirely dissipated here, and tradition nerves to attract the fans when Manhattan installs the North Side grounds. So there was a goodly turnout this afternoon and the fans had a good time. They saw the Giants repulsed after taking an early lead and they saw the home players put up a tobacco-sprinkled brand of baseball which revived the by no means extinct pennant hopes of the Cub rooters.

Fred Toney essayed the twirling task for the New York club and he took a solid battering, being flagged for fourteen safe drives in seven innings, including three doubles, a triple and a home run. Then he departed, not because he was discourassed or anything like that, for he was just beginning to like it, but to let a pinch hitter officiate. Winters finished the game and nobody cudgeled him safely during the remainder of the matinee.

Tyler in Excellent Form.

Tyler attended to the pitching for the Cubs and made a good job of it. Once past the second inning, when the Giants took a brief and ephemeral lead which lasted about a minute, Tyler steadied down and kept the hits nicely scattered and the runs even more so.

Burns opened the afternoon's affray with a fly to Twombly. Bancroft whizzed a grounder to Hollocher and died at first. Young shot a liner into Terry's extended mitts.

The Cubs took better advantage of their opening chance. Twombly bunted down the first base line and beat out the throw. He stole second and got around to the third sack on Hollocher's sacrifice. Deacon Terry whanged one of Toney's offerings into deep left for two bases, and Twombly registered. Terry went to third on a passed ball and tried to score after George Burns had caught Davey Robertson's fly, but George nipped him at the plate with a perfect throw to Snyder.

Now came the only shaky spot for the Giants up to start the second. Frisch drove a sharp grounder through the box, but Hollocher was there with a great pickup and a sharp throw which nailed the Fordham Flash at first. Tyler smothered Kelly's bounder and threw him out. Doesn't sound very good so far? No, but here's the short and simple annals of a two-run outburst. King singled to right and Larry Doyle whaled the ball over the right field wall. Tyler passed out Snyder. Score, Giants 2, Cubs 0.

Giant rooters won't care much about the rest of this narrative and are hereby advised to lay off at this point.

In the second half of the second the Cubs took those two runs right back. They knew they had been loaned anyway. Barber beat out a bunt down the first base line. Paskert filled to Burns. Young lost Herzog's fly in the sun and it was good for two bases. Barber stopping at third. Bancroft hit to Paskert and Barber, dashing for the plate, executed a neat fall-away slide which beat the throw. Herzog went to third on the play. Tyler drove out a sacrifice fly to Young and Herzog finished his journey. Frisch threw out Twombly.

Cubs Add Two More Tallies.

Thereafter the Giants were never in the hunt, for the local men, after retiring the visitors in quick order in the third, added two more to their count. Hollocher was the recipient of free transportation on four wide ones at the outset. Terry sacrificed him along one base. Then Davey Robertson crashed a triple to right field and Hollocher tallied. Robertson crossed the plate after King had absorbed Barber's sacrifice fly. Paskert and Herzog came through with successive singles to centre

HOPE OF BIG FIGHT IN 1920 IS DEAD

MANAGERS IN CONFERENCE

Descamps Is Held Up by Prior Contracts—American Refuses to Contest Abroad.

The last lingering hope that Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, might defend his title against Georges Carpentier before the end of the year went up in a tiny puff of smoke yesterday afternoon, when the first meeting of the managers and promoters connected with the proposed bout was held at the Hotel Belmont. After more than an hour of earnest but futile discussion the conclave ended exactly where it began, the only definite fact which emerged from the verbal battle being that the championship bout will not be held during 1920 unless one of a dozen very unlikely occurrences takes place.

The rock on which the plans of the managers and promoters came to grief was that of contracts, the sanctity of which formed the basis of more than one speech during the progress of the meeting. First of the obstructions was the agreement between François Descamps, Carpentier's manager, and Charles B. Cochran, the English promoter, which links the French fighter to Cochran until Jan. 1, 1921. The second of the contracts to bar the path was that for the ring battle between Carpentier and Battling Levinsky, the promoter of which is Jack Curley, the manager of Carpentier's recent tour.

The meeting was held in the suite of Jack Kearns, the manager of Dempsey, and it was an open affair. Those present, in addition to newspaper men, moving picture photographers and followers of both sides, were Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager; Georges Carpentier and his manager, François Descamps; Jack Curley, promoter of Carpentier's tour; Tex Rickard, who promoted the Willard-Dempsey bout, and William A. Brady, the theatrical producer, who acted in the dual capacity of chairman of the meeting and representative of Charles B. Cochran.

A First Meeting.

The occasion was the first time since Carpentier came to this country that the rival managers had met across a table and discussed terms. Heretofore, their negotiations had been conducted at the ends of a telegraph wire, with no little success as attended yesterday's conclave. Whatever plans either party was entertaining were effectively blocked by the contracts already entered into by Carpentier and Descamps.

The only developments of the meeting were these: Carpentier's next bout will be on Oct. 10 in this country with Battling Levinsky, light-heavyweight champion; Dempsey's next encounter will be with Bill Brennan, and it will be followed by bouts with several others of the heavyweight field, notably with Fred Fulton, if the latter wins his clash with Harry Wills in this city on July 15; Dempsey will not fight Carpentier in any other country but the United States and he will sign no articles until after the Levinsky bout; Carpentier is prevented by his contract for the latter clash from taking Dempsey on this year, even if Charles B. Cochran could be persuaded to release the French idol from that contract that now binds him until Jan. 1, 1921.

It was evident at the meeting that the Levinsky contract is the greatest stumbling block in the path of both Dempsey and Carpentier. William A. Brady, who represents Cochran in the United States, was told definitely by Kearns that Dempsey would never meet the Frenchman in a European ring, thus making Cochran's contract worth nothing. But even if the English promoter would abrogate the agreement under these circumstances, the contract for the Levinsky bout would still block the way. Jack Curley, who is promoting the battle, rejected Kearns's suggestion that the bout be postponed and refused even to approach Dan Morgan, Levinsky's manager, with the suggestion. Kearns offered to pay both Curley and Morgan a substantial forfeit if they would postpone the bout, but to no avail.

Kearns Declines to Move.

Without this assurance from Curley, Kearns refused to move another step toward the championship bout. He made no attempt to conceal his opinion about the state of affairs, which is that after the Levinsky bout, it may be Levinsky and not Carpentier that Dempsey would have to meet. Dempsey's manager refused to sign any articles in advance of a bout that may make Carpentier worth $100 after it is all over."

The case of Carpentier was stated by Descamps, through Jack Curley as interpreter, and it rested solely on the contracts to which the French manager has affixed his signature. He contended that his action in signing the Levinsky contract was justified in view of the uncertainty surrounding Dempsey and the latter's recent trial, which at that time threatened to drag on for several months. Furthermore, the Cochran contract forbids the Frenchman from even discussing with another promoter terms for a bout with Dempsey. Descamps told Kearns that Carpentier is willing to fight Dempsey in London or Paris within four or six weeks after the Levinsky bout on Oct. 10, but the champion's manager spurned the challenge.

Carpentier's plans call for a departure on the liner La Touraine tomorrow. The French idol will remain abroad until Sept. 6, when he will take steamer for this country to prepare for the clash with Levinsky. Following this he will again return to France, where he will stay until it is time to return to the United States again for the Dempsey bout, which now seems certain to be held some time in 1921.

Charley Harvey, American representative for Ted Lewis, who is now fighting abroad, issued a challenge to Carpentier after the meeting to meet Lewis either in this country or in Europe. Harvey declared his willingness to make a side bet of $10,000, but Descamps took refuge behind his Cochran contract and refused to listen to Harvey's challenge. The latter also made an offer on behalf of Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight whom Carpentier knocked out in London last Fall, but was likewise unsuccessful in this challenge.

The positive announcement was made after the meeting by Kearns that Dempsey would meet Bill Brennan in his first bout since the bout at Toledo in which the former won the title from Willard. No date or place has been selected, Kearns said, but the bout will go to the highest bidder. Kearns indicated that the champion will be active in the ring between now and the time when he finally faces Carpentier to defend his title.

YALE STAR ENTERS BOUTS.

Ed Eagan to Compete in Olympic Boxing Tryouts Here.

The latest entry to be received for the final Olympic boxing tryouts to be held at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, Twenty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue, next Monday and Tuesday evenings, is that of Ed. R. Eagan, captain of the Yale University boxing team. Eagan has entered for the light heavyweight class.

In 1914, when 16 years old, Eagan won the Western welterweight amateur boxing championship and in 1916 won both middle and heavyweight championships of the West at Denver. He then enlisted in the army.

Eagan will be a senior in Yale University next year, and is also a student in the Sheffield Scientific School. He was on the football squad last Fall and hopes to make the team this coming season.

Last Summer he competed in the interallied games held at Paris and won the middleweight boxing championship. He also held the title of amateur heavyweight champion of the United States last year, having won it at Boston.

Eight Olympic Trap Shots Average .9537 for 5 Years.

One of the most remarkable records ever compiled in trapshooting is the five-year mark made by the eight members of the American Olympic trapshooting team. In this period the eight marksmen broke a total of 188,000 targets for an average of .9537. This is proof conclusive of the ability of the team that this country has sent to Antwerp to compete against the best trapshooters in the world. It is a wonderful record and it is doubtful whether any of the teams that will represent the other countries in the Olympic games can offer anything that remotely approaches it. The eight men who made the mark are: Jay Clark, Jr., captain of the team; Mark Arie, Frank M. Troch, Frank S. Wright, Fred Plum, Ben S. Donnelly, Horace Bonser and Forest W. McNier.

BRITISH RIFLEMEN TO MEET U. S. TEAM

Cable Match on Ranges Will Be Conducted in Connection with National Meet.

One of the most interesting of the events to be held in conjunction with the national rifle shooting tournament, to be held under the auspices of the Government at Camp Perry, Ohio, next month, will be the international match with the pick of the small bore rifle teams of England, Canada and Australia opposing the marksmen of the United States. This match will be shot by cable. The teams will do their shooting on their home ranges, the score will be exchanged by cable and later the targets will be exchanged. The event will be for the $1,000 Dewar Trophy. This prize is now held by this country and a team of twenty picked men will shoot in its defense.

Fired first about 1900, the British team defeated the American small bore team for the cup, using the indoor range and 23-yard distance. The Americans took it back the next year, lost it in 1912, then re-took it in 1913 and kept it in 1914. Last year at the Caldwell National Matches of the Government, the American team shot against the British team over the outdoor ranges for the first time, teams of twenty men, distance 50 and 100 yards, 20 shots at each range.

The American team won by 91 points. Camp Perry will see another attempt of the British to take the trophy home, whence it originally came, the match is scheduled for August 21.

An additional feature of the national rifle matches will be the small-bore tournament, which will be held on a completely equipped range at 50 and 100 yards.

There will be special events at 200 yards, with cash entries and cash prizes, and a most generous list of special prizes, such as rifles, telescopes and ammunition, for the shooter who has not won a first, second or third in any of the big matches.

These small-bore matches are open for the shooters of the little .22 rifle, who are forming clubs all over the country to engage in this attractive sport. The development of the high accuracy and small amount of noise of the .22 rifle are making the small-bore game more popular than the service rifle shooting in America, as it is in England, because the devotee can find a place 100 yards long almost anywhere, while firing the noisy and powerful service rifle requires a lot of room and usually a long trip to the range.

The "army" matches of this year will be marked by the great number of pistol events, in which any old pistol from the .32 for police teams, to the .38 or larger for the other events, may be used.

The E. W. Widener's Joyful won the steeplechase event by eight lengths from Candidate, 2d, with Ticket third among the eight that faced the starter. Joyful, a fence-shy well, took the lead on the second turn of the field and drew away, to win easily. Candidate had a chance until the last jump, when he made a bad landing. Ticket was allowed to trail although the race had received a good judged ride. He moved up stoutly in the last half mile and took third money.

PEN ROSE SCORES AN EASY VICTORY

The Triple Springs Farm scored a double triumph at Aqueduct yesterday when the four-year-old filly Pen Rose captured the Miss Woodford Handicap at a mile, which was the feature of the card, and King Agrippa led home a field of cheaper performers in the following event at a mile. The victory of Pen Rose, however, was won with the aid of racing luck, for the filly got home first only after Commander J. K. L. Ross's Milkmaid had bled at the head of the stretch and had to be pulled up.

The accident to Milkmaid was deplored not only because she was the favorite in the race, but more particularly because she is one of the most popular racers of her sex. She has been a steady and consistent performer under heavy weights and against the best horses, and is generally regarded as the best filly in this country.

Milkmaid bled so badly that she had to be pulled up to a walk just at a time when it appeared that she was winning. It is the opinion of her trainer that this was due to her long and hard campaign. She will be given a rest, and may not be seen in action again until Autumn.

With Milkmaid out of the contest Pen Rose won easily, though she had to be urged as she neared the finish. She had a length and a half to spare over Lady Gertrude, while J. W. McClelland's Toujours was third among the eight that started.

Leads All the Way.

Pen Rose broke in front and led all the way. Before turning out of the back stretch she had opened up a gap of three lengths at which time Milkmaid was second. Sande sent the Ross filly up as he went around the turn. Milkmaid closed the gap and was but half a length out of first place when straightened out in the stretch. She was rapidly disposing of her rival and appeared a sure winner when she was seen to suddenly drop back.

It appeared from the stands that she had gone lame. All the horses passed her in a few strides and Sande brought his mount to a walk. Pen Rose was easily the best of the others and, having gained a long lead on the balance of the field, she held it to the finish. Lady Gertrude moved up in the stretch and took second by four lengths. Toujours had been well supported because of the light weight she had been asked to carry but she faltered when the drive came.

King Agrippa had little to beat in his one mile journey, and he romped home four lengths in front of Franz Tireur with Cherubino third. Thistle Queen was the early pace maker, but she tired after going six furlongs and Cherubino made his bid. He tired badly in the stretch and King Agrippa, which has been away last and had been forced to go around the field, came rumbling along in the stretch, caught the leader and drew away to win very easily.

The Quincy Stable's Elmendorf, which is at his best right now, was an easy winner of the Myrtle Selling Stakes at a mile. He took the measure of Sir Solestus by a length and a half to spare over Sundial II., these being the only starters after the blue pencil had been used industriously on the original entries.

Second Successive Victory.

It was the second successive victory for Elmendorf. The three horses were close together all through the back stretch with Sundial setting the pace, but on reaching the stretch, Elmendorf went to the front, and under a manful rush drew away to win by six lengths. Salvestra caught Sundial as the latter tired and was an easy second.

T. D. Weir's Hendrie still retains enough class to take the measure of the cheaper sprinters, and he was an easy winner in the first race, at six and a half furlongs, leading home Phalaris by four lengths, while Frank Waters took third.

E. E. Widener's Joyful won the steeplechase event by eight lengths from Candidate, 2d, with Ticket third among the eight that faced the starter. Joyful, a fence-shy well, took the lead on the second turn of the field and drew away, to win easily. Candidate had a chance until the last jump, when he made a bad landing. Ticket was allowed to trail although the race had received a good judged ride. He moved up stoutly in the last half mile and took third money.

LONDON, July 8.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the noted British professional golfers, left London this morning to board the Celtic at Liverpool for New York. With them was Jim Barnes, the American professional, who finished fifth in the British open championship.

Barnes said just before his departure that he would come to England again next year to try his fortune once more in the open event.

HUNTER IS WINNER OVER MANCHESTER

Francis T. Hunter, twice winner of the North Side Challenge Cup, and needing only one more victory to secure permanent possession of the trophy, yesterday entered the final round of the tennis singles at the University Heights Club, defeating Herbert H. Manchester, the home representative, in a straight semi-final at 6—2, 6—4. Last year's champion, Elliott H. Binzen, who had been counted upon to give Hunter a fight in the finals, was rather unexpectedly eliminated in the fifth round by Percy L. Kynaston, in three sets, by a score of 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. The winner of this match meets Alfred D. Hammett this afternoon for the remaining final bracket.

Hunter beat Manchester yesterday, as he has been most of his opponents recently, by sheer strength and speed. The husky Cornellian never seems to tire, no matter how fast the pace or how often he may be called upon to play, and yesterday he was physically in perfect shape. Manchester was almost outclassed in the opener, but came back with a fine brace in the second set, and gave his rival a close fight to the finish. He hit the ball almost as hard as Hunter at times, but the pace soon told on him, and he did not have quite the endurance to keep it up indefinitely. His drives from deep court were very steady, however, after he had found the range, and in general he made Hunter work for every point.

Hunter Gets Good Start.

Hunter won the toss for service, and took the first two games with the loss of only one point. Manchester then made a determined effort, and broke through in a long deuce game, which robbed him of much of his stamina. They alternated in winning the next two, and then Hunter put the set on ice in another deuce game. He took the next two more easily, and the session was his at 6—2.

Manchester then staged a spectacular rally, going right through his opponent for the first three games of the second set, taking the first without the loss of a point. Hunter, however, braced in turn, and produced an uphill fight that with five in a row, his great forehand drive crashing through the court for a constant succession of tallies. Leading at 5—3 and 4—0, he seemed to have the match sewed up, but his courageous rival suffered one more lapse, and actually pulled out the game with five straight points. Hunter made sure of the next, however, and it was his set and match at 6—4.

Kynaston Takes Rubber.

Binzen and Kynaston began much as they had done on the previous day, dividing the first two sets at 6—3 and 4—6. They had decided to replay the entire match, but at the end of more than an hour the situation exactly duplicated that which already prevailed. The rubber was hard fought, Binzen opposing his active net attack to the very steady and accurate driving of the Long Islander, and in the end the deep court game proved the better of the two. Binzen missed more and more of his volleys as Kynaston shunted the ball cleverly, and the break in service eventually decided the argument. Kynaston got the crucial advantage at 5—4, and with his own delivery for the finish he succeeded in passing Binzen cleanly at the necessary points, closing the match at 6—4.

The summary:

Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel to Play Raymond-Welte Team Today.

With one exception, play in the women's open tennis tournament at the Greenwich County Club was confined to doubles yesterday, and two rounds of singles will be completed today, including the semi-finals, the entire event coming to an end tomorrow. Yesterday's big match was the season's second meeting of those natural rivals, Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel and Mrs. L. G. Morris and Miss Margaret Grove. They had staged a memorable battle in the finals of the New York State championship at the New York Tennis Club, and on that occasion, as yesterday, the former team won, but by the narrowest of margins. Mrs. Morris and Miss Grove put up another splendid fight, but could not quite stand the pace this time, and faded out in the third set, to lose at love after dividing the first two sessions, 7—5 and 6—4.

The winners are an established combination, with much tournament experience in their favor, and they showed the effect of this habitual teamwork all through the semi-final match. There was seldom any misunderstanding as to position, and in the majority of cases they moved up to the net in a parallel line, similar to the conventional men's formation. Once encamped at the barrier, they cut off the fastest drives with sharply angled volleys, and only the deepest of lobs could force them back to the base line.

Miss Grove and Mrs. Morris, on the other hand, were inclined to divide the court in more feminine fashion, the latter staying at the net to kill whatever she could reach, while her partner roamed about in the background, keeping the ball in play by the steadiest of lobbing and driving. Individually, the losers were impressively strong, but their tactics could not offset the sounder combination play of Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel.

The opening set was a very even proposition, a single break in service deciding the issue. Miss Wagner and Miss Grove did their most brilliant playing in the second set, and covered the court so well and hit the ball so hard that their opponents were able to collect only three games

'DRY' FIGHT HOT IN THE ARGENTINE

WINE GROWERS' PROTEST

Example of the United States Is Cited Both For and Against Pending Prohibition Bill.

BUENOS AIRES, July 8.—In consequence of the recent introduction of a prohibition bill in the Chamber of Deputies and the announcement that the Administration would not support it, the question of prohibition has come to the forefront as a subject of discussion here. The newspapers are filled with editorials and articles on the subject and the Mendoza wine growers are issuing protests and organizing a junket of Deputies to the wine growing district to show the importance of the industry.

The "Secos," meaning drys, and the "Mojados," or wets, are engaged in stern controversy, citing the example of prohibition in the United States in arguments for and against it, and comparing conditions in the two countries.

President Irigoyen is in sympathy with restriction of the liquor traffic, it is understood, but believes that the country is not yet ready for total prohibition, such as the pending bill proposes.

His attitude, it is declared, is to be seen in the terms of the Commercial Travelers' treaty recently agreed to with the United States through Ambassador Stimson, a clause of which excludes from the benefits of the treaty "salesmen from the United States trafficking in alcoholic beverages in Argentina."

This clause, it is learned, was inserted at President Irigoyen's request. While presumably salesmen from the United States will not have such beverages to sell, it is pointed out that the clause establishes a precedent in the case of other nations that may desire to negotiate a similar treaty.

The prohibition agitation in Argentina follows reports of similar agitation in Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile, one of the oddities of the situation being word from Punta Arenas, the world's southernmost city, that the labor element, having been unable to get prohibition legally adopted, has refused to unload alcoholic liquors from ships.

ARGENTINA LOSING GOLD.

$43,820,000 Released to Banks in the United States.

BUENOS AIRES, July 7.—The contraction of Argentine exports to the United States is evidenced by the continued release of gold to North American banks by the Argentine Embassy at Washington. The total amount thus released is now $43,820,000, representing equal deposits by North American interests with the Government of Argentine.

This unfavorable swing of the trade pendulum has reduced the embassy's gold balance to $28,425,000. It is also reflected in the continued quotation of the dollar above par in Buenos Aires.

G. H. SWAYNE'S WILL FILED.

Rug Importer Makes Liberal Provision for Widow and His Brothers.

The will of George B. Swayne, rug importer, of Pelham Manor, N. Y., who died at Coronado Beach, Cal., on June 12 last, was filed here yesterday. It directs that $1,000 be paid immediately to the widow, Delia, who also gets all personal and household effects; gives $125,000 to the widow of his brother, Harry Brown Swayne, who lives in Pelham Manor; $100,000 to another brother, S. Edward, and $25,000 to Julia Swayne Shirks, both of Richmond, Ind.

The residue income is to be paid to the widow during her life, but the trustees may pay over to her $150,000 and the trust shall cease; the balance, if any, to be divided between the two brothers. If the widow chooses the life estate, the $150,000 is to be divided, on her death, between the brothers-in-law, Frank L. Hardcastle of Chicago and Calvin C. Hardcastle of St. Louis, and a sister-in-law, Frances Lillian Hardcastle of St. Louis, Mo., the balance, if any, to go to Swayne's two brothers.

Rancher Buys Walsh Estate.

GREENWICH, Conn., July 8.—The estate of the late Judge Robert R. Jay Walsh, in the Pockridge section here, has been sold to John MacInnis, a Montana rancher who resided at Sound Beach last Summer. The price is said to have been $123,000.

POLICE SUSPECT WANDERER.

CHICAGO, July 8.—A robbery plot in connection with the shooting of the wife of Lieutenant Carl Wanderer and a strange man in the vestibule of the Wanderer home on the night of June 21 was a new theory advanced by the police tonight following their interrogation today of the Lieutenant. They declared they had discovered that Mrs. Wanderer had withdrawn $1,500 from a bank only two days previous to the shooting. The money, they added, was later found in the Wanderer home.

Police officials said that Wanderer had told them that he had planned to re-enter the army, and Police Sergeant John Norton added that he was working on the theory that the Lieutenant might have decided to frame up a robbery of his wife and get the money. The police official said that "it was possible the stranger had been employed by Wanderer to commit the robbery, and that in the darkened vestibule he fired by mistake. Then, after he shot Mrs. Wanderer, her husband was forced to shoot him to cover up the conspiracy."

In another statement today Wanderer, according to the police, admitted that both guns used in the shooting were his property.

Fred Wanderer and John Hoffman, cousin and brother-in-law, respectively, of the Lieutenant, were released today after being questioned by the police, who said they were confident the two men had no connection with the case.

HELD FOR ZITTEL MURDER.

Painter Suspected in Shooting of Delicatessen Dealer.

Detectives Weisenstein, Hurton and Schallow of the Hunters Point Station, Long Island City, arrested Wendell Joseph Pellisier, 45 years old, a painter, who lives in Thorawood, N. Y., last night on suspicion in connection with the murder a week ago of Adam Zittel, proprietor of a delicatessen store at 904 Broadway, Astoria. Zittel was found behind the counter in his store with a bullet wound in the right side of his neck.

Pellisier, who is said to be a follower of circuses and is known as "Wild West Joe" and "Texas Joe," saw Zittel at the circus in Astoria a few weeks ago, the detectives say, and decided to rob him at some future time. Although he denies having been in Astoria the night of the murder, the detectives say they have proof to the contrary.

HE CHECKED IT.

Attendant Said He Took Anything, So Guest Passes Over a Lion.

The checkroom attendants of a large hotel daily experience strange adventures, but the other day at the Hotel Pennsylvania the attendant thought he had come a cropper for sure.

"Anything, Sir," replied the man in charge.

"I would like to check a lion," said the guest placidly.

"All right, Sir," said the attendant with true fortitude, endeavoring to conceal his emotions. "Where is it?"

The man darted away, leaving the confused attendant staring blankly in his direction. But presently, to his great relief, he appeared, followed by two porters bearing a crate in which was securely fastened a young cub, safely guarded by a fine meshed wire netting. With a sigh of relief the attendant performed the checking preliminaries and the cub was intrusted to his care. For twenty-four hours he remained there. Of course, his owner visited him frequently, but the attendant was so proud of his rights as guardian he quite lost sight of his regular working hours, stayed near by and fed him the best rare steak the chef could furnish.

Nor is this the only instance of this kind. Not once, but several times, young lion cubs have been cared for at checkrooms while in transit, and a recent arrival was a wildcat on its way through the city to visit foreign fields. Favorite dogs, fancy cats, pets of all kinds are often checked in this bureau while their masters or mistresses are en route. Theodore Demetral, who is in charge of all the checking stations at the Hotel Pennsylvania, says there is no time in the lobby checking station when there are not some unusual guests.

CHICAGO, July 8.—The estate of Edward Payson Ripley, late President of the Atchinson Topeka and Santa Fe Railway, is valued at $720,000, according to an inventory filed in the probate court today. Personal property valued at $600,000 and the balance in real estate in California and other States is included.

FILL OPPORTUNITY CLASSES

Vacation Schools Enroll 14,000 Children, Bar 4,316.

About 14,000 children have been enrolled in the opportunity classes of the forty-five vacation schools of the Board of Education. Admission has been denied to 4,316 children, for whom there was no room or who were not qualified to attend the classes. The qualified children thus refused numbered 1,238, the unqualified 3,078.

There are 340 opportunity classes this season, an increase of eighty over last Summer. Through reorganization and shifting of classes some of the children who have been denied admission may be cared for. There is opportunity for qualified children to obtain admission with the following borough's new schools: Nos. 5, 50, 64, 80, 142 and 155.

The qualified children are those left back in their classes or who failed to make their grade, bright over-age children recommended by their principals to make an extra grade, children who want to make up 150 days to comply with the Compulsory Education law for attendance and foreign children who need help in English.

TRIES AGAIN TO END LIFE.

Frank Grantelli, an insurance agent of 1,391 Franklin Avenue, the Bronx, who with Mrs. Alma Newman, or Lotus, attempted suicide on Monday at the Hotel Gregorian by drinking iodine, made a second attempt to end his life yesterday. Both he and Mrs. Newman are recovering from the effects of the poison in Bellevue Hospital. According to the police, Grantelli tried to jump from a window of the fourth floor of the hospital.

Grantelli has been morose ever since he was taken to Bellevue and he has been closely watched, so when he dashed for a window several nurses pulled him back into the room.

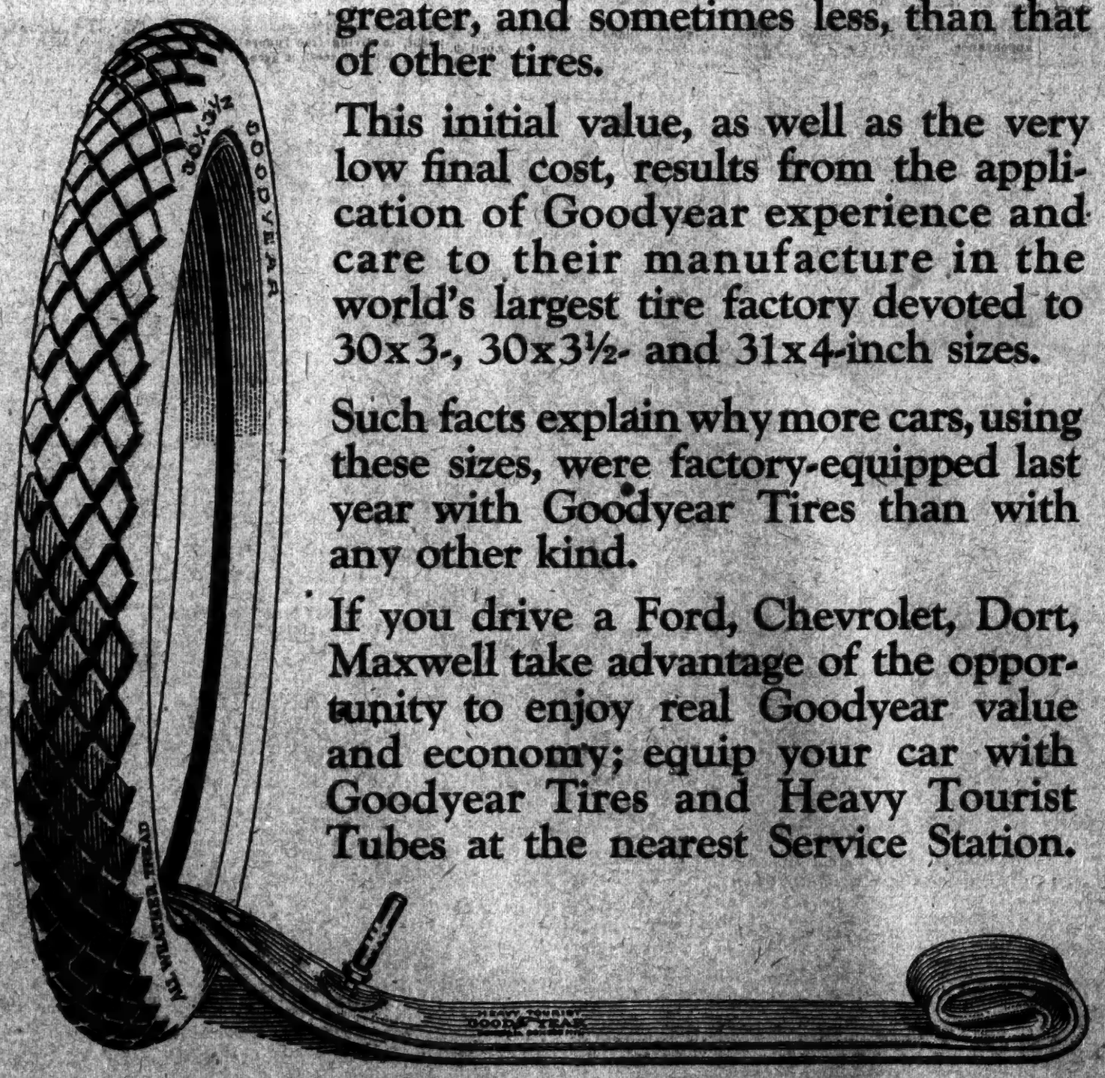
Ride on Goodyear Tires in That Sturdy Small Car of Yours



It surprises certain users of small cars to find that they can obtain Goodyear Tires at a first cost ordinarily not greater, and sometimes less, than that of other tires.

This initial value, as well as the very low final cost, results from the application of Goodyear experience and care to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes.

Such facts explain why more cars, using these sizes, were factory-equipped last year with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

If you drive a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy real Goodyear value and economy; equip your car with Goodyear Tires and Heavy Tourist Tubes at the nearest Service Station.

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size is waterproof bag $4.50

PECIAL MASTER ASSAILED

sked 18,000 Questions, Court Is Told — Hayward Attacks Franchise Claims.

Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, the 80-cent gas hearing yesterday fore Judge Learned Hand, attempted show a connection between the Consolidated Gas Company's charge that the 80 cent rate was confiscatory and e price of gas oil fixed by the Standd Oil Company of New Jersey.

Arguments are being heard on the aptication of the gas company for a nal order confirming the report of pecial Master Abraham S. Gilbert holding the 80-cent rate confiscatory.

Mr. O'Brien said that gas oil, a byroduct of crude oil, was not used until ecently, when the Standard Oil Comany went into the gas business. Gas l, he said, was a highly important facor in the manufacture of gas. He said he control of oil production by the tandard Oil interests made it possible or them to destroy any statute that ight be written fixing a price for gas.

An increase of a cent a gallon for gas l, continued Mr. O'Brien, meant an ncrease of 4 cents per thousand cubic et in the cost of making gas and on o in the same proportion.

Mr. O'Brien then offered evidence to ow that William Rockefeller was a ember of the Executive Committee nd Director of the Consolidated Gas ompany, and that he attended meetngs when contracts for gas oil were ade. The Consolidated Gas Company ays all its gas oil from the Standard il Company of New Jersey.

Alleges Overcharge for Oil.

Mr. O'Brien then called attention to ontracts in the record made between he Standard Oil of New Jersey and he principal gas company of Philadelphia, the Public Service Corporation f New Jersey and the Boston Gas Company, which showed that those companies were buying oil over a definite period at an average of two cents less n the gallon than was paid by the Consolidated Gas Company, on whose board r. Rockefeller sat.

During the early session Judge Hand haracterized as a "mean cheese paring olicy" the attempt of Deputy Attorney eneral Wilbur W. Chambers to prove hat the expense of Gas Logic, the agazine published by the company, hould be deducted from the capital ccount upon which the court must fix reasonable rate. Mr. Chambers said hat a great deal of money was spent n the publication and that it had a irculation of 45,000 copies. He did not hink it right that gas consumers should e charged with the expense of the pubication.

"I won't listen to any such argument," declared Judge Hand. "That s a mean cheese paring policy for a reat municipal corporation to pursue oward a public service utility corporation. I will not consider this matter t all."

Colonel William H. Hayward, of counel for the city, said there could be no doubt that the defendants had not had their day in court. He asked Judge Hand not to conclude from the size of the record, some 1,900 pages of printed matter, that it contained evidence which would justify any court in setting aside the statute.

If the case had been tried before a judge instead of before the Special Master, Colonel Hayward said, it could have been heard in all vital details within two days. He called the record a monument to an inefficiency which exceeded anything he had encountered in twenty-two years in active practice.

Assails Coal Gas Plants.

Colonel Hayward said the two plants for making coal gas should be scrapped. These were the plants in East Fourteenth Street and West Forty-second Street. He declared they were merely carried to augment the valuation of the complainant's properties, so a rate might be shown confiscatory under the statute. He said neither plant was worked to cover a full day's capacity in any one year.

He said the record showed that the complainant had padded the cost accounts for the purposes of this case and that much of the matter they had set up for a basis upon which to fix a rate was improperly in the record or was not properly chargeable as capital account.

Colonel Hayward said that the complainant had set up $7,500,000 as a fair value for the franchises. He said he had always been of the opinion that when the city permitted a corporation to use the street for mains and other purposes the people should not be called upon to pay the company for such use or that such licenses should not figure as capital upon which to regulate a fair rate for services.

Mr. O'Brien said that no matter what the questions of law and fact involved, the whole attitude of the Special Master had been such throughout the entire trial as to render a sending back of the case for a new trial almost imperative. He spoke highly of Mr. Gilbert as a man and friend and expressed his admiration and friendship for the Judge who had named him, but he said the Master had shown throughout that his mind was filled with the high cost of everything today.

The utter disregard for the courts and their decision shown by the Master, said Mr. O'Brien, disclosed his attitude toward the whole case. The record, he said, showed that of the 67,000 questions asked of witnesses, Mr. Gilbert had asked 18,000, showing the aggressive attitude of the Master in the trial. He said Mr. Gilbert had gone outside of his functions as Master to conduct examinations of witnesses, taking them out of the hands of counsel many times.

The Corporation Counsel said that at one time he tried to show by a witness that the company was using a 12-inch pressure at the Fourteenth Street controller house, instead of the 6-inch that was alleged. This, he said, was to show the company was forcing consumers to use more gas. He was not permitted to do this, Mr. O'Brien added. He said the witness was taken out of his hands and he was not able to show that the charts offered by the company were not charts used at the time his experts had tested the pressure at this house. He said that in many instances the examination of witnesses resulted in a debate between the Master and the witness, the latter being impressed with the fact he was discussing a matter with a man sitting as a court.

Mr. O'Brien said Mr. Little, a witness, was examined by the Master regarding what was a reasonable working capital account. He said Mr. Little had been called as an expert to testify to the cost of making and distributing gas and had not made any investigation of the company's affairs that would enable him to give a fair estimate of the working capital needed, yet, in the end, the guess of this witness was used as a basis for working capital.

The argument will be continued today.

GAS LAW HITS OTHER STATES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 8.—Fourteen Eastern Ohio counties would be deprived of natural gas if the Stoptoe act of West Virginia becomes effective, M. B. Daly, President of a Cleveland gas company, testified today before the Supreme Court master in the equity suit of Pennsylvania and Ohio against West Virginia.

Mr. Daly said that counties bounded by Cuyahoga County in the north and Monroe County in the southeast, with 8,046,000 gas consumers and a population of 1,000,000, would find natural gas a thing of the past if the Stoptoe act, which provides that West Virginia consumers shall be supplied before gas is transported from the State, were put into effect.

His company, said Mr. Daly, receives about 80 per cent. of its gas from West Virginia and its consumers are chiefly of the domestic or household class.

Hearings here will end Saturday and taking of testimony will begin at Columbus, Ohio, July 20.

Sir Lomer Gouin Likely to be Succeeded by L. A. Taschereau.

QUEBEC, July 8.—Sir Lomer Gouin, at a meeting of the Provincial Cabinet today, resigned as Premier of Quebec.

While no official announcement has been made, it is understood that the Lieutenant Governor, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, will call on the Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Minister of Public Works, to succeed Sir Lomer.

Sir Lomer Gouin, a Montreal lawyer, had been Premier of the Province of Quebec, Canada, since 1905, succeeding the late Moncre Mercier.

As leader of the Liberal Party he has seen the formerly strong Conservative Party in the Province, which had held power for years, dwindle almost to disappearance. During the last fifteen years the Conservatives have never had more than thirteen members in the Legislature, and have several times had as few as six.

The leading Conservative business men, especially among the English-speaking population, have supported Sir Lomer, considering him a "safe man," as opposed to the French-Canadian Nationalist element which has crept into the old Conservative Party.

He was created a Knight Bachelor in 1908 by King George, then Prince of Wales, during the Champlain tercentenary celebration at Quebec, and was raised to the rank of K. C. M. G. in 1913.

Many Seek Refuge or Flee on Reports of Approaching Conflict.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, July 8.—The Chinese political crisis has become more acute. Yesterday, when it was learned that Tuan Chi-jui had ordered the dispatch of two divisions to force the position on the Peking-Hankow Railway, panic became general in the city. Wealthy Chinese took refuge in foreign hotels and legation quarters, offering any price for rooms. Others crowded trains to Tien-tsin. The general fear was that if Tuan Chi-jui's troops encountered those of Wu Pei-fu the former would be defeated and flee to Peking, looting the city. Today it is reported that Tuan Chi-jui has been persuaded not to move his troops. The most probable reason for the inaction is that Wu Pei-fu's forces are already at Fengtai. Cabinet reconstruction is delayed, as the Anfu Party is influencing members of Parliament to stay away from the House, making a quorum impossible.

Conference at Genoa Adopts Principle After Bitter Fight.

GENOA, July 7.—The International Seamen's conference today adopted by a vote of 48 to 30 an amendment to Article 1 of the Seamen's Convention providing for a strict enforcement of the 48-hour week for seamen.

The vote came after a heated discussion in which the British delegates to the conference declined to vote for Article 1 and submitted a proposal providing for a 48-hour week for engineers and stokers, and a 56-hour week for deck men.

Japanese Protest Repression Here.

HONOLULU, July 8.—A resolution protesting against the anti-Japanese movement in California was passed yesterday at a mass meeting in the Prefecture of Hiroshima, Japan, according to a Tokio cable dispatch to Nippu Jiji. A copy was sent to the American Charge d'Affaires, requesting that he transmit it to Washington. The resolution declares that the economic development of Japanese residents in California is blocked unjustly by the anti-Japanese actions.

Volstead Act Not Clear To Two Federal Officials

BOSTON, July 8.—A United States Commissioner and an Assistant United States District Attorney today declared they did not understand the Volstead act.

Fred Reed of Lawrence, at a hearing before Commissioner William A. Hayes on charges of selling whisky, was asked by Assistant United States Attorney Lewis Goldberg if he had ever heard of the Volstead act. The defendant replied: "Yes, but I don't know what it means," to which the attorney responded that he did not need to be ashamed because "we are all in the same class." The Commissioner, leaning over from the bench, added: "And I'm in that class, too."

Reed, who said he was keeping store for a druggist friend when a man entered and asked for some whisky for a sick relative, was held for the Grand Jury. It developed that the man who bought the liquor was a prohibition enforcement agent.

AMERICAN WOMEN MADE TURKS OBEY

THROUGH LONG FIGHTING

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 7.—How three American women, virtually Turkish prisoners for more than two months, prevented the murder of 500 Armenian orphans and refugees under their care, nursed the Turk wounded, blacked the shoes of hostile Turkish officers, cooked delicacies and ground coffee for fierce Turkish soldiers and played the music box to entertain irresponsible Turkish bandit chiefs is told here by Miss Alice Clark of Evanston, who arrived on Monday from Hadjin after a harrowing experience. Besides Miss Clark, Miss Edith Colds, a missionary of Cleveland; Miss Mary Super, American Red Cross nurse of South Bend, Ind., regularly attached to the Near East Relief at Hadjin; Mr. and Mrs. Eby, Canadians, and Miss Katherine Bredemus of North Berlin, Pa., regular missionaries, occupied the American buildings at Hadjin.

"Although shut off from communication with the outside world since March 9, the Turks did not descend on Hadjin, which is an Armenian village surrounded by mountains, until April 6, when they captured the Near East relief compound in the outskirts, but were unable to take the city. We relied on the United States flag to save us, when the Turk leader demanded to search the place. Miss Colds, who speaks Turkish fluently explained the Americans were neutral. She told him we were depending on Turk honor which trust was emphasized by the fact we had only one gun, informing him further that the compound contained thirty Armenians, mostly children, and but few armed men. Finally the Turks refused to take our word for these facts American honor would be injured.

"This was effective, as were other appeals to Turk gallantry, although later the premises were searched sufficiently several times, the Turks suspecting the existence of underground communication. The Turk attitude was quite hostile at first, but changed from distrust to confidence. The change was due especially to Miss Super's nursing their sick and wounded, saving many lives, and Miss Cold's ability to jolly them along, keeping them always on honor and generally managing them like a primary teacher does her pupils.

Worst Turk Won Over.

"In fact, the Turks tried hard to live up to the high standard Miss Colds set for them, she even winning over as a humble slave one of the evilest, fiercest creatures I have ever seen. The effectiveness of this will be realized when it is considered every one of the chiefs of the seven bands besieguring Hadjin who were all at first hostile toward the United States became friends. Of course, at the beginning they took advantage of our position and made the United States citizens do things like taking machine black their shoes—a job we wished on the Armenians—grind their coffee and cook something for them, but later the Turks were rather our slaves than we theirs.

Armenians Attack.

"The Armenians at Hadjin, through a misguided sense of chivalry, began a drive for the compound on April 9, caught the Turkish guard unaware, took the Armenians to safety, offered the Americans protection, which was refused, and apologized for putting us in a position where we had no friends among either the Turks or Armenians, the latter disapproving our neutrality. Had the Armenians left the orphans in our care we could have protected them indefinitely, but now they will surely suffer privations of food if they don't starve.

"Nearby villagers used daily to sell us vegetables, eggs and dairy products even during the Turk occupation. Although the Armenians had considerable of our supplies which we were glad to give them to feed the orphans, this daily fresh supply was not open to them, and we know the food question in Hadjin was serious even before the sortie.

"Following the withdrawal of the orphans, our compound became a no man's land and was riddled with both Turkish and Armenian bullets. Seven horses and all our cattle were killed by stray shots. The Americans and two Moslem girls, all remaining in our buildings, had a closed cellar for three days, eating old raisins.

"We knew the Turks would suspect us of conniving in the attack, and were not sure but that we would be killed outright, but we intended to attempt to explain the fact that we still were neutral before exposing ourselves directly to fire. We flew an unbleached truce flags, and after a day of ominous stillness the Turks returned and accused us of betraying them and gave us two hours to clear out.

"We had to carry our personal effects while the Turks looted the place, helping themselves to everything we had. An hour after the order that Sunday morning we began our weary walk up a three-mile hill under escort of the bandit whose life Miss Super had saved. As we climbed, shots were fired uncomfortably close to us, the Turks yelling 'Haida, Haida,' which means 'hurry.' The American buildings were in flames. Running beside or up the hill were Turks wearing our clothes and carrying our bags of personal effects, but what they carried was for themselves and not for us.

"The villagers along the road to Tarsus and Samsoun were compelled by the Nationalist soldiers to provide our horses with food. At one place the population was reluctant so the escort burned 6 house.

"The Turks and Armenians equally are to blame for the Cilicia fighting. The Turks intended to fight the French, not the Armenians. The Armenians, however, joined the French and accepted arms to fight the Turks, which started the war of retaliation. At the instigation of the French the Hadjin Armenians raised the French flag.

"We acted as go-betweens, carrying from the Turks peace terms to the Armenians. The Turks promised no Armenians would be molested if the French flag was lowered and Armenians were disarmed as an assurance the Turk villagers in the city would not be raided. The Armenians, however, refused to trust the Turks, for which they, on the other hand, cannot be blamed."

Miss Clark is the daughter of George M. Clark, 1,317 Forest Avenue, Evanston, Ill., who is anxiously awaiting her return to America after an absence of nearly a year and a half. She is a graduate of the University of Chicago and was one of the Directors of the Association House before she sailed for Armenia on Feb. 16, 1919, as a member of the Near East Relief Committee to take charge of an orphanage housing 300 Armenian children at Hadjin. She has cabled her father she is coming home.

Four New Air Mail Routes Will Link New York With Network Over Nation

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The Post Office Department today issued a call for proposals for the operation of four new airplane mail routes under contract as a supplement to the transcontinental air mail service between New York and San Francisco, which will be operated by the department itself.

One of the new routes will be a branch line from Cleveland to Detroit. Another will carry the mail from New York to Chicago, via Pittsburgh, while a third will operate between Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and the fourth route will be from New York City to Atlanta. These lines and the transcontinenti mail route will link New York City with the Pacific Coast, the Great Lakes, the industrial centres of Pennsylvania, the heart of the Middle West and the South. Operation of the five routes will make New York City the greatest air mail centre in the world.

The only one of the five routes to be operated by the Government will be the transcontinental route from New York City, via Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha to San Francisco. Congress has made available an appropriation of a little more than $1,000,000 for this new route. The other four routes to be operated by contract will be the first established by the Government. In making the specification to be complied with by the bidders of these contract routes the Post Office Department has been guided by its own experience in the operation of air mail service during the last two years. The requirements are such as will admit of the employment of any modern type of airplane. Any modern airplane can easily perform the service.

The bids are to be opened on Sept. 10, for the term of one year from Nov. 15. The proposed routes follow:

Route No. 611001—From Cleveland, Ohio, to Detroit, Mich., and back 306 times a year, carrying 1,000 pounds of mail a single trip each way. Air line distance approximately 95 miles.

BERNE, July 8.—The announcement that the Swiss Government has succeeded in raising a loan of 150,000,000 francs in the United States has caused much relief in the confederation.

To show the serious financial state of Switzerland it may be said that by the end of this year the Government will need altogether 408,000,000 francs, of which fully 150,000,000 will be for the State railways. The municipal indebtedness of Berne, Zurich, Basle and Geneva is not less grave than that of the confederation, and these municipalities have not abandoned the hope of raising loans also in the United States.

In Swiss financial circles the country's indebtedness is attributed not solely to conditions created by the war, but to too much socialization and nationalization and leaving too little to private enterprise. From the management of the principal railways, which are heavily in debt, to giving free funerals and caring for children's teeth a great many things in Switzerland are not the confederation's affair and consequently the number of officials has grown greatly. State management, judging by Switzerland's example, does not pay.

DENIES JAPAN IS DISLIKED.

TOKIO, July 7 (Associated Press).—Umeshiro Suzuki, Member of Parliament for Tokio, in an attack on the budget in the House of Representatives today, declared that Japan was disliked by the while world, and asked if the Government had any definite policy to steer it through the present critical period.

Premier Hara, in reply, said he did not think that Japan was disliked by the world at present, but that on the contrary he was inclined to the opinion that Japan was fairly on the way to be regarded as a progressive nation and one of the five great powers.

There were undoubtedly many things about which Japan, as a great nation, must be more watchful, the Premier added, but he wanted to denounce the attitude of the minority which considered that it had the privilege of making indiscriminate attacks.

Two hundred and eighty second-class passengers, and some who are traveling third-class, will be landed here and will be transferred to the steamer New York, which will call here today. The remainder will proceed on board the Celtic, which will leave for America on Friday.

BRANDEIS QUELLS CONFERENCE UPROAR

CLAMOR FOR ADMISSION

"Confusion of Tongues" Said to Have Caused the Disturbance Which Suspended Business.

LONDON, July 8.—An attempt by a number of delegates to force their way into the Zionist conference today, after an attendant had denied them admission, interrupted the conference for a short time and precipitated a struggle which continued for several minutes.

The clamor for admission arose outside the hall, and the Chairman, Louis D. Brandeis, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, suspended the business of the conference until order was restored.

It was later reported that the disturbance arose out of "a confusion of tongues." The delegates, so it was explained, speak various languages.

The conference this afternoon appointed a Policy Committee, consisting of twenty-one members, to frame a political program for observance in Palestine. This was done in accordance with a suggestion by Dr. Weizmann, a member of the Palestine Commission appointed by King George, who urged the necessity of a common method of procedure by all races there to avoid conflicts of faiths and peoples.

The committee is expected to report next Monday. The Colonization, Education and Finance Committees, which also were appointed today, will report at the same time.

Preparations were declared to be progressing for the establishment of a Jewish university in Jerusalem, which "must be built up gradually, although a small beginning must be made in the near future."

It is expected that several years will be required to complete a building necessary to house the research institutes for physics, chemistry, micro-biology and the Hebrew language, which will be the first efforts of the Educational Committee, and the establishment probably will be opened by 1922.

The committee reported that it was undertaking to acquire a Faculty for the University of Jerusalem and for the Haifa Technical College.

A report by J. A. Naiditch of the National Executive Board suggesting that all Jews be taxed 10 per cent. of their annual incomes for the Foundation Fund for Public Works in Palestine resulted in animated discussion. Some of the delegates violently opposed the measure, but the general opinion appeared to be favorable to it.

Mr. Naiditch proposed that the money be collected in proportion to capital, in the case of propertied classes, and in proportion to annual incomes in the case of non-propertied classes. The collections would begin throughout the world simultaneously on an appointed day.

The money collected would be applied to institutions, shelters, immigrant dwellings, medical help and the relief and maintenance of existing schools, as well as the building of new schools, including agricultural, industrial, research and experimental stations.

It was urged that the entire organization of the Zionists for collecting money be devoted solely to these collections, except the Jewish National Fund, and that special committees be appointed immediately with wide authority for making collections.

The Next President and Why

A comprehensive discussion of the factors which led to the nomination of Governor Cox and Senator Harding at the San Francisco and Chicago conventions written by Charles Willis Thompson will appear next Sunday in The New York Times Book Review and Magazine. The importance of the work done by party leaders at both sessions forms an interesting part of the article, which is accompanied by a photograph of "Trails End," Governor Cox's residence.

POPE AND KING SEEK CARE OF ZION SHRINE

ENGLAND IN OPPOSITION

ROME, July 6.—The Quirinal and the Vatican have at last found a subject whereon they can sympathize and work together, namely, in the protection of the holy places in Palestine which the rising flood of Zionism threatens to overwhelm or purloin.

The Corriere de Italia, semi-official organ of the Vatican publishes a history on the question, stating that from the Apostolic times until the middle of the sixteenth century the site of the house where the Lord's Supper was instituted has been accepted as authentic and that Christian worship has been uninterruptedly celebrated there.

"The sacred spot was not destroyed during the fall of Jerusalem under Titus, or in the fighting consequent on the crusades of the Twelfth Century," it says, adding: "Indeed, the crusaders enlarged the building, ornamented with mosaics, representing the religious mysteries which occurred there. The edifice consisted of three wings, the northern dedicated to the 'Sleep of the Holy Mary'; the others consisting of higher and lower buildings, the former believed to be the actual 'upper room' mentioned in the gospels, where the Saviour partook of the Last Supper with His disciples. The lower, a chapel or crypt, was dedicated as the scene of the washing of the apostles' feet and the apparition of the risen Lord.

"When in 1187 Jerusalem fell to Saladin the Church of Zion, as the building was called, did not become a mosque, though it fell into Moslem hands, but during the thirteenth and early years of the fourteenth centuries Christians were admitted to the sanctuary and permitted to celebrate Mass. The building was then much reduced, consisting only of an upper room with a subterranean crypt, which in 1335 was bought from the Soldan of Egypt by the sovereigns of Naples, King Robert and his wife, Queen Sancia, and ceded to the Franciscans of the Minor order for custody and celebration of religious rites, their superior taking the titles of 'Guardian of the Holy Mount of Zion.'

"The Hebrews have always opposed the work of the Franciscans in the Holy Land. During the twelfth century the Jew started an unfounded legend that the lower building remained in Musulman hands. Contemporary documents record the protests of Christendom and reprisals on the part of the Venetian Senate on the European Jews in order to induce the Jews of Palestine to restore the Franciscans' rights.

"In 1221 the Turks annexed the Chapel of the Holy Supper, confiscating the Convent of Zion. The Chapel of the Holy Supper was transformed into a mosque and the entrance for worship of Christians there was sternly forbidden. From that day onward the Franciscans unceasingly protested, imploring the help of the Pope and Kings to induce the Sublime Porte to restore their sanctuary."

The King of Italy, as heir to the rights of the soverigns of Naples, has claimed "Cenacolo" from the International Commission with a view to restoring it to Catholic worship and consigning it to the custody of the Franciscans. Although in April, 1919, the Sultan of Turkey agreed to publish an irade restoring "Cenacolo" to the Kings of Italy, it is now said that England refuses to accede to this arrangement from a consideration of the religious interests of the Hebrews and Mohammedans, although the Jewish idea of the sanctuary being the site of David's tomb has long been proved an unfounded legend and the Mohammedans having shown how little they valued the spot since, in 1898, they ceded the site of the northern part of the Crusades Building to the German Emperor, whereon a grandiose Christian monument was erected.

The Corriere Italia says England can have no reason for this action but a desire to prevent any other influence than her own in Palestine.

Meanwhile communications from Palestine report a dangerously excited state of feeling on the part of the inhabitants of the country, where the Jews number only one in ten of the population and only the schismatic Greeks side with the Jews.

The Jews, however, have possessed themselves of all the public offices. While the English Governor of Jerusalem, Herbert Samuel, is both a Jew and a fervent Zionist.

Revolts have already occurred in Jericho and other districts, while it is believed that the Arabs, once numbering 40,000 men in the Jordan neighborhood, are preparing to rise against Hebrew domination.

The Italians, among all European nations, have the most popularity there, as Rome's position against Zionism, and Italian schools, technical and commercial institutes, are highly valued.

THE HAGUE, July 8.—The existing Hague Court of Arbitration will play an important part in the nomination of judges for the permanent Court of Justice, it was decided today by the Commission of Jurists. The existing permanent Court of Arbitration, which is composed of judges considered by their Governments to be foremost of the world, will nominate candidates from which the Assembly and Council of the League will make the final selection.

The judges of each nation represented on the court will form a national group to select not over six candidates, two of whom must be their own nationals.

A tentative decision was arrived at that the court should be composed of eleven judges and four alternate judges serving a term of nine years.

BRONX 'RENT ANGEL' GETS 5 TO 10 YEARS

HELD ON TO TENANTS' MONEY

Between $30,000 and $40,000 Collected and Not Accounted For—Severe Lecture from Court.

Mrs. Alice J. Cavanaugh, formerly a volunteer worker on the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, was sentenced to serve not less than five and not more than ten years in Auburn State Prison for Women by Judge Louis D. Gibbs in the Bronx County Court yesterday.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Gibbs denounced Mrs. Cavanaugh as a "scheming, cold-blooded, calculating thief." She was convicted of grand larceny on July 6 after a jury deliberated less than half an hour. The specific charge was defrauding tenants of $2,197 after the money was intrusted to her care by them.

When Mrs. Cavanaugh, who was originally termed the "rent angel of the Bronx," appeared in court she was dressed completely in white and was calm throughout the ordeal. She insisted that she was not guilty and asked the court to defer sentence for a week so that "the proper adjustment could be made."

Judge Gibbs refused to postpone sentence. He asked Mrs. Cavanaugh's counsel, Mr. Oppenheim, to make whatever statement he desired and Mr. Oppenheim said his client had directed her energy and most of her time to relieve the condition of thousands of tenants, many of them facing eviction.

The lawyer cited the case of Mrs. Polak, a blind woman for whom Mrs. Cavanaugh paid six months' rent when she was about to be thrown into the street.

"It is very easy to be charitable with other people's money," remarked Judge Gibbs dryly.

"You know, Judge," continued the lawyer. "But the stigma of a conviction on this woman is a serious one. This woman is a grand mother. She is at the low end of her life. I ask you to consider that her daughter—"

Mrs. Cavanaugh touched the attorney on the arm. "Please don't mention her name," she said.

In concluding his plea the attorney said that Mrs. Cavanaugh was not as bad as she is painted and asked that justice be tempered with mercy.

Addressing himself to Mrs. Cavanaugh, Judge Gibbs said:

"I am satisfied personally, and I think the jury was satisfied, that you have been a scheming, cold-blooded, calculating thief for many years. Your specialty until you came to the Bronx appears to have been victimizing priests and nuns who were only too willing to lend a ready ear and turn a sympathetic heart in the direction of stories of distress. Instance after instance was called to my attention whereby with your guilty tongue and your plausible manner you imposed upon some of these good people, and your crowning achievement was worming yourself into the graces and confidence of the people of this country, and even some of the courts, and imposing on them.

"Your attempt to be identified with the Mayor's Committee was merely a design to find a way toward easy money and find an easy road to wealth. I am unable to understand now from the evidence what disposition you made of the large amounts of the money that you have not accounted for. It runs perhaps to $30,000 or $40,000, a tremendous amount of money, and you preyed upon people of this community who were least able to afford it.

"Tenants in distress and family after family were thrown out upon the street. Your case is simply the case of any other criminal. You carried the pitcher to the well once too often and you have reached the end of your criminal career in so far as we are concerned in this county. You are not entitled to any mercy and you won't receive any at my hands."

As sentence was pronounced she gave the first sign of emotion during her ordeal, but she regained control of herself quickly and as she was led away she met the gaze of the spectators in the courtroom unflinchingly and with upraised head.

JERSEY COURT VOIDS RENT-GOUGING LAWS

TRENTON, N. J., July 8.—Holding that it is a manifest perversion of the principles of law to use the power and money of a municipality for the protection of one class of citizens at the expense of the other, Justice Swayze filed an opinion in the Supreme Court today setting aside as null and void three resolutions adopted by Jersey City, under which the city appropriated money to aid dispossessed tenants in suits against landlords.

The principal resolution authorized the Director of Revenue and Finance to investigate all cases where unscrupulous landlords demanded exorbitant rents, resulting in dispossess proceedings against tenants unable to pay the higher rentals, and extending financial aid to such tenants. The other resolutions provided means for putting the first one into effect.

As to the first and second resolutions, Justice Swayze said they were clearly illegal because of the provision of the State Constitution prohibiting municipalities from giving any property or money or loan to any individual, association or corporation. He held that advancement of money by the city to defend private litigants in suits was clearly a violation of the Constitution.

Justice Swayze pointed out that the action taken by the city in adopting the resolutions was under the Walsh Commission Government act, and commented that "the curious notion that the Commission Government act gave authority for an appropriation of this kind hardly requires notice. It is enough to say that any authority of the City Government to protect property certainly cannot include authority to deprive owners of property from beneficial use thereof."

As to the housing situation in general the Justice said:

"No doubt it is desirable that there should be houses for all citizens, but they cannot be provided legally by using without leave or confiscating the property of house owners. Housing can only be provided in the ordinary commercial way or by private charity."

B. R. T. NOW TO SEEK RISE IN CARFARE

CITY TO KEEP UP FIGHT

Corporation Counsel Insists Court of Appeals Ruling Bars Higher Rate on System.

Lindley M. Garrison, receiver for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, announced yesterday that he would make application for fare increases for those companies of the system which the Court of Appeals in its decision on Wednesday held were under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission. These were the lines the franchises of which were granted prior to Jan. 1, 1875, and subsequent to the passage of the Public Service Commission law on July 1, 1907. Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, in reply, declared he would take legal action to prevent the traction lines from getting a higher rate of fare.

Mr. O'Brien said that there was little comfort for the traction interests in the decision, since some of the lines which may come within the ruling of the Court of Appeals had obtained grants and extensions since 1875. Terence Farley, chief counsel for the Public Service Commission, declined to make any comment until he had examined the decision, copies of which were on the way from Albany.

Mr. Garrison's statement follows:

"The Court of Appeals by the various opinions rendered yesterday decided that the Public Service Commission here in New York has jurisdiction to raise or reduce fares on street surface railroads in all cases where the franchises were granted directly by the Legislature, all franchises granted by municipal authorities before Jan. 1, 1875 (date of the Constitutional Amendment), all franchises granted by the municipal authorities after the passage of the Public Service Commission law on Jan. 1, 1907, and certain specific classes of franchises between the date of the Constitutional Amendment (1875) and the date of the Public Service Commission law (1907).

Garrison Reviews Applications.

"As Receiver of three Brooklyn surface line companies I applied to the commission to increase the fares upon the lines of each of said companies.

"The court decides that the Public Service Commission in respect of each of the said companies has jurisdiction of all franchises granted such companies, excepting those granted between 1875 and 1907, which contain an express condition forfeiting the same if more than a fixed five-cent fare is charged.

"It is impossible in the short time now at my disposal to apply the decision of the court to each of the lines and separate the different franchises so that the one class that the court says is not within the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission is picked out and put itself all by itself. A very few of the franchises of these three companies are held to be within the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission.

"I shall immediately comply with the privilege extended to me by the court and present to the Public Service Commission proper applications for action in respect of the franchises that the court holds the Public Service Commission has jurisdiction over.

"Of course, the opinion of the court only deals with surface line companies because it was only applications of surface line companies that were under review. The decisions, therefore, do not directly affect the subway or elevated lines."

Sees Victory for Burr.

Mr. O'Brien reiterated that he considered the decision a sweeping victory for the city and a personal victory for former Corporation Counsel William P. Burr, now a Supreme Court Justice, who initiated the litigation resulting in the decision. Mr. O'Brien's statement follows:

"While it is true that a few of the companies involved in the B. R. T. system may make application to the Public Service Commission for fare increase, it is clear that no feasible, workable increasing of fares upon such isolated or scattered lines as are held by the Court of Appeals to be outside the ruling of the Quinby case can be adopted after the taking of evidence in any order by the Public Service Commission. Indeed, the counsel for the company took the position in the Court of Appeals that it was impractical to form any plan for increasing the fare on some of the lines of the system without extending the increases to the whole system.

"In this connection it is significant that the Court of Appeals in its decision declares that the appeal of Mr. Garrison in these cases was an application for an increase in fare on the entire route. And, says the court, 'as the record shows that it was construed by counsel,' the Court of Appeals affirmed the order of the Appellate Division which dismissed Mr. Garrison's application. It is clear that upon the system no fares can be increased.

"An analysis of the whole situation clearly shows that there is little comfort for the Receiver and manager of the B. R.

A broader list of stocks was dealt in yesterday than in the preceding sessions of the week and prices advanced all around. The action of particular industrial issues indicated a reawakening of so-called "pool" operations, which have been wont to spring up in the last year whenever the supply of call money made possible an increase of speculative activities. Call loans were renewed at 7 per cent. and this quotation stood throughout the day, in contrast with a 9 per cent. renewal rate on Tuesday and 8 per cent. on Wednesday. It was evident in brokerage house comment that this apparent proof of easier money conditions was a real influence in the purchase of stocks. Industrial shares advanced 1 to 2 points or more, trading centring mainly in the petroleum issues and specialties. Rubber, steel and automobile stocks, which had been especially buoyant the day before, were under pressure in the afternoon, reflecting a fair amount of realising sales. Rails were firm, several displaying strength. The scale of business was slightly less than on Wednesday.

The gradual but persistent advance of prices since last Friday has changed the complexion of Wall Street's attitude toward the immediate future of business. Speculation has also gained something of an impetus from study of the political situation. While the main body of day-to-day stock market followers appears to be committed to Republican policies, it is noticeable that the Democratic nominations for the country's highest offices have been received with approval, the reason being an impression that whichever party is a victor in the election, a "business" administration will be assured. Sentiment, rather than new and concrete facts in respect to industry and politics, has been directing the market of late, and proper reservation needs to be made in surveys of the security market for the tight credit situation. It is well known that bankers are constantly examining the trend of credit demands with the purpose of preventing as far as possible a severe strain in the Autumn, and it is certain that a close oversight of stock market funds will be maintained throughout the Summer months.

The Bank of England's reserve position, disclosed in the weekly statement, advanced from 31½ to 12½ per cent., a not unexpected development after the half-yearly settlement. Government borrowings were reduced substantially as well as other loans. Gold holdings increased $14,000,000, but this stood almost in entirety as security for new notes. A feature of the statement of the Bank of France was an increase of 240,400,000 francs in circulation, which acquired emphasis from the fact that outstanding notes had been in process of contraction for several weeks.

In the foreign exchanges the same trend was seen as on Tuesday and Wednesday. Sterling gained three-eighths of a cent to 3.04¾ for checks, while rates on France, Belgium and Italy receded slightly. Holland rates were firm as were Swiss quotations.

SAY GERMANY WILL AID EUROPE'S CURE

BUSINESS SURVEY MADE

Trust Company Officials, Just Returned, Tell of Conditions Abroad —England Recovering Rapidly.

The settlement of the German indemnity problem will do much to restore the economic equilibrium of Europe, according to E. W. Stetson and Harold Stanley, Vice Presidents and members of the Managing Committee of the Guaranty Trust Company, who have just returned from a two months' business trip during which they made a general business survey of Western and Central Europe. Mr. Stanley devoted most of his attention to the Western countries, while Mr. Stetson visited Germany, Austria and the so-called "new countries." Commenting on the situation in the countries visited, Mr. Stanley said:

"One finds much of a reassuring nature in the developments of the last year among the allied countries. England's courageous and farseeing policy, in spite of the serious political problems throughout the British Empire, is bearing obvious results in the restoration of credit and business activity generally. Her firm tax program, her foreign trade policy, and her dogged determination to maintain her position of financial supremacy are all combining to speed the restoration of normal conditions in England.

"France is rapidly getting back on her feet. The French peasant is producing splendid crops, and France expects to raise enough wheat to supply her needs this year. The French industrial worker, in spite of sporadic strikes, is producing effectively, and the whole labor situation, in fact, seems to be much improved in the last few months. France still needs fuel and raw materials, and has great financial problems to solve, but definite plans can be made to meet these problems as soon as the German indemnity is fixed and there seems no doubt that France will work out its future successfully.

"Belgium has already moved back well toward the normal. Conditions there have been fully described, and it seems pretty generally understood that Belgium, perhaps least of all of the nations of Europe, presents a problem.

"An atmosphere of uncertainty and hesitation prevails throughout Germany and Middle Europe, and it is very difficult to forecast even the immediate future for these nations, old or new. Germany has at last come to realize that she lost the war and is making desperate efforts to overcome the handicap that it has put upon her. I did not meet any optimists in Germany, but I am confident that a good deal of the sombreness in the dark picture which the Germans paint can be attributed to their efforts to temper the Allied terms of settlement.

"Throughout Middle Europe there is much confusion, and it is difficult to make definite statements about conditions. Austria is, for the present at least, crushed, and there is little semblance of industrial or productive activity.

"In Czechoslovakia the idealists and dreamers who were largely instrumental in working out the political readjustments now realise that the practical problems presented by such readjustments are much more difficult and that the making of a nation is a long process. Agricultural production there is good and the financial institutions are in a relatively good condition, but the work of unifying and organizing the life of this new nation, of course, presents a difficult task and it is too soon to make any predictions concerning it.

"From Jugoslavia, Greece, Hungary, and Roumania various reports are heard, but in all these countries the problems of reconstruction are dominant and their solutions have not yet been worked out.

STOCK TAX RETURNS ORDER.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Capital stock tax returns must be filed on or before July 31, 1920, with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, through the various collection districts, by every corporation doing business in the United States. The estimated number of such returns is 325,000.

With a view to the prompt collection of the capital stock tax and for the convenience of the taxpayer as well as the Government the bureau today suggested that corporations submit checks with the returns for the amount of tax due. This method, it was explained, is appealing to corporations, as it lessens liability to penalty.

NEW TREASURY NOTE SALE.

Secretary Houston Opens Books for a $200,000,000 Subscription.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Two new issues of Treasury certificates of indebtedness, with a combined value of $200,000,000, were offered for subscription tonight by Secretary Houston.

Both issues will bear interest at 5¾ per cent. from July 15. One series is payable Jan. 15, 1921; the other on March 15, 1921.

Certificates of both series will be exempt except from estate or inheritance, graduated additional income, excess profits and war profits taxes.

General Motors Reports Profits.

The General Motors Corporation in its report to the New York Stock Exchange on application to list new shares, shows net profits for the first quarter of the year of $28,051,166. After Federal taxes there was a balance of $19,754,516, of which the General Motors' proportion was $19,693,405. After debenture dividends and preferred dividends there was a balance of $18,500,133 available for the common stock.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

"Progressive Improvement."

Call money opened and renewed at 7 per cent. yesterday and thereafter did not deviate from that rate throughout the session. There was "progressive improvement" in the renewal rate, which was 1 per cent. below that of Wednesday and 2 per cent. below that of Tuesday, even if the day's minimum was unchanged from the minimum of the day before. The Government's withdrawal of $11,400,000, together with whatever other demands there were, did not cause a single ripple in the money market and those who have been talking and predicting cheap, or at least cheaper, money, pointed with pride and viewed with anything but alarm.

Floor Gossip.

If one cared to believe all he hears on the floor of the Stock Exchange, or, more properly, in the territory immediately adjacent to the floor, he would have some queer notions running in his head. Yesterday there was a deeply profound discussion of the proposal to have the Reserve banks issue circulating notes against Liberty bonds, and even against railroad bonds. How, why and when this was to be done was not part of the discussion, but some of the brokers were certain it would eventuate very soon. One who for telegraphing the glad news to his out-of-town correspondents and another wanted to congratulate the Federal Reserve Board. But another, who appears to be on nodding terms with the Federal Reserve act and some other banking laws, put a damper on the enthusiasm by explaining that it couldn't be. Liberty bonds, through the medium of rediscounts and with the addition of the legal quota of gold, already stand behind Federal Reserve notes, but railroad bonds? Not under present regulations.

That Argentine Gold.

News dispatches from Washington stated that additional releases of gold on deposit to the account of the Argentine Embassy had been made, making the total thus far released $45,820,000 and leaving a balance still available of $28,422,000. For the benefit of those who still believe these releases are the equivalent of an import of gold, the Federal Reserve agent at the local Reserve Bank, in his June bulletin, had the following to say: "Since May 1 Argentina has avoided exporting gold to this country by drawing against her deposits with the Federal Reserve Bank. Her importers have deposited with their Government gold that would otherwise have had to be shipped to settle indebtedness, and the Government has arranged for such settlements by drawing against her credit balance here to the extent of about $22,000,000 (subsequently increased to $43,820,000). As far as the Federal Reserve Bank was concerned the transaction amounted simply to a transfer of credit on its books and no gold was withdrawn, inasmuch as the Argentine funds held by the Federal Reserve Bank have been in the form of a despoit credit and not of 'ear-marked gold.' This should end the controversy.

More Bond Offerings.

If the Armour & Co. financing turns out the success its first day promises to be, there doubtless will be some new issues put on the market next week, for with the market demonstrating its ability to absorb $85,000,000 ($60,000,000 Armour & Co. and $25,000,000 Switzerland loan) of new issues in a single week, bankers and their clients will be apt to take full advantage of the situation for additional requirements. The Swiss loan has, as a matter of fact, been a greater success than any one expected. It to be yesterday there were reports of the bonds selling as high as 100¾, and the first day's response to the Armour offering was said to be extremely gratifying to the banking syndicate which attended to the flotation.

The Bank of England.

The Bank of England made a further gain in its gold holdings in the last week, the increase being £2,853,000, making the total amount held £120,737,000, a new high water mark, displacing the former high record of £118,270,000 on March 18 last. Note circulation, however, also increased this last week by £2,850,000, but a substantial decrease in the public and private deposit items allowed the ratio of reserves to increase from 31½ per cent. a week ago to nearly 12¼ per cent. this week.

Market Displays Strength.

The course of yesterday's stock market gave further evidence that a growing public participation is being drawn into the trading. The volume was again large, as compared with that of some two weeks ago, and prices turned upward from the opening. This appeared to furnish conclusive evidence that the setback of the late afterpoon of the preceding day had been brought about largely by profit taking. The position of the market has been such for stocks that there is no endeavor to run up more than a few points profit before reaping the reward. This reflects a doubt as to the ability of the market to move forward for any great length of time. On the other hand, the profit taking thus far has been well absorbed. Brokerage letters, while more bullish in tone, nevertheless advocate caution.

Rails More Active.

Railroad stocks were active yesterday, the total shares traded in amounting to 171,260 as compared with a total volume of business of 774,371 shares. This is heavier percentage than has prevailed in some time. The buying was not confined to the standard dividend paying rails but was dispersed throughout the group, the low priced issues, which are usually inactive brightening up considerably. The extension of trading to these issues gave a broad tone to the market. It not infrequently happens that with the first forward movement in prices after a long period of decline or little change, the inactive rails advance, the recoveries being relatively larger than in the higher priced issues.

Houston Oil.

Houston Oil, which made its debut on the Exchange last week, came forward with a decided price advance yesterday, the gain amounting to thirteen points. On previous holding days since the listing, Houston Oil has been quite with almost no business reported. The volume of trading was not large yesterday as trading is usually measured but the turnover was sufficient to bring about a big gain. It would appear that the stock is not in anything like plentiful supply at current levels.

Another Rumor.

Wherever it originated no one was prepared to tell, but there was one rumor circulating on the floor of the Exchange yesterday to the effect that a hitherto large market operator who has been out of the limelight of stock market operations for some time, had returned to the fold and was buying heavily throughout the general list. Sentimental reasons were attributed to this buying. It being asserted that this particular trader was interested in converting the impression that the rise in prices which has taken place since the Democratic nomination for the Presidency was a reflection of confidence in the financial district over the naming of Governor Cox. The rumor had wide circulation, but was taken with the proverbial grain of salt. As a matter of fact on the floor of the Exchange Harding is a heavy favorite for the Presidential race, the opinion prevailing that he will have a walkover.

Oil Equipment Scarce.

The intensive campaign of oil development is taxing the manufacturing capacities of the firms which handle oil well equipment to the utmost, and even now there is a shortage of this sort of material. These concerns are looking forward to a large increase in their business during the next several years, and are already planning to meet the situation. The Lasoy Manufacturing Company, which is one of the largest manufacturers in this line, with plants at Chattanooga, Tenn., and Houston, Texas, it is understood will shortly come into the market to do some financing to care for this prospective expansion.

The Advantages of Long Term Bonds

These securities offer the following inducements: Well protected principal, liberal income, and, as conditions return to normal, appreciation in market value.

Commodity Prices and Security Values

Under the conditions facing us securities of conservatively capitalized public utility companies are among the most desirable investments. Gross earnings of such companies are relatively stable, and with no large inventories to mark down every addition to the purchasing power of the dollar will increase the margin of profit through reduction of operating expenses.

SHIPPERS PROTEST COAL CAR PRIORITY

WILLARD DEFENDS ORDER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Building material producers from all over the United States appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission today to protest against the recent order by the commission restricting the use of open top freight cars to coal transportation. The building material men maintained that their business was being badly damaged by the order, inasmuch as they were unable to move their products.

Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, appeared as Chairman of the Special Committee of the Association of Railway Executives and explained the car shortage situation from the standpoint of the railroad men. He said he considered it necessary to order priority of service in favor of certain commodities for some time.

The building material men argued that instead of coal being moved to Western points and New England, as had been intended by the use of the order an open top cars, it was being sent abroad. A. G. Gutheim of the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association, said that during the first five months of 1919 1,706,000 tons had been exported and in the corresponding period of this year 5,726,000 tons had been sent abroad.

Building Interests Are Heard.

Today representatives of the stone crushers, sand and gravel industry, contractors, State and Federal Highway Commissions, retail lumber men and other interests allied in producing building materials made short statements. Representatives of the coal operators will appear tomorrow.

In his statement today Mr. Willard said:

"It is undoubtedly true that, under existing conditions, the railroads as a whole are not able to furnish, or at least they are not furnishing, the transportation necessary to meet the present requirements of the commerce of the United States, and this situation presents a serious and difficult problem which must be dealt with, but, like all other problems, it can be dealt with more effectively if first of all there is a full understanding of the entire situation."

Mr. Willard pointed out that when the Government took over the railroads on Jan. 1, 1918, the carriers taken over owned approximately 2,260,000 freight cars, of which 5.7 per cent. were reported as in bad order and unfit for service. During the twenty-six months of Federal control the Government purchased roundly 100,000 freight cars and 2,000 locomotives or somewhat less than the railroads had been in the habit of buying during each year.

At the termination of Federal control the same railroads reported ownership of about 103,000 more cars than at the beginning of Federal control, of which 6.7 per cent. were reported as in bad order. During the period of Federal control the Government did not retire as many cars as the companies had been in the habit of retiring in the past, and the general condition of the freight cars, when considered as carriers of freight, was perceptibly lower at the end of Federal control than at the beginning, and much lower even than was indicated by the condition reports.

Thousands of Cars Are Unfit.

"Thousands of cars are running today and reported currently as in good order—meaning that they are safe to run—while at the same time they are unfit to perform the service for which they were designed," said Mr. Willard.

"At the beginning of Federal control, Mr. Willard asserted, the records showed that each of the railroads had upon the average about 44 per cent. of its own cars upon its own line, while at the end of Federal control each railroad had only about 22 per cent. of its own cars on its own line. Because of the relatively small number of cars on the home lines, it has been impossible since Federal control to find out definitely the actual condition of the cars on the individual railroads, but the last monthly report shows 7.4 per cent. of bad order cars, or an increase of 50,000 cars unfit for use and actually out of service more than at the beginning of Federal control.

"It should ordinarily be possible to keep the number of bad order cars below 4 per cent., and if that condition could be brought about it would result in immediately making effective more than 75,000 cars. This is one of the first and most important problems confronting the carriers at the present time, he said.

"It is commonly believed, Mr. Willard said, that the abolition of piece work during Federal control had had the effect of reducing the efficiency of the car repair force by at least 30 per cent., and certain limitations and restrictions contained in the national agreements entered into between the Director General and the different crafts employed in the railroad service have also cut down the capacity of the railroads to repair cars.

However, many thousands of freight cars are now being repaired by outside concerns, he said, at a considerably lower cost than if the same work were done by the railroads themselves.

Need Six Months for Repairs.

"Notwithstanding every effort that can be made, it will probably be six months of a year before it will be possible to get the existing equipment of the railroads in as good and serviceable condition as it was at the beginning of Federal control or as it ought to be under existing circumstances," the witness asserted.

Undoubtedly much can be done by the railroad itself to increase the average mileage per day of freight cars, Mr. Willard said, pointing out that while the average for the past ten years was 26.9 miles, during 1919 it was reduced to 24.6 and in 1919 to 23.1. Mr. Willard also showed that these figures do not indicate such a slow movement of cars as they appear to because a car is actually at the service of the shipper or receiver about 33 per cent. of the time.

"Assuming that the carriers will do all that they can to put the existing equipment in serviceable condition as soon as possible, and assuming that the carriers and the shippers together will do everything they can in co-operation to make the best possible use of the equipment available," Mr. Willard said, "there will still be a shortage of cars for some months to come and until such time as the railroads can provide by purchase or construction the number of cars and engines necessary to take care of the peak load."

Referring to the recent strikes, Mr. Willard said that judging from reports, probably at no time have more than 30,000, perhaps 50,000, employes been out of service, a relatively small percentage of the total number employed.

"It may be fairly hoped that when the award is announced by the Labor Board the difficulties that have confronted the railroads in the matter of car delays will disappear and if thereafter the yard men and other employes, having had their pay and working conditions satisfactorily adjusted, will then take hold and work as well as American railroad men know how to work when they want to, I am hopeful that the railroads will be able to make the existing equipment by virtue of increased mileage much more efficient and in that way gradually bring about a normal condition."

RUSH CONSTRUCTION WORK.

$16,000,000 Projects Under Way by Fred J. Levy & Co.

The work of excavating the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-second Street, on which a twenty-two-story building is to be erected by the Liggett, Winchester, Ley Corporation at a cost of about $5,000,000, is progressing rapidly.

The ground has been completely cleaned of the old building foundations and a depth of thirty feet has been reached in several spots. About 600 cubic yards of rock are being removed daily by a large force of men, and it is expected that the preliminary foundation work will begin in a couple of weeks. The plot is to be excavated to a depth of about thirty-three feet below the street.

The structure will extend through the block, having a frontage of 147.3 feet on Forty-second Street, 134 feet on Madison Avenue and 40 feet on Forty-third Street. It will be 200 feet from block to block and contain over 2,000,000 cubic feet. The exterior will be of red brick with limestone trimmings, and two banks of fourteen elevators will afford service to the upper floors.

A large amount of space in the building has already been contracted for and several big leases are pending. The Fred T. Ley Company, which is doing the work, is also erecting an apartment house at 200 Park Avenue and the Fisk Building at Fifty-seventh Street and Broadway. The three jobs which are now under way are estimated to cost $16,000,000.

JULY COTTON FALLS AND LIST FOLLOWS

UNLOADING FOLLOWS BREAK

Weakness Due to Overbought Technical Condition—Crop and Weather News Good.

The cotton market moved downward yesterday in two stages. In the morning there was a general break, which carried the list down about 40 points for the far months and nearly 90 points for July, and in the afternoon, after there had been a period of dullness, during which the market hardly moved at all, prices fell 20 points or so further, and July got down to 38.50, for a net loss of 117 points for the day. There was a slight recovery before the close, but it regained not more than 10 points at most for the general list, despite a recovery of 50 points in the spot month.

Weakness in July was the feature of the day. This probably was due to an overbought technical condition, brought about by the widespread belief that the shorts and straddle sellers would be forced to pay very high prices for what they require. The ring and many of the offices have been buying July for the last ten days or two weeks in anticipation of a squeeze and a run-in in the spot option, and when the month began to waver yesterday there was a good deal of unloading.

Crop and weather news continued entirely favorable, and in the trade there was the general belief that the crop has improved measurably during the first half of the June 25-July 25 period, and that it will continue to do so, with the result that already there is gossip around that the July 25 report, which will be published Aug. 2, will show a substantial gain over the good showing of June 25.

In the afternoon publication of official reports of stocks of cotton and cotton goods, and of loans on these commodities in Japan, which showed both the stocks and the loans to be increasing rapidly, added to the bearishness and supplied additional ammunition to the traders who were operating for the decline. Exports were again small, amounting to only 1,564 bales for the day.

Convertible on and after January 3, 1921, and prior to maturity or redemption date, par for par, into Armour and Company Class "A" Common Stock, to be presently authorized, which under present laws will be exempt from personal property taxes in the State of Illinois

Further information in regard to this issue is given in a letter of Mr. J. Ogden Armour, President of Armour and Company, from which we summarize as follows:

The proceeds as derived from the sale of this issue will be devoted to the reduction of current liabilities, thereby not increasing present indebtedness.

These Notes will be the direct obligations of Armour and Company. Total assets as of November 1, 1919 (the close of the Company's fiscal year), were $490,809,643.31. There is no lien of any kind upon the property of the Company, except its First Closed Mortgage (dated June 1, 1909, due June 1, 1939) for $50,000,000, which is a lien upon approximately $57,500,000 out of a total of $147,811,885.52 Capital Assets. The Net Current Assets of the Company, after giving effect to the proceeds of the sale of $60,000,000 of these Notes, will be approximately $230,000,000.

During the four years ended November 1, 1919, the average annual earnings of the Company were $26,139,245 available for interest charges after Federal taxes. These figures do not include any earnings of South American subsidiaries, which for the same period averaged approximately $6,003,500 per annum and which latter sum has been retained by the subsidiaries to finance their development, and for this reason has not been taken on the books of Armour and Company. These combined earnings would total $32,142,745. The average annual interest charges (including interest on Bonds, but excluding interest on Debentures heretofore converted into Preferred Stock) have been approximately $7,540,000. During this period over $85,761,000 net earnings have been retained in the business, after paying cash dividends amounting to $8,993,000.

The Indenture under which these Notes are to be issued will provide, among other things, that no additional mortgage shall be placed on the properties and assets of the Company, which does not equally secure these Notes by the lien of such mortgage.

The Indenture will furthermore contain a covenant that current assets of the Company shall be maintained in an aggregate amount equal to at least one and one-half times all current liabilities, including these Notes, any mortgage indebtedness (except purchase money mortgages) maturing prior to the maturity of these Notes, and any other issue of notes or debentures at any time outstanding.

The Company proposes to reclassify its capital stock and authorize $150,000,000 Class "A" Common Stock, of which $50,000,000 will be immediately issued, and $150,000,000 Class "B" Common Stock, all to be immediately issued. Of the unissued Class "A" Stock, $60,000,000 will be reserved to be available for exchange for the 7% Ten-Year Convertible Gold Notes. Safety or High Rate of Interest?

IT is an old investment maxim that safety and conservative interest rate go together, and that an exorbitant yield is a caution signal. This is particularly a time to remember this fact.

An unduly high rate of interest on an investment often distracts the investor's attention from other qualities not so desirable. With his eyes fixed on yield rather than on security, the investor sometimes fails to notice that there is no convincing evidence offered of sure and prompt payment of principal and interest.

The return of your capital unimpaired when due, together with prompt payment of interest, is of more importance than a promise of an unusual net return on your investment.

Our July Investment Guide lists a great variety of sound first mortgage serial bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan amounting to $40,000,000 and yielding the safe and conservative interest rate of 6%.

In addition to 6%, with 4% Federal Income Tax paid, these bonds yield satisfaction and peace of mind. Their prompt payment in cash on the day due is assured by the rigid provisions of the Straus Plan. Call or write today for our July Guide, and specify

Thirty-eight Years Without Loss to Any Investor

An offering in blocks of three shares {2 Shares Preferred / 1 Share Common} for $300

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Akron

In addition to doing approximately 20% of the automobile tire business of the country, this company also is a very large producer of mechanical rubber goods, of shoe soles and rubber heels.

Every working day the Goodyear factories turn out almost six miles of belting, plus five tons of packing, plus eleven miles of hose.

The sales of these mechanical rubber goods are now running 80% higher than during the same period of last year, due to a constantly increasing industrial and agricultural demand.

This year's production of Neolin Soles will total 4,000,000 pairs, an increase of 40% above last year's output; 191 shoe manufacturers will place Neolin Soles on some 600 different styles and types of shoes.

Compared with 5,500,000 pairs of rubber heels produced the year before last and 12,000,000 pairs last year, the factory is now working on a yearly basis of 38,000,000 pairs—an increase of 215%.

In twelve years both the business of the company and its total net assets have increased more than one hundred times; earnings on outstanding common, after preferred dividends, averaged 54% per annum.

Cash dividends of 12% annually have been paid on the common stock and stock dividends have been paid as follows: 1908, 100%; 1909, 100%; 1911, 100%; 1913, 20%; 1915, 100%; 1920, 150%.

We are offering the unsold portion of $20,000,000 7% Cumulative Preferred and of $10,000,000 Common Stock in blocks of three shares (2 Preferred and 1 Common) at $300 per block.

The above offering will cease with the close of business July 15, 1920, unless sooner terminated by the sale of this issue.

President Seger Reports Observations on Inspection Trip.

Charles B. Seger, President of the United States Rubber Company, has returned from an inspection trip of the corporation's plants, bringing an optimistic impression of the condition of general business.

"In going through Massachusetts, Connecticut, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, New York and parts of Canada," he said yesterday, "everywhere I met with the same situation that has existed for many months. Practically every industrial plant seems oversold and to be endeavoring to speed up production. In practically no line of industry did I see any marked tendency toward contraction. The transportation situation that has existed throughout the country for some time, due in some cases to strikes and in others to shortages of cars and power, has thrown a heavy load upon the rubber company. Automobile truck transportation is being called on more and more for both short and long distance freight work. I believe that when normal conditions are restored that the automobile truck is going to prove of increased importance in helping solve the country's freight transportation problem."

INCOME TAXES IN EXCESS OF 50%

In my opinion, were unjust, unlawful, against the fundamental law and not justified even by the war. Until recently the government promptly refunded money taken unjustly or unlawfully. It will again be able to meet just claims, and I am sure the government will refund collections in excess of 50%. I am prepared to file claims for the refund. If you have paid in excess of 50%, mail me a memorandum of the total income and taxes paid for each year.

MOVING PICTURES POPULAR IN JAPAN

A Home-Made Film That Has Had a Long Run Still Attracts Crowds.

DEPICTS HEROIC TEACHERS

All Patrons at Picture Halls Must Remove Footwear and Check Them at Entrance.

While the foreign films are usually the best and most elaborate, strange to say the most popular film at the present time is of Japanese origin, and was made in Tokio. It has run in certain cinema halls in Japan for more than a year and still draws a crowd.

All any cinema hall has to do to fill its seats is to advertise this local film and the crowd will be on hand. Seeing the unprecedented success of the film many enterprising dealers have made picture post cards of parts thereof and made fortunes selling them. Others of a musical turn of mind have made songs on the film and made money from the ditties.

The reel is called the "Schoolmaster Matsumoto," and records the dauntless bravery of a school teacher. The reel begins on the grounds of Nagata Common School in Tokio, near Akasaka Mitsuké in Kojimachi ward, the school children playing all about. One of the lads drops a fountain pen, which another picks up and slyly pockets, but he is seen by another pupil, who informs a teacher of the incident.

The teacher summons the three lads concerned, and relating the circumstances asks the guilty one to confess; but the lad denies it. The teacher, remonstrating with the boy, asks him whether he has forgotten the story of George Washington and the hatchet which the boys had recently had as a school lesson. At this point in the film comes the cherry tree and Washington with his hatchet, a scene that can be made very real in Japan, the land of cherry trees. There stands little George with his hatchet, all as real as life. Washington's father is there likewise, as a necessary part of the picture.

The scene changes back to the school grounds with children all about, the three boys still before their teacher. The boy that's lost the pen approaches the teacher and says that since it was a very cheap pen there is no great loss. The boy who picked up the pen still denies it; and the teacher lets them all go, very differently from a western teacher, who doubtless would have had the thief searched. But the Japanese teacher only blames himself, saying that the fault is his as his teaching on morals had been defective. Thus soliloquizing and blaming himself, he takes a stick and beats his hand until it bleeds. This sort of sacrifice is considered very brave and noble in Japan, like the patriots who sign petitions in their own blood or cut off fingers in protest against some wrong. All seeing the action of the teacher now know that something great must be expected of him in future.

It must be remembered that the drama is based to some extent on real life. On a certain day in November, 1919, the pupils of the Nagata School held an excursion to Imokichi Park, a suburb of Tokio. A boy who was playing about fell into a stream, whereupon another boy who saw the accident raised an outcry.

The teacher, Matsumoto, ran to the place and immediately jumped in after the lad. The latter was saved by clinging to a bunch of long grass, but the teacher was drowned. This part of the story is true. The scene of rescuing the body in the film is as pathetic as a real life. The story of the film is based on this tragic bit of realism. On the day when the film was taken the children of the Nagata School were given a holiday and the reel was made from real life. The family of the dead teacher were all present to see the taking of the film.

Naturally, at all moving-picture halls where the reel is shown school children are present en masse; and all of them are deeply moved by the noble action of Schoolmaster Matsumoto. Often the whole audience bursts into tears during the more pathetic portion of the play. Japanese children are particularly susceptible to emotion in regard to such circumstances as the reel depicts so vividly and well.

The film is approved as revealing in a unique way the virtue known as yamato damashii, the Japanese spirit. The noble deed aroused the generosity of the general public and a monument is to be erected to the honor of so noble a man as Schoolmaster Matsumoto.

One striking difference between moving-picture halls in Japan and those in other countries is that the entire audience removes its footwear before entering the hall and checks them at the entrance as Americans check their hats and coats.

One of the most unique occupations in Japan is that of taking care of footwear. Japanese footwear, to begin with, is very different from that used in the West.

Such things as geta, setta and zori are unknown in other lands, and when entering the house these must be taken off. If it be a theatre or assembly room where a large crowd gathers, hundreds and even thousands of geta must be left outside, and some one must take care of them.

The custodians of footwear at public buildings and other places of resort have to receive the goods left in their charge and give a check for them, giving the guest a pair of slippers to wear indoors; and then when the guest returns to take back the slippers and give him his own geta in return, when he must return the check.

The latter is usually a bit of wood with a number corresponding to that on the tag attached to the footwear. These custodians of footwear are known as geso-kuban, one of the oldest of occupations and found only in Japan.

At story-telling halls, moving-picture halls and so on, these custodians are to be found. There is an office in most cities in Japan where getaban or geso-kuban for an evening can be had. If any one is having a reception and desires thus to accommodate his guests. In large office buildings nowadays shoes are worn but in all houses with matting floors shoes are not allowed. In libraries, for example, this is usually the case, and men to take care of the getrons must be always on hand.

At the Uyeno library these men have to take care of the footwear of some 3,000 people a day. As big department stores like Mitsukoshi such men are always found ready to check one's footwear; and such men require peculiar skill and tact.

CELEBRATE FIRST PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB

WAS NAMED IN HIS HONOR

One hundred years ago, on July 14, 1820, the first ascent was made of Pike's Peak, and the centennial anniversary of that event will be appropriately celebrated on July 14 at Colorado Springs. Since the first ascent it is estimated that more than 2,000,000 persons have enjoyed the wonderful view from its summit. The great proportion of these mountain climbers have had every modern comfort in reaching the top, using the cog-wheel railroad, which was constructed in 1891, and, since 1916, when the eighteen-mile automobile road was completed, hundreds of motor cars have climbed the peak with ease.

Pike's Peak, while not the loftiest in the Rockies, is the most celebrated, not only by reason of its present-day accessibility, but also for its height and beauty. The top is 14,108 feet above sea level. It is named in honor of General Zebulun Montgomery Pike, an intrepid explorer, who made several expeditions under the auspices of the Government into the Far Western region. It was in November, 1806, that he first saw this "Grand Peak" of the Rockies and he has generally been credited as being its discoverer.

Claims have been advanced in favor of discoveries by one or two earlier explorers, but General Pike was the first to definitely locate the mountain and make it prominently known throughout the country. A few years later, in April, 1813, General Pike was killed, during the War of 1812, in the attack on and capture of York, Canada.

The first man to ascend the peak was Dr. Edwin James, the botanist and geologist in the expedition under Major Stephen Harriman Long, sent out by the Government to make detailed surveys of portions of the Far West. Dr. James was only 23 years old at the time. Starting from Engineer Cantonment, near the present Council Bluffs, where the party had spent the Winter since its start from St. Louis the preceding year, the explorers reached the site of what is now Colorado City on July 12, 1820, having come in sight of Pike's Peak two days before. General Pike himself never went very close to the mountain and his version that it was impossible of ascent seems to have been accepted as correct by many of the early explorers into that little known region. Dr. James determined to make a practical proof of its accessibility, and on July 13 he started with four men determined to reach the top if possible. The late Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, a member of several Government expeditions in the West, gives the following graphic description of the first ascent in his book, "Breaking the Wilderness":

"About noon they came to the Boiling Spring, the present well-known soda spring of Manitou, which gives name to the stream of which it forms a source. This beautiful spring was of great interest to James and they had their lunch beside it. Through its crystal waters could be seen on the bottom the offerings of beads and trinkets by the Indians.

"The night of the 13th James and his companions spent in a most uncomfortable place, and on the next morning started early with the hope of making the round journey before dark. About noon, the timber line, 11,720 feet, was reached and by 4 o'clock they stood on the mighty summit, 14,108 feet above the sea and 9,000 feet above the plains, and could see on the east the prairie ocean melting into the limitless distance, while on the other hand spread away a broad chaos of peaks, canyons, valleys, fading into the depths of the unknown wilderness. Vast clouds of grasshoppers were flying over the peak, sometimes so dense as almost to obscure the light.

"After half an hour on the majestic summit, now reached by a prosaic railway, the descent began. Leading their course, they failed to reach the camp of the previous night and were forced to sleep out with no food or shelter or comfort of any kind; not, after all, so awful as it sounds. As soon as light came in the morning they continued and reached their camp, only to find it ablaze; the fire had spread and consumed everything except a few scraps of food, on which they greedily breakfasted."

Major Long, says Mr. Dellenbaugh, rightly named the peak after James, and he says that it should have retained the name of the first man to surmount it.

"Geological names are sometimes singularly acquired," he adds, "and so the peak which Pike saw from some miles away, and was not the first to see, received his name without his intention or that of any one else. Indeed, no one can tell just how it came to be called Pike, except that it simply grew and Fremont finally put it on record."

Dr. James compiled an interesting history of the expedition from the notes of Major Long and other members of the party. In addition to his abilities as a geologist and botanist he was a physician, and was for several years a surgeon in the United States Army. He also studied Indian languages, and in 1823 published a translation of the New Testament in the Ojibway dialect. The latter part of his life was spent at Burlington, Iowa, where he died in 1861.

In 1878 a bridle path was built to the summit of Pike's Peak which eased many of the arduous difficulties of the climb of former years, and in 1890 a wagon road was built. Then came the cog-wheel railroad, followed four years ago by the splendid motor roadway twenty feet wide with some of its curves having a width of thirty feet. It required two years to construct and cost approximately $300,000. On Aug. 2, 1919, an airplane, piloted by Alexander Landrum of Colorado Springs, made a successful flight over the peak. On the top the Government maintains a Weather Bureau station.

Retail Store Exonerated.

Alfred Fanti, representing among others stores the Culbertson, Grpte, Rankin Company of Spokane, Washington, yesterday told of word received from that concern reporting a verdict of "not guilty" on the profiteering charges preferred last February by the Government. The indictment was the first one made against a store under the Lever act. There were seventy counts in the Government's case. In a telegram to Mr. Fanti, F. R. Culbertson of the company stated that all charges had been dismissed and full exoneration obtained.

Double the Time Required.

Various agents are at work in the wholesale dry goods market to facilitate the shipment of merchandise. According to a leading buyer, more than double the time is now required to get goods to the stores than was formerly necessary. This delay in receiving goods is a special hardship now when it is so necessary for the retailers to turn their merchandise into money as quickly as possible. By having so much money tied up in goods in transit the stores are finding it exceedingly difficult to finance further operations since the banks have tightened up on loans.

Buyers Are Shopping.

Those who predicted that buyers would limit their operations on first trips to this market to "shopping" are finding their judgment verified. It is quite commonly believed that the retail men will make two or three trips before completing their fall orders. The chief reason for this policy is that prices have not yet reached those levels where the stores consider they can operate to advantage. As the season wears on further declines created by a desire to get business are expected to be shown in many lines that are now considered too high. Evidence of this, it is said, is already appearing. One of the best known makers of women's underwear, hosiery and gloves was yesterday reported to have revised prices 20 per cent.

Eyes on Money Market.

The money market is being studied more carefully by those who formerly recognized its influence on business conditions and by many amateurs in finance who have been compelled lately to realize that influence. In the former class the opinion prevails that long rates have another advance to make before the peak is reached. Then, as the charges ease off a bit, it is thought that many operations both in buying and manufacturing, now impossible to finance, will be freed. A sidelight furnished by one retail store representative was that, as much opposed as present money rates are to the hoarding of merchandise and speculation, there is a counterbalancing effect on legitimate production and selling. His opinion was that high interest and tight credit are preventing many factors from exercising a freedom of operation that would cause a decided tumble in prices.

To Hold an Apparel Show.

Complete Fall lines of more than 100 leading local manufacturers are to be displayed at a women's wear exhibition which is to be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Pennsylvania, beginning on Aug. 2 and continuing to and including Aug. 7. Hundreds of articles of women's, misses' and children's wearing apparel will be shown, as well as general lines of millinery, laces, embroideries, handkerchiefs, leather goods, umbrellas, &c. The kinds of merchandise shown will vary in value from the so-called popular-priced lines to the really high-priced things which, the sponsors of the show assert, will save the buyer the trouble of going about from place to place for his merchandise. The show will be held under the direction of the Women's Wear Exhibitors' Corporation.

Underwear Prices Higher.

Prices named on "athletic" underwear for delivery to the jobbing trade for the Spring, 1921, season show advances ranging from 25 to 30 per cent. over those quoted on similar merchandise last year for the Spring season. One well-known line of fancy union suits for men is priced at $15 a dozen for 1921, with silk-striped union suits offered by the same house at $24 a dozen. Another prominent concern is quoting $10.50 a dozen on "pajama check" union suits, and $6.75 a dozen each on separate shirts and drawers of the same material. Pongee union suits are priced by this house at $15.00 a dozen, with $10 a dozen asked for separate shirts and drawers of pongee.

Japanese Raw Silks Recover.

The Yokohama raw silk market, which suffered a relapse during the suspension of business over the holidays, has recovered quite sharply. Quotations on the Bourse for Sinshiu No. 1, which on July 5 dropped to 1,800 yen for July shipment and 1,450 yen for November, closed the following day at 1,946 and 1,500 yen, respectively. Moderate buying for European account is reported by cables received here by H. L. Gwalter & Co. Visible supplies at Yokohama are placed at about 18,000 bales, of which 12,000 are said to be unfit for export. Canton is quiet, but firm, and prices well above the parity of the local market. Shanghai is firm, with quotations higher than those asked for Japanese silks of similar quality. French and Swiss manufacturers are doing the only buying at Milan. The local market has not yet recovered from the sunsetting effects of the holiday, and prices are irregular.

Vulture Feathers Are Favored.

Among the newer trimmings that are taking high rank for Fall in the local millinery trade are vulture feathers. Bronzed, they are seen both in long, graceful sweeps and in short plumes combined with ostrich in contrasting colors. Vulture is also shown in steel and silver effects. Combined with burnt ostrich and made into bands, as well as twisted so that the long strands resemble seaweed, it is again in evidence. Another new and smart trimming for Fall hats is iridescent coque, made into short plumes.

COMES FROM INDIA FOR HIS FARM TOOLS

TRAVELS TO GET POINTERS

In order to further the agricultural interests of his country, Captain George A. C. Hearsey of Station Polis, Kalan, in the Province of Oudh, India, has come to this country to make a survey of conditions here and to obtain equipment for the cultivation of his lands. Captain Hearsey, who was only demobilized in May, owns estates comprising fifteen square miles of land and has several thousand tenants. He is very ambitious to develop these extensive lands, and in order to carry out his plans he will use the members of his recently demobilized company as the nucleus of a land army and will establish experiment stations where practical demonstrations will be given with all modern equipment.

Captain Hearsey left the Hotel Pennsylvania, where he has been stopping since his arrival here last week, for Washington, to confer with the Department of Agriculture for several days before leaving for the South and West, his itinerary including visits to the best known agricultural stations in the country. He will make a special study of the agricultural development in those sections of the United States where the latitude, rainfall and climatic conditions approach those of his own country, to study their crops, bacteria, &c., with a view to promoting more varied crops and securing greater agricultural efficiency throughout India.

Alfalfa and Cotton Attract Him.

He is particularly interested in cotton and alfalfa and will visit the Far West, where irrigation has proven so successful. His trip will include Atlanta, New Orleans, Houston, El Paso, Dallas and the Roosevelt Valley. When he returns he will take back with him all kinds of insecticides, cultures of bacteria, seeds, &c., and a full unit of the equipment of a plow company, as well as many other agricultural implements. He plans to spend considerable time in the implement factories at Moline, Ill., so that he can make a study of the machinery used in the vast farming districts of this country. He will don overalls and familiarize himself with the machinery to the last nut and bolt so that he will be able to supervise any repair work that may be necessary in far-off India.

"I have come to this country with a message of welcome to Americans and their products," said Captain Hearsey. "India is striving for more American goods, automobiles, agricultural implements and building equipment. For so many years the country has imported under such difficulties that now there is a dearth of everything. We have suffered as from the war and now, just as in so many other countries, we look to the United States to help us rehabilitate and restore our commerce to the pre-war days.

"When I began to consider the development of my lands I thought, of course, of America as the model for my plan, as America is the most progressive country. I could get any pointers I needed and could obtain information and material necessary to make my estates a model demonstration farm and agricultural experiment station. I will utilize the services of my recently demobilized men to spread the information and act as instructors in the most modern and scientific agricultural development.

"Very little land in India is developed as it should be, but this is largely because our supply of materials is so limited. The people are very eager to improve and conditions are very favorable now. Food is plentiful and with increased shipping and renewed intercourse with other countries we are bound to advance rapidly."

Captain Hearsey comes of a long line of titled Britishers with the added interest of a royal Indian ancestor, his grandfather having married the adopted daughter of the Emperor Shah Mehan, the Great Mogul. He was educated in England to become a lawyer, but took a distike to this profession and refused to pursue it. Following a difference with his family over this matter his allowance was stopped and he went to the Argentine to start on his own. Things did not go very well for him there and he served in varying capacities from attendant of the races to a full-fledged cowboy. But he turned his misfortune into gain and became greatly interested in agriculture. He saw its possibilities and determined that when he came into his own in India he would go deeper into the subject and would make his lands the model of modern farming.

He was still in the Argentine when the war began, but returned at once and enlisted in the Second Lancers, Gardner's Horse, and the first months of the war saw him in the field. Five generations of his family have held King's commissions in English regiments. Fifteen thousand natives have passed through his hands for training. He was particularly popular with his company as has been proven by the fact that they are to remain with him to a man to carry out his plan to improve India and help to make her future brighter.

He will make every possible improvement upon his land—installing electrical machinery, power plants, and the most up-to-date farming implements—but he does not intend to stop there, for he says that when he has his present plan of experimental stations under way he will then turn his attention toward establishing a practical school of agriculture. If all goes as anticipated, it may be possible in a few years to open a large canning and freezing plant for beef in connection with the agricultural station. In this case he will specialize in meat especially prepared for Mohammedans.

He says he hopes to make the development of the country a political issue and that he will be able to press it, for his brother is resigning his place in Parliament to him and he will occupy that place of vantage. He declares himself to be in a most perplexing position, for he is a Socialist, but by inheritance he is a feudal landlord. In such a position, he says his only course is to improve conditions as best he can and thereby add to the comforts and progress of his countrymen.

Captain Hearsey's shooting preserve is one of the most famous in India and has been visited by the Viceroy of India, Duke of Connaught, and other members of the British royal family when they visited the country. It is adjacent to the territory of Nepal, which is noted for its wild animals, and as there are no boundaries these animals wander over his lands. He extends a welcome to all sportsmen to visit this preserve and to zoologists to add to their collection of wild animals.

Gray Goods More Active.

Though the day's business was far from snappy, there was more activity visible in the local gray goods market yesterday than for some time. A good part of the business done was in print-cloths for forward deliveries, sales of this kind including September-October lots of 38½-inch 64-60s at 15 cents and August-September 38½-inch 60-48s at 17 cents. Spot sales of the 64-60s were made by first hands at 20½ cents, while "quick" 39-inch 72-76s brought 24½ cents. Practically nothing was done in the fine-yarn goods, sheetings or specialties, although, in the last named there was some business done in 39-inch 68-76, 4.50-yard three-leaf twills at 19½ cents. These goods had not been traded in for some time, and the sales put through yesterday were made at considerable reductions from the last previous ones.

To MR. FRANK HEDLEY,

President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co.

No matter what they say about the Interborough, every one concedes that you are the greatest Rapid Transit operator in the world.

Interborough lines run up the east side and the west side of the Bronx nearly to the City Line, but the line operating through the centre of the borough stops at Pelham Parkway.

The New York, Westchester and Boston R. R. taps your lines and runs straight up the middle of the north Bronx. Why not lease trackage rights over it to the City Line and save the public the cost of a new extension and yet serve the public as well as if you had such an extension?

HARMON ON THE HUDSON

100 TRAINS DAILY

One of the great travellers of our country says "that Westchester County is the most wonderful country he has ever seen, and Harmon is the garden spot of Westchester County." Margaret Mayo, famous author, living at Harmon, says: "I have travelled the world over, but have found peace only at HARMON."

Are you going to pay this exorbitant rent the rest of your lives, or are you going to let us show you how we have provided homes for thousands upon thousands in the past thirty years?

Owing to the extreme rush of business last Sunday we beg to apologize to the many interested couples who visited Harmon and caught us short of representatives to properly show them around. We have since increased our staff fourfold, to avoid a repitition, and to insure every one with a capable representative, to make their visit next Sunday a pleasant one.

Be our guests on Saturday, Sunday or Monday next and see for yourself. Our building plan is so perfected that any one can build at Harmon who is able to pay rent for an apartment in New York fit to live in.

Call at office for free transportation to visit HARMON—any day. Special train Saturday at 2 P. M. Sunday morning, 11:30, city time. Lunch will be served at the Clubhouse.

5 EVENING SCHOOLS ON 100 NIGHTS' BASIS

BUDGET MAKING RESUMED

Twenty-four Additional Open Air Classes and Three More for Tubercular Pupils Allowed.

Consideration of the school budget for 1921 was continued yesterday by the Board of Education. Morris B. Siegel, Director of Evening and Summer Schools, gave his estimates for evening high schools. He asked that eight of the schools be put on the 100 nights' basis. The board allowed five. He requested that the deficit of $50,000 this year be made good. This was allowed. The board granted all the supervisors he asked for the evening schools except the supervisor of domestic arts.

Associate Superintendent Andrew W. Edson said that there were at present 348 open air classes. He wanted thirty-six more classes. Dr. Jacob Sobel, of the Board of Health, said that these classes were much needed as they did a great deal in restoring pupils suffering from malnutrition to good health. Children of the rich as well as those of the poor, he explained, were victims of malnutrition. The children ought to have two glasses of milk each day in the classes, he said. It was decided to allow Dr. Edson twenty-four new classes.

There are now, Dr. Edson said, twenty-six classes for tuberculosis children. His request for three more of these classes was allowed.

Classes for the blind, he said, now number ten, and for sight conservation nineteen. He wanted one more class for the blind and eight for sight conservation. It was necessary, he explained, to send guards to schools with the blind children. Much good had been done in the sight conservation classes in preventing blindness, he said.

Miss Elisabeth Farrell spoke on behalf of the ungraded classes. She said there were 260 such classes and that more were badly needed. She said that 2,500 children were awaiting examination as mental defectives. The difficulty, she explained, was in finding rooms for these children. Many principals, she said, did not want to allow ungraded classes in their schools. Each of these classes averages about fifteen pupils.

The conference will be continued today.

Classes to be Established in Sixty City Schools.

Mrs. Louis Reed Welsmiller, Deputy Commissioner of Markets, announced yesterday that classes soon will be established in sixty city schools to teach housewives the art of canning without sugar or preservatives.

Mrs. Welsmiller said that she will be aided in the establishing of the classes by Miss Schemerhorn, head of the Domestic Science Department of the Department of Education, and after the project is well under way arrangements will be made for courses in cooking.

She said that Commissioner O'Malley had obtained a quantity of sugar at twenty-three and a half cents a pound, as well as a quantity of fruits and vegetables, which will be distributed to the classes in canning in the sixty schools for demonstration purposes. The classes in cooking, she said, will be formed in the middle of August. Arrangements have been made, she said, with practically all the large hotels in the city for demonstrations in cooking and the economical making of palatable dishes.

"When the cooking classes are formed," said Mrs. Welsmiller, "groups of housewives will be taken to the kitchens of the hotels, where the chefs will explain the process of preparing food at the least expense. We also have arranged to take the women through the markets to teach them the rudiments of scientific marketing."

The sugar shortage will be relieved considerably within the next few days through the arrival in this port yesterday of 2,400 tons of refined Japanese sugar on the steamship Sophie Frankel.

AMERICAN FLAG TRAMPLED.

British Sailors Tear It from Staff in Bermuda and Are Fined.

The American flag was torn from its staff above the entrance of the American House in Hamilton, Bermuda, on July 4, and trampled upon by A. Jewell and J. J. Howe, sailors on the British ship Agincourt. Their act was characterized as a wanton insult by Magistrate John E. McGeehan, who returned yesterday from Bermuda on the Fort Hamilton. He and other Americans, he said, had caused the arrest of the offenders, and he intended to protest to the State Department in the hope that an apology may be demanded.

Americans guests at the American House, he said, were on the veranda singing patriotic songs when the three sailors came along. One of them saw the flag, climbed up to where it hung, tore it down and the three trampled it. A general fight was threatening when eight policemen arrived. The case was explained, but they refused to act, saying they were without jurisdiction.

The matter was taken up with Albert W. Swaine, the American Consul, and as a result of his protest to the Admiralty the three seamen were arrested. In court there was no reference to the insult to the flag and the defendants were fined upon their plea of guilty to a disorderly conduct charge.

ILLITERACY BARS RICH PAIR.

Ellis Island Holds Mexican Parents on Visit to Schoolgirl Daughter.

The literacy test is a barrier between Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rishwan, well-to-do residents of Mexico, and a visit to their 15-year-old daughter, who is attending a school in Massachusetts. The parents are now held at Ellis Island subject to deportation to Mexico, because, as the father said, they have been too busy looking after their worldly affairs to learn to read.

Mr. and Mrs. Rishwan came from Yucatan on the Ward Line steamship Monterey on June 30 on their way to Worcester, Mass., where their daughter Sadie is at school. Mr. Rishwan was asked by the immigration inspectors if he could read. "A little Spanish," he replied, but when a text in Spanish was handed to him he could not read it. He said he was born in Syria and as evidence of his prosperity deposited $4,000 in American money with the cashier at Ellis Island.

Every Summer for twelve years Mr. Rishwan has been coming to this country to purchase goods for his store, but never was his right to enter the country questioned. Both have been here once since the literacy test was established, but they were admitted without challenge.

The daughter will come from school to visit her parents.

Passengers Held at Quarantine.

The 1,310 steerage passengers who arrived yesterday on the Fabre line steamship Madonna were sent to Hoffman Island for observation and the vessel detained at quarantine by the port health officer because of typhus, now epidemic in some parts of Europe. The thirty-seven cabin passengers were taken off in a tugboat and landed at the foot of Thirty-first Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. There is no known illness on board.

TO FIGHT JERSEY BUS SUITS

Seven reasons why thirty-six suits brought by the Public Service Railway Company against thirty-six Jitney bus operators in New Jersey should be dismissed were set forth in notice served yesterday on counsel for the traction company by Morrit Lane, representing the bus owners. Mr. Lane announced that he would move on July 19, in Jersey City, before Vice Chancellor Griffin to dismiss the suits. They seek to restrain the buses from competing with the trolley company and are intended to serve as precedents to abolish New Jersey bus lines.

Among the reasons cited by Mr. Lane for the dismissal of the suits are that the complaints are indefinite and uncertain in that it cannot be determined from them wherein the trolley company claims the exclusive right of operating conveyances for hire; that the particular ordinances and franchises under which this right is claimed are not set forth; that the apparent purpose of the bills is to perpetuate an alleged right of the trolley company to the exclusive privilege of operating conveyances for hire, and that the trolley company does not show that it has complied with the provisions of ordinances and franchises under which it operates.

TO BUILD NEW PIER.

The Sinking Fund Commission adopted resolutions yesterday approving of the institution of condemnation proceedings by the Corporation Counsel for the acquisition of property between piers old No. 2 and old No. 3, North River, in order to build new pier No. 2.

Controller Craig opposed the resolutions, declaring that action at this time would be inadvisable for financial reasons. President LaGuardia of the Board of Aldermen declared that allowing $5,000,000 for the purchase of the property, $9,000,000 would still remain in the debt limit, and he added, "there is nothing more important than the development of the Port of New York."

Mr. LaGuardia caused a scurry for German dictionaries when he declared that the Controller's opposition to the plan was a "symptom of embildung mania." The Aldermanic President believes that he has now evened up accounts for a remark of the Controller last week that Mr. LaGuardia's remarks were "blackguardia."

Grand Union Bids Open Till July 15

Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney yesterday notified all those who have made offers for the purchase of the Grand Union Hotel site at Forty-second Street and Park Avenue and other city owned properties in Centre and William and Beekman Streets that bids would be received until noon July 15. The properties were offered at public auction on May 26, but no bids were received. Since that time Commissioner Delaney has been authorized to sell the Grand Union site for the largest sum offered above $2,900,000.
